Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon, the Blackton stars, will play the leading roles, which are said to be admirably suited to their capabilities. William R. Dunn, the new Blackton studio manager, who appeared in "Respectable by Proxy," Mr. Blackton's last picture, will be seen as the heavy. Eddie Dunn and Gus Alexander, the Blackton comedians, who scored so heavily in "The Moonlight Trail," will furnish the comedy. Margaret Barry, Eric Mayne and Louis Dean, all of whom are well known to both the public and exhibitors, complete the cast.

The company has returned from Oyster Bay where several scenes were taken in which the Commodore's motor boats were used. J. Stuart, Jr., his father's assistant and the company's location expert, is scouting for locations now.

Ocean Trip—Starting on what is believed to be a record cruise for a craft of it's kind, the auxiliary yacht "Uncas", owned by John Bowers, the popular Goldwyn player, will clear New York on November 15th., bound for a 7,500 mile trip to Florida, Cuba, Jamaica, Yacatan, Honduras, Guatemala, Costa Rica, through the Panama Canal and up the west coast to California. P. H. L. Wilson of Barboa, California, better known as "Doc" Wilson, sportsman, is to skipper the craft and plans to spend at least ten weeks fishing, hunting and sightseeing along both coasts of North and Central America. "Doc" Wilson recently returned from a fishing and hunting trip along the west coast of Mexico with Rex Beach, Goldwyn author. The "Uncas", a seventy-five foot auxilliary schooner of 30 tons burden, is now being fitted out for this remarkable trip at the Nyack Shipbuilding Yards, New York, where every possible convenience for the party is being installed. The "Uncas" was formerly owned by George W. Titcomb, a Brooklyn lawyer. Mr. Bowers plans to enter the "Uncas" in the California—Honolulu schooner race next year and hopes to cut down the 18 day record now established.

Collaboration to an unusual degree is being provided by Henry Kolker and Arthur D. Ripley on the Brentwood production now under way entitled "THE THIRD GENERATION". The story is by Mr. Kolker and upon his being commissioned to produce it, Mr. Kolker made the condition that Arthur D. Ripley be his collaborator on continuity and assistant in direction and cutting. Starting many years ago Mr. Ripley laid the foundation of sound screen experience under A. E. Smith of Vitagraph following under Herbert Brennon, J. Gordon Edwards and George D. Baker. As film editor he has made the most of his oportunity to study cause and effect in pictures and in story building. In Mahlon Hamilton, Edward Cecil, Jack Pratt, Josef Swickard, Betty Blythe and Betty Brice the chief players in the cast, Mr. Kolker has rich material to work with and his enthusiasm is high.

WILL ROGERS

IN

ALMOST A HUSBAND

By Opie Read Directed By Clarence G. Badger

Rogerisms

Will Rogers walked right through the set of his own picture, "Almost a Husband," where Director Clarence G. Badger was conducting a "movie" wedding. "Well, wasn't that the prize boner?'" said Rogers. I ruined that marriage quicker'n Reno, didn't I?"

This new Goldwyn play is perhaps the most original that has ever been shown on the screen. There are two reasons for this. One is its plot; the other is its star. Will Rogers in "Almost a Husband" will please you as you have never been pleased before. He is refreshing. He is convincing. He is really funny—you'll say so.

Rogerisms

When Goldwyn decided to make fewer and better pictures, that's when they got me. I guess it'll be a pretty good picture, at that—an awfully good cast—and the star isn't in it much. By taking out some of my action and putting in a title, they helped it a lot!

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

Butler May Produce in San Francisco—Reports keep coming that David Butler is soon to have his own company and to star in his own pictures under the direction of his father, Fred J. Butler. Although no definite statement is being given out, it is thought that the San Francisco trip made by both parties concerned must have resulted favorably; at any rate, it will not be a surprise to hear the announcement that the Butler Producing company will soon begin activities in the Golden Gate city.

Anita Stewart Starting—With the arrival of Anita Stewart from New York, production starts at once on the "Fighting Shepherdess," much of which will be filmed on Catalina Island and the sheep range country of California. Large flocks of sheep and goats are needed in the pastoral parts of the picture. Edward Jose has arrived from New York to direct the picture, the script of which has been prepared by Frank Dazy.

Long Beach Studio Busy—The Bull's Eye Film Corporation has sent another of its companies to Long Beach, and in the future Sid Smith Serial, under the direction of Harry Haskins, will have its episodes filmed on the old Balboa stages. All of this is keeping Nat Spitzer, Bull's Eye Studio Manager, fairly busy running back and forth between Hollywood and the southern city.

St. John Company in New Location—Al St. John is now making his comedies at the Bull's Eye Studio in Hollywood, after moving in from Glendale last week.

The Herman Film Corporation has moved to Santa Monica and will be found at 2435 Wilshire Blvd. They are casting a new picture.

Ethel Clayton began work Friday under the direction of Walter Edwards upon "Young Mrs. Winthrop." Harrison Ford has the leading male role.

William C. deMille will shortly begin work on his first special production for Paramount-Artcraft, which will be a screen version of Edward Peples' stage play, "The Prince Chap," with Thomas Meighan and an all-star cast. This W. C. deMille special will mark the beginning of an important series of productions to be directed by the well-known dramatist and film expert.

George H. Melford is back in San Francisco obtaining collision scenes for "The Sea Wolf" on the bay. This will practically complete the Paramount-Artcraft version of Jack London's famous story, which promises to be one of the most successful in many months.

Denison Clift Directs Fox Feature—Denison Clift, Fox scenario editor, has realized his ambition—that of directing his own feature. Clift wrote a problem play for Madlaine Traverse, entitled "What Would You Do?" and also put it in scenario form. Fox has made him a director for the producing of this feature.

Arthur H. Rosson has finished cutting and titling of "The Splendid Hazard," and has left the Mayflower Corporation to become a director with the Louis B. Mayer studios. He will direct Mildred Harris Chaplin's second First National attraction under her contract with Mayer. The Mayer staff of directors now includes Joseph Henabery, Edward Jose and Arthur H. Rosson.

Alkire to Start Soon—Preparations are nearly completed for the early production of Joseph Bennett's next feature for the Alkire Co., "Excuse My Dust," the script of which manager of productions Philip H. White is revising for the star's use.

Metro Buys "Fine Feathers"—A drama by Eugene Walter, "Fine Feathers," is Metro's newest purchase for the famous thirty-six Screen Classic productions of 1919-20. May Allison will have the part played in the original production by Lolita Robertson, Maxwell Karger said yesterday.

Edward Everett Horton, leading man at the Majestic theater, has developed a "mania" for saving pennies. It started the day he opened his Los Angeles engagement and found a 1913 one-cent piece in his dressing room. Ever since he has been tossing all the coppers into a little box. Now he has close to a thousand. He claims they bring him luck.

Henry Arthur Jones, author of Judah," which has been purchased by Metro for May Allison, wrote thirty-seven successful plays in thirty-five years.

Rollens to N. Y.—Jack Rollens will go to New York soon to accept a part in the new William arnum picture. Jack is now finishing a part with Lasky.

Frank Keenan threatens a surprise with his next release.

Bradbury Company Started—General Manager Cyrus J. Williams, of the Mitchell Lewis Corp., says he has a surprise up his sleeve in a new style of feature picture presentation. His new producing unit, Bradbury Productions, is now engaged in filming the novelty under the working title of "Hollyhocks," an original story written by Robert North Bradbury, with a cast including Ed Hearn and Patricia Palmer.

The Zellners, Arthur and Lois, have been commissioned by Maxwell Karger to adapt "Judah," the drama by Henry Arthur Jones, as the next Screen Classic production for May Allison, following "The Walk-Offs."

Start Eddie Polo Serial—Work was started this week at Universal on the new eighteen-episode serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," starring Eddie Polo. The film will be six months in the making. The cast includes Sam Polo, brother of Eddie; Thelma Percy, leading woman; Ray Ripley, heavy; Ruth Royce, Laura Oakley and Texas Watts. Jacques Jaccard is directing.

Keenan on Location—Eliot Howe, directing his third Frank Keenan picture, is at Bear Valley in the Sierras, which he will use as a base of operations while filming scenes of the production in "new country" toward Baldwin Lake.

Earle Productions—Ferdinand Pinney Earle, the artist, is now deep in preparation of an art-drama. Unique and entirely original conceptions for a combination of Mr. Earle's paintings with regular motion picture production are being evolved. Several weeks have been spent in adapting a well known story for this film fantasy. Although the camera work will begin next week no actual cast will be used until for about three months. This will give an idea of the importance of the painting, in this drama, for which the artist is so well known. Photography is handled by B. Shamray and Harry Lichtig is now selecting the all-star cast.

Tourneur's "Woman""—Following a short season of stage productions at the Auditorium, W. H. Clune will present, beginning Monday evening, December 1st, Maurice Tourneur's production "Woman" from the scenario by Charles Whittaker. "Woman" as produced for the screen under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, carries its theme through a prologue, an epilogue and five episodes, employing six sets of principals, and separate supporting casts for each episode.

Al Santell had just finished an exasperating scene in a new comedy at Universal in which the animals didn't seem to have much respect for a director's authority. "What part do you play?" inquired a visitor standing near the set. "I'm in the picture," replied Santell, "I'm the director." "Director," remarked the stranger, "I thought you were yell leader." Now visitors are barred on Santell's sets.

How Old Is Edgar?—"How old is Anne?" is out of date. The question now is "How old is Edgar?" It has become a burning one since the announcement went forth from the Goldwyn offices the other day that Booth Tarkington was to write twelve two-reel comedies for the company, to be known as the Edgar Comedies. Of course that indicated that the chief character was to be a male, presumably young—but how young, or putting it another way, how old? That is what we'd like to know.

Neilan on Location—Marshall Neilan and his all-star cast of players left this morning for Bear Valley in the northern part of the state where the exteriors of "The River's End" will be filmed. The picture which is an adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's latest novel of the Canadian northwest calls for many snow scenes. A little later the company will proceed to the Saskatchewan river of Canada where the final scenes of the picture will be made. Besides Mr. Neilan the party included Lewis Stone, Marjorie Daw, Jane Novak, J. Barney Sherry, Togo Yamimato, and Tom Bates who form the cast; Tom Held, assistant director, Henry Cronjager and Dave Kissen, cameramen; Bill Lenihan and Foster Leonard, assistant cameramen; George Elder, property man, and Charles Smith, Mr. Neilan's secretary. While Mr. Neilan is in the north, Director Victor Heerman will supervise the making of inserts and titles for the current production as well as preparing for the next picture.

Two Guesses—"Guilio Visconte," alias Rudolph Valentino, in Dorothy Phillips' latest "Ambition" made a very dangerous fall from a theater box. All this for his unrequited love. Now Carl Lammele asks Valentino, "Are you an actor or an acrobat?" Perhaps both, we say. Valentino's latest acrobatic stunt was to take a plunge in the matrimonial sea with the beautiful Jean Acker, the little star of "Checkers" and one of the leading ladies in "Lombardi Ltd." Mr. Valentino will have two weeks' vacation and honeymoon before he begins his next picture under the banners of the First National by whom he was engaged to play the second lead in an all-star cast headed by the Katherine MacDonald. The young Mrs. Valentino is still under contract with Metro till the middle of December.

MOTION PICTURE PEOPLE'S CHURCH ASSURED

With the assured co-operation, both financially and morally of approximately ninety per cent of the studios in Hollywood, the Reverend Neal Dodd, rector of the Church of Saint Mary of the Angels, informs us that the motion picture peoples Church is no longer an indefinite project, but that it is a concrete thing, which will be visible within the next few months.

It is something over a year since Father Dodd conceived the idea of a Church for motion picture people, similar in some ways to the Little Church Around the Corner in New York. He came to this office wondering whether there would be enough interest in motion picture circles to aid in some measure the construction of such a church. Small encouragement met his idea at the first; but as it began to grow and a certain amount of publicity began to be attached to it, there seemed to be at least a possibility of such a thing occurring. Today, instead of a "Little" Church Around the Corner, plans are being drawn for a structure which will not only include a main auditorium for the Sunday sermon, but also a thoroughly equipped community center, in which will be found a gymnasium, rest rooms, card and billiard rooms, a motion picture projection room and a library; and many other things, all of which will be available to all motion picture people.

To the average person not acquainted with studios or studio life, the last thing in the world to be accomplished would seem to be the building of a church by people connected with the motion picture industry. The public at large has not associated motion pictures and motion picture actors with religion; so when it is time to make public the fact that the studio people of Hollywood and Los Angeles have seen fit to erect a church of their own; one that will rank with any church in the Southland in appearance; the moral effect on the general public will certainly be for the better. Few people realize the extent to which the motion pictures are called upon for charities in one form or another without any credit, either public or private. In all probability there is no one profession called upon oftener for donations to this and that fund; and usually in the spirit that implies absolute duty. It has been found by actual investigation that many of these local funds when totaled at the end of the campaign found two-thirds of the subscriptions among studio people. As a consequence, the next time a fund was wanted, they returned to what seemed to be an unfailing source of supply; but never in history have they given out the names of the people who were so liberal, nor even have they credited motion pictures in general with the amounts so generously given.

Now, however, is this thing changed. As automobiles and sight-seeing busses in future days pass by the Church of Saint Mary of the Angels, it will be announced that this is the church of the motion picture people, built by them for themselves, yet open to all who care to come inside. So also across the nation and probably across the seas in picture form will be found the interior and exterior of this church; the church to which all companies are welcome to bring their Kleig lights and their cameras whenever and as often as they require such locations. There is probably no one thing which could be done by motion pictures which will result in as much beneficial publicity as will the erection of this church.

That this has been noted is witnessed by the fact that practically every studio manager and officer connected with local producing companies have given their word, and in many cases their signatures toward the advancement of the campaign for funds which will be started in the immediate future.

Assurances have been given Father Dodd to the effect that he need go no further; that the finances necessary will be forthcoming at his asking. The motion picture people's church is an assured project.

A letter signed "GRANDPA," coming from South Pasadena, voices a deep regret that there are not more moving pictures in which the stellar parts are taken by children. The writer goes on further to state that a majority of the plays he has witnessed are not the proper kind to show to children. We quote in part:

"Once in a while in motoring around the town I see an announcement in front of one of the small theaters of Baby Marie Osborne; whereupon I take a load of my grandchildren and go to see her for their benefit, and much to their delight.

"But why do we not hear of any of the others? The Fox kiddies did some very pleasant work, which, while not to be classed as "high-brow stuff," gave a very pleasant entertainment, and one innocuous to children. I noted somewhere in an article about the activities of Universal, that they made a film of the immortal "Sindbad the Sailor." But where can it be seen?

"I should be much obliged if you would give a short article in your next issue telling why the nascent Nazimovas and their congeners are not featured in the programs of Los Angeles houses. Did they have their vogue and become unprofitable to exhibitors? If so, we will all mourn—at least in this household. Will you not kindly throw a little light on the matter through the columns of CAMERA! which is regularly read by us?."

The question raised is really a serious one. Time was when there seemed to be a profit in the production of boy and girl pictures; and certainly there can be no less talent today than there was when Bobby Connolly and his contemporaries were popular on the screen.

CAMERA! would like to hear from people who know something about it. Where have the child features gone?

A new publication, entirely unique among the periodicals issued in connection with motion pictures, has made its appearance in London. It is sponsored by The Amalgamated Press, Ltd. and is to devote its attention almost entirely to cinema matters of special interest to the youth. The American representative of the magazine has paid Frank Borzage, the brilliant young director of the Cosmopolitan Films, the honor of asking him to prepare an article for an early issue. This magazine, by the way, will be the sixty-sixth published under the management of The Amalgamated Press, one of which, a movie weekly, has more than half a million circulation.

From the deluge of publicity that immediately followed the fire at the Brunton studios last week one might believe that a menagerie had been razed instead of a few sets and scene docks. Before the press men of the twenty-one companies now producing on the lot left their typewriters seven terriers, three Irish wolfhounds, a Brazilian llama, two zebras, nine white mice, four leopards and a ring-tailed racoon—all pets of the various stars—had perished miserably in the conflagration. Jack Kerrigan alone positively states that he lost no live stock, his dog Jerry being confined at home with a severe cold when the fire occurred.

TURNING THE CRANK

John Leezer is handling first camera for Henry Kolker at the Brentwood.

Lieut. R. Lyons, formerly at Vitagraph is now with Syd Chaplin at the Jasper studios.

Lee Garmes is with Frazee at Riverside.

Dave Abel is reported as coming west soon to make a picture.

Assistant Director Frank Gereghty and Cameraman Todd of the Kerrigan company returned recently from a duck hunting trip along the tide waters of Balboa. They brought back one mud hen and two bad cases of sunburn.

Not a Bad "Tip"—"Go early and avoid the crush" is the advice given by Jane Novak who is soon to make her appearance in Marshall Neilan's production of "The River's End." Between scenes Jane has found time to make the rounds of the exclusive shops and complete her Christmas shopping at this early date.

RAILROAD STORIES WANTED

The Capital Film Company has issued an emphatic and immediate call for stories of the switchyard and the long stretches. They must be true to life. Get busy!

WOODS DESCRIBES QUALITIES NEEDED BY DIRECTORS

"The two greatest difficulties that confront the motion picture producers are securing, first, good stories, and second, capable directors," said Frank E. Woods, Paramount's supervising director, who was one of the pioneers of the young picture industry and for several years served in a similar capacity for the great D. W. Griffith.

"The really good directors," said Mr. Woods, "are very few, and merely makers of motion pictures. A director worthy of his title must be a person of composite qualities. He must be instinctively a poet, dramatist and leader of men. He must first of all be endowed with real dramatic insight—instinct, if you please. He should have the artistic sense strongly trained and developed. He must have a general knowledge of history and a grasp of the things that in the present day govern the impulses of men and the course of events.

"He must command the respect of his artists and be able to convey his ideas to them so that they will partake of his thought power and try to concentrate with him on the object in hand. It is manifest that he must know a good story; more than that, the germ of a good story, for many an opportunity has been seized by a director who has built nobly on the basis of one or two ideas. He should know how to put his story into the continuity form needed to make a smooth-running screen play.

"Then he must know the camera as well as the man who turns the crank; for all his other knowledge may be rendered futile in the sharp competition of these days if he is not able to assure his production of the necessary pictorial beauty. He must have unlimited patience and enthusiasm and be a glutton for hard work. There are other qualities and accomplishments he must have, but these will do for mention now.

"Is it not apparent why there are few great directors? As the men to measure up to these requirements are developed they will force recognition and the stars will not be able to hide their glory. The young art of the motion picture will bring them out, never fear."

ALL LATIN TO HER

"Here! You 'multum in parvo'!" said Mr. Herbert Grimwood, the English actor, to Kathleen Clifford, playing opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "When the Clouds Roll By."

"Pardon!" said the little Clifford, while she harked back to her Latin days in school.

Mr. Grimwood then proceeded to inform her that every Latin scholar ought to know "multum in parvo" means "little, but oh my!"

A MOVING PICTURE CROOK

He likes to kill, he likes to steal,
He likes to be real mean;
He'll kid a cop or cop a kid,
He does this on the screen.
But when he goes home to chew a bone,
His wife gives him the hook,
And his kids they make a rummy
Of a Moving Picture Crook.

He sniffs cocaine, he shoots morphine,
He smokes up cans of hop;
But when he smokes at home at night,
Bull Durham's all he's got.
He steals and kills to give you thrills,
But he helps his wife cook;
And his kids they love their Daddy—
He's a Moving Picture Crook.

SOCIAL FRICASEE AND CAPER SAUCE

By Mildred Davis

Honor Mrs. Innerarity — Complimenting Mrs. Lewis Innerarity, wife of Pathe's secretary who last week arrived from New York, Ruth Roland entertained with a delightful dinner party at the Hotel Alexandria. Miss Roland's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Innerarity, Miss Eleanor Woodruff, Mr. Gilson Willets and Mr. Leo Kent.

Motor to Riverside—Ruth Roland and some of the members of her company drove to Riverside after work Monday. They dined at Glenwood Mission Inn.

Surprise Note—Tom Lingham reports that for one whole week he has not had one cent's expense on his car. Verily truth is stranger than fiction; that is if Tom is telling the truth.

Chase House-Warming—Miss Nancy Chase, the English actress who is with the Kerrigan company, has finally selected and purchased a beautiful home in Hollywood, at the corner of Sunset Boulevard and Orange Grove Drive. The gardens surrounding the home are unusually attractive, having been designed by Carl E. Clarke, the well known landscape artist. Monday evening Miss Chase will give a housewarming. Those to enjoy Miss Chase's hospitality will include Fritzi Brunette, Bessie Bird, Irene Rich, Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, Roy Stewart, Arthur Morrison and Wedgwood Nowell.

Walcamp-Tucker Marriage—We record the information that Marie Walcamp and Harland Tucker were married, in Tokio, Japan, recently. They are with Henry McRae working for Universal.

Complimenting Miss Daniels—Bebe Daniels and Mrs. Phyllis Daniels returned from their week-end at Santa Barbara Monday night. Thursday afternoon Mrs. Vernon Caszy of the Lasky studio gave a luncheon in honor of Miss Bebe, at the Caszy home in Hollywood. Covers were laid for twelve.

A Real Period—Wesley Barry, Marshall Neilan's twelve year old boy star, who will next year be seen in a picturized version of Booth Tarkington's famous "Penrod" stories, is considering the purchase of an automobile. The freckled face kid is already an expert horseman and now aspires to sit at the wheel of a fast car and shorten the distance between any two given points.

Warner to Star Virginia Lee Corbin—Probably the first serious dramatic lead ever played by a child in motion pictures, will be the title part in the "White Dove" just started by Jesse Hampton to feature H. B. Warner and Virginia Lee Corbin. Virginia is too well known in child parts to need any introduction to film people; but the present part she is playing is one which carries the keyed situations all the way through the story, and will require at least as much screen footage as will the part played by Warner. Miss Corbin was loaned by the Fox Company for this picture, the production of which was decided only after Mr. Warner was sure that he could procure Virginia's services.

Did You Know that Frank Mayo's real name is Frank Mayo the Third, and that both his father and grandfather appeared in "Davy Crockett' when that play was most popular both in England and in the United States? Mayo the Third made his debut in the same play at the tender age of five.

Foss Throws Rope—Darrell Foss, who is supporting May Allison in "The Walk-offs," has been startling the fellow members of the cast by his ability to twirl the rope. Mr. Foss does this for exercise during his spare moments. He is not a beginner, however, having received his early motion picture training as a member of the "101 Ranch," where riding and rope throwing were the great assets.

COPYING ANOTHER IS FATAL ON SCREEN, SAYS TAYLOR

William Desmond Taylor, the director who was chosen by the Realart corporation, a subsidiary of the Paramount company with which he has long been associated, takes sharp issue with a printed opinion that he has been enjoined to "make another Mary Pickford" out of his young professional ward.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," said Taylor, with a pardonable asperity. "I would not undertake her direction under such a commission. The last advice I would give a player would be to pattern after somebody else. It is true that there are some so skillful and finished in acting technique that their methods of achieving results may well be studied by all actors. But as for advising one to put aside his or her natural ways to copy mannerisms—never!

"The most desirable thing in screen acting is spontaneity. If you persuade an actress to pattern her work after another you do more to kill spontaneity than if you tied her hand and foot. And there is nothing more quickly transmitted by the camera than such a lack in a player. The motion picture public has become a very exacting critic; it detects and spurns very quickly everything that savors of artificiality. The best story will fall flat if it is not evident that the players are moving of their own thoughts and impulses.

"Now that the picture drama has come to be something more than a novelty and we must give to it the same care that is devoted to stage presentations, the screen artist must succeed or fail, sink or swim on his or her own qualities and capacities. To think otherwise would be like expecting one child to learn mathematics by simply copying sets of figures that another has set down.

"No, the last thing I would attempt to do—the last than can be done—is to try to make one aspiring artist a 'second' anybody. To try it would be merely to make an automaton."

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

—By—

WYCLIFFE A. HILL

Author of

"Ten Million Photoplay Plots" and various feature photoplays

NOTE—This is the first of a series of twelve installments that Mr. Hill has consented to write for Camera! the finished series being a most complete and thorough treatise on writing for motion pictures. The chapters will be printed consecutively from week to week.

INSTALLMENT ONE

(Copyright 1919 by W .A. Hill)

There is just as much science necessary in the construction of a dramatic plot as there is in building a skyscraper, or designing the plans for one. Some literary students apply it unconsciously, or subconsciously, while others have to acquire it—just as some musicians are inspired to produce the most beautiful melodies, by ear, while others find it necessary to follow the written note and bar. Both are applying definite, established rules, just the same. The delicate touches and shadings may be acquired by either.

Just as there are eight basic notes in the scale of music or sound, so are there a definite number of dramatic situations which constitute the foundation of all Fiction and Drama. The number is thirty-seven. The writer claims to be the discoverer of the thirty-seventh — which has been placed in the position of Number Three, in the list.

As a dramatic plot consists simply of a series of dramatic situations, involving two or more characters, logically connected, and leading to a climax, the first step of the student would appear to be a study of this basic material. As a means of analysis we will first classify them under seven different heads: The eternal triangle is present in every dramatic situation. The three angles to each are shown:

CLASS ONE.

Happy Situations.

(1)—DELIVERANCE. Any situation where one is, themselves, delivered from an unhappy situation or a predicament.

(A)—Persecutor, Pursuer or Predicament.
(B)—Victim.
(C)—Rescuer, or Deliverer.

(2)—RECOVERY OF LOST LOVED ONES. Where a loved one is rescued from a predicament or a position or peril.

(A)—Predicament.
(B)—Loved One.
(C)—Deliverer.

CLASS TWO.

Awe-Inspiring Situations.

(3)—THE MIRACLE. Any situation where the hand of Divine Providence, or another super-natural power, is interposed, either in delivering or vengeance.

(A)—Persecutor, or Victim.
(B)—Persecutor, or Victim.
(C)—Power.

CLASS THREE.

Pathetic Situations.

(4)—SUPPLICATION, OR ENTREATY. Any situation where one who is in a predicament, makes a plea for relief.

(A)—Supplicant.
(B)—Predicament.
(C)—One to whom Appeal is made.

(5)—OBSTACLES TO LOVE. Where two people are in love with one another and there is a bar to a union between them; enemies, difference in rank, fortune, race, etc.

(A)—Lover.
(B)—Obstacle.
(C)—Beloved.

(6)—A RIVALRY BETWEEN UNEQUALS. Between rich and poor; strong and weak; powerful and humble; good and bad; royalty and plebian; etc.

(A)—The Weak.
(B)—Object desired.
(C)—Powerful.

(7)—RIVALRY BETWEEN KINSMEN. For love, wealth, position, achievement, etc.

(A)—One required to solve problem.
(B)—Problem.
(C)—One requiring solution.

CLASS FOUR.

Inspiring Situations.

(9)—TO LOVE AN ENEMY. In which one is in love with another who is an enemy by tradition, as in the case of an American soldier who falls in love with a German girl, etc.

(A)—Lover.
(B)—Cause of Enmity.
(C)—Beloved.

(10)—SACRIFICE FOR AN IDEAL. For duty, honor, country, Faith, One's word, etc.

(A)—One making Sacrifice.
(B)—The Sacrifice.
(C)—Sacrifice for.

(11)—SELF SACRIFICE FOR ANOTHER. Kinsman, friend, Loved one, unfortunate one, etc.

(B)—The sacrifice.
(C)—Sacrifice For.

CLASS FIVE.

Unhappy situations precipitated either with or without criminal intent.

(B)—The Ambition.
(C)—Obstacle.

(B)—Indiscretion.
(C)—Fatal result.

(14)—PURSUIT. In which one is pursued for any real or fancied reason.

(A)—Pursuer.

EDITH JOHNSON

By Mildred Davis

Perhaps you will remember a "Girl on the Cover" of the Eastman Kodak booklets. A brown-eyed girl with sunny hair and a flashing smile. Sometimes she was called the "Poster Girl," and sometimes "The Girl With the Million-Dollar Smile." That was about six years ago, and Edith Johnson was the girl.

Rochester, New York, the home of the Eastman Kodak, happened also to be the home of Edith Johnson. So Edith began her posing career by helping to make the Kodak famous.

Her still pictures attracted the Lubn people in New York, and she was invited to join their ranks. She promptly accepted, and henceforth all her poses were very active.

After a stay with Lubin the Johnston smile was transferred to Essanay, and then to Selig. As a leading woman for the Selig Polyscope Miss Johnston was sent to California. At the old Mission Road studio she was featured in several productions. Universal also featured her and then for about one year she rested. Just loafed around enjoying California.

Neither did she care to or was allowed to stay away from the camera for a long time, because a year and a half ago Vitagraph offered a contract for the Johnston services. Since that contract Edith has added beauty, a talent to the William Duncan serials. She has appeared in three of these, which required no small amount of nerve and daring mixed in with the more idealistic qualities.

"I like the serial with Mr. Duncan. It is hard work, but we have had some fine times. All summer we were at Huntington Lake working on 'Smashing Barriers.' The serial work is very interesting to me, but that is probably because Mr. Duncan goes about it differently than most serial directors. He gives more time and thought to the pictures than is usually expected for episode production. We all work with the idea of making a consistent, intelligent production, not just a series of wild disconnected thrills," Mrs. Johnston speaks of her work.

She is very enthusiastic about some plans.

"We will finish this serial in a few weeks, and then," she tells us, "Mr. Duncan is to make a seven-reel feature. I will have the lead, and he will star and direct. A James Oliver Curwood story has been selected which will probably necessitate our going into the mountains for snow scenes. Snow is always so beautiful in a picture, but I can't get a pleasant thought of making the scenes. We tried it last year at Big Bear — and the results were excellent. But, oh! Those cold beds, cold cabins, and wet feet."

Yes, we're afraid that there's nothing of the wild woman in the Johnston make-up. She likes steam heat and breakfast served on white linen. No bon-fires in the snow and tin cups for her. She has gone so far as to secure a civilized existence in the future by purchasing a beautiful home in the western part of the city. Brand new, just two weeks old—and when we saw Miss Johnston she informed us that she had just been "fixing" some curtains.

We take the home as an example and conclude that she is a very good "fixer." Not very consistent with the Duncan serial girl, is it? But true and convincing nevertheless.

WHERE TO FIND PEOPLE YOU KNOW

PICK-UPS BY THE STAFF

Doc Bytell is with Madeline Traverse at Fox.

Gus Saville left with the Mitchell Lewis for northern California this week.

Harry Northrup has been cast with Katherine McDonald for the sympathetic part of Lord Dauntrey in the "Guest of Hercules."

George Hall is with Bessie Barriscale at Brunton's.

Monroe Salisbury has been confined to his home with a severe cold as the result of a rainstorm scene incident to the filming of his latest production.

Harry Carey, the Universal star, recently told an energetic reporter of a Los Angeles paper that a goldfinch perched on a tree outside the window of his ranch house and awakened him every morning with a flood of song. With that peculiar brilliancy common to printers, the story read that a beautiful goldfish perched in a tree and sang outside the star's window. Since then the Universal player has been beseiged by friends who think that anyone who can see a goldfish sing in a tree must have a private supply of good liquor.

Beatrize Dominguez was extended an ovation recently when she danced at a benefit given by the Whittier California, chapter of the American Legion. Miss Dominguez was the official dancer at the San Diego Exposition, being headlined as La Belle Sevilla. She is now at Universal.

Beatrice Burnham, of Universal, is seriously ill at her home. Miss Burnham was stricken with appendicitis while at work. She is in the care of her physicians and will not be able to return for several weeks.

Dazey Here—The latest addition to the Louis B. Mayer scenario staff is Frank M. Dazey who has just arrived from New York to prepare a number of scenarios for Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin. Dazey is living at the Hollywood hotel.

Tom Hayden has been portraying a French naval officer in support of Clara Kimball Young at the Garson studio.

Carl Miller has just finished with Lois Weber and has started "The Parish Priest" with Wm. Desmond Co.

Harry S. Northrup says: "It is impossible for a "heavy" to get the best of a "hero" on the screen. For six weeks I have been trying to murder James J. Corbett in "The Prince of Avenue A." and he looks better and younger than ever."

ZaSu Pitts has gone to a foothill resort for a two weeks' rest before the next Brentwood picture in which she is to be featured.

Edward J. Shulter has been made supervisor of all exterior art work at Metro.

Jeanie MacPherson, scenario writer for Cecil B. deMille, leaves shortly for New York to recuperate after a lengthy illness.

Priscilla Dean has been compelled to stain her face, arms and legs a light brown color for the past eight weeks while enacting the title role in H. H. Van Loan's photodrama, "The Beautiful Beggar."

Signed With Chaplin—Beulah Bains, a southern college girl, is about the happiest young lady in Los Angeles today, being the recipient of a volume of congratulations upon her recent good fortune. The work of Miss Bains in Charlie Chaplin's current production is so exceptionally promising that the famous Charles has signed her up for a long period.

Lieut. Ira Morgan is at Brentwood, cranking "Where There's a Will—."

Dick Oliphant has joined the forces of the American Lifeograph Company of Portland, Oregon as assistant director.

Elinor Fair left Los Angeles Wednesday for New York City via Kansas City. Miss Fair plans to spend Thanksgiving with her family before going East.

Gus Saville has been cast with Mitchell Lewis Company, character, for the next five weeks.

Jean Hersholt seems to have permanetly deserted the Los Angeles colony in favor of the American Lifeograph Company of Portland. "The Golden Trail" which he has just co-directed with Lewis H. Moomaw, is an Alaskan story featuring Jan Novak supported by Jack Livingston. The exteriors were filmed on the snow fields of Mount Hood during a heavy storm. Jean also played one of the principal parts in the production, and made a series of pen and ink sketches for the art subtitles. Aside from that, his time was all his own.

Art Acord is confined to his home with a strange illness which baffles all medical science. Mr. Acord has developed a series of annoying blisters on various parts of his body; just where most of the blisters are located, Mr. Acord refuses to state—at least publicly. But he declined absolutely to ride a horse and is said by his relatives to be eating his meals from the mantelpiece.

Nancy Chase has purchased the Kendell residence on the corner of Sunset boulevard and Orange Grove avenue. She will stage a lively house warming Monday evening at her new home. Among the well known picture people expected to attend are: Fritzi Brunette, Arthur Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, Roy Stewart, Bessie Bird, Irene Rich, Thomas O'Brien and Wedgewood Newell.

Zerr at Metro—E. J. Zerr has been engaged as assistant director at the Metro studio. Mr. Zerr is a veteran in the motion picture industry, having made his debut with the Kalem company five years ago.

Morris in "The Walk-offs"—Richard Morris is appearing as Judge Brent, in support of May Allison in her new screen classic production "The Walk-offs."

Pettie With Lytell—Graham Pettie has been engaged by Maxwell Karger to portray the "old fanatic tailor" in Bert Lytell's latest picture "The Right of Way."

Emma Dunn Arrives—Emma Dunn arrived in Los Angeles this week and will be featured in the Screen Classic production of "Old Lady 31," the filming of which will start next week at the Metro studio.

Society Circus at Metro—Three large tents have been put up on the Metro studio grounds for the society circus, which is to be held next week for scenes of "The Walk-offs," May Allison's new Screen Classic production.

David Butler, the Universal star, who went to San Francisco last week, to be gone two days, has over-stayed his leave. Reports about the "wet industry" in the north must be true!

Finishing Serial—The twelfth episode of "The Adventure of Ruth" has been completed and the company is well along with the thirteenth. December 28th has been set as the release date by Pathe.

Russell Receives the Dog This Week—Russell Simpson was forced to say the motorists three dreaded words, namely, "Good morning udge." Yep, Russ got his for doing about sixty down Wilshire Boulevard.

Two at Once—Herbert Grimwood has just finished with Doug Fairbanks and was immediately engaged by Jesse Hampton. Grimwood is doing two pictures at the same time on the Hampton lot Frances Raymond who played the mother to Florence Vidor in "The Other Half" is again with Brentwood for an important role in "Where There's a Will," under Claude H. Mitchell's direction.

Frank Mayo, leading man, has signed again with Universal on a two-year contract. He received several alluring offers from other producers when it became known that his contract had expired. He will be either starred or co-starred in every new picture he makes at Universal, under the new arrangement.

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Instruction in Photoplay Writing

THE richest market in the world today for original story material is the photoplay market. Producers are scouring the country far and wide for story ideas that can be successfully made into moving pictures. Acceptable stories readily command $100 to $2000. One Palmer student sold his first play for $3000. Others have received from $350 to $1000 for their stories. Still others have obtained lucrative staff scenario positions and are now working in Los Angeles studios. The Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing enables the student to master photoplay fundamentals through correspondence instruction without loss of time or present position.

The Advisory Council

Directing the educational policy of the institution is an Advisory Council comprising CECIL B. DeMILLE, Director General of the Famous Players - Lasky Corporation; THOMAS H. INCE, Head of the Ince Studios; LOIS WEBER, Producer, Director and Author, and ROB WAGNER, Special Contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and Screen Authority.

The Sales Service

The Photoplay Sales Department serves as a connecting link between the writer and the buyer of stories. Material accepted for marketing is handled strictly on a commission basis. Writers are invited to investigate the unusual features of this service, which include registration, editing and personal representation at the studios. The department is headed by Kate Corbaley, well-known photoplaywright and author. Affiliated with the bureau are Bess Meredyth and Anne Scott, comprising the Anne Scott, composing the Bess Meredyth Exchange.

"INDEPENDENT ALL AROUND," SAY FIVE COMBINED PRODUCERS

Following the recent announcement of the association of five of the foremost motion picture producers, rumors have been circulating of the connection of other interests with those originally mentioned, and rumors that certain individuals and organizations are financing the associated producers.

The Associated Producers, who are Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett, Maurice Tourneur, Allan Dwan and Marshall Neilan, announced today that no other producing or distributing interests are in any way allied with them, nor are they being financed by any outside or individual capitai. They want to make this plain to the exhibitors throughout the country because of several inaccurate reports which have found circulation.

The Associated Producers are rapidly perfecting their plans and announce that they will shortly make a complete statement of them.

In view of the deep and widespread interest which the original announcement caused, it was not unexpected that further rumors should be set afloat. It is these rumors which the members of the new association wish to put at rest.

DUCK DIRECTOR

Marshall Neilan says Victor Heerman is the world's champion duck director. In one of the scenes of "The River's End" a common ordinary everyday duck steps out of a basket and walks clear across the set to a bowl of duck food. While filming this scene everyone at the studio from stage carpenter to "Mickey" himself tried his hand at coaxing the duck to make the grade in a straight line. But all in vain. Each time the dumb fowl would get half way across and would then do an "about face" and make a bee line back to the basket. Finally the rotund Victor got on the side lines, smiled sweetly at the duck who immediately walked straight to Heerman's outstretched hand without batting an eye.

Local Association Asks Cooperation—"In an effort to secure thorough cooperation between their industry and the community at large, representatives of the motion picture interests of the city met yesterday with the manufacturing committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

"The desired co-operation, the film men pointed out, would do away with various abuses which they claim fall upon them indiscriminately. As a result of the meeting a plan of co-ordination which is expected to bring the desired effect will be formulated soon.

"Some of the protests registered by the producers were:

"That material dealers have such a close combination to maintain prices that they can buy material in New York and pay the freight to Los Angeles cheaper than it can be obtained here.

"That they are forced to pay one-fifth of the value of house furnishings to rent them for one week.

"That landlords discriminate against them in renting houses and apartments.

"That exorbitant prices are charged by individuals for the privilege of using homes or estates in making pictures.

"That the attitude of the banks toward the industry forces them to do all their financing in New York.

"That merchants "oversell" anyone identified with the industry without investigation, thereby bringing discredit on the entire profession.

"W. T. Bishop, chairman of the manufacturing committee of the Chamber, presided and A. G. Arnoll of the industrial department of the Chamber outlined the plan of the committee to have co-ordinating committees representing the basic industries of Los Angeles."—L. A. Herald.

"Shore Acres" for Alice Lake—Rex Ingram, director-writer-actor, has signed with Metro to direct Alice Lake in "Shore Acres," from the famous stage drama by James A. Herne. Ingram was born in Dublin, Ireland, not more than twenty-seven years ago. He played Rugby at Trinity College, ran away to this country at the age of 17, was ousted from every Greek letter fraternity at Yale, took drawing at the Art Students' League, studied modeling under the famous Lawrie, and became a sculptor. Through a meeting with Charles Edison, son of Thomas A., he turned screen actor in Edison dramas. He acted for Vitagraph, wrote scenarios and assisted Gordon Edwards at Fox, and directed Cleo Madison in a story of his own at Universal. In 1917 he joined the Royal Flying Corps and was held fifteen months in training in Canada. On his return recently he directed "The Beachcomber," featuring Elmo Lincoln.

Gale Henry at Big Bear—Gale Henry this week took her crew to Big Bear Valley to film snow scenes. This is one of her favorite locations, and incidentally it is the place of her birth.

"Ah, love, could but we two with fate conspire,
To change this sorry scheme of things entire,
Would we not shatter it to bits,

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

SIX MORE PRODUCERS

Helen Holmes, famous railroad girl of films, is en route to Los Angeles. Hereafter she will make her serials in Southern California, according to an announcement today by Jack Warner, a member of the firm of Warner Brothers, producers of feature films. Miss Holmes is bringing with her a company of twenty. S. L. Warner, who supervised the production of the first Helen Holmes serial, "The Fatal Fortune," will leave for the Pacifific Coast shortly. Upon arrival he will confer with his brother, Jack Warner, regarding the taking over of a studio housing six producing units.

Catherine Curtiss, unable to complete her picture in Spokane, on account of lack of sunshine, was obliged to return to California. This also necessitated transporting to California fifty Indians who had been en-

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

While Frank Borzage was in the East, burglars entered his home and stripped it of most of its portable valuables. The booty must have filled an automobile. The wardrobe of both Mr. and Mrs. Borzage were reduced to nearly zero. An interesting fact in connection with the affair is that Mr. Borzage has never seen the house, it having been purchased and furnished by his wife since his departure for the East.

Bessie Bariscale Handicap—We are constantly learning something new about the many-sided Bessie Bariscale. It transpires that she has just given $275 for a purse called "The Bessie Bariscale Handicap." The race will be seven and one-half furlongs.

. Warren Kerrigan, who is also a great lover of high-bred horsefiesh, has also given a purse for this series of races.

Polo Serial—Production was started this week at Universal on the new eighteen-episode Eddie Polo serial, "The Vanishing Dagger." Jacques Jaccard is directing. The cast includes Sam Polo, brother of Eddie; Thelma Percy, Ray Ripley, Ruth Royce and Laura Oakley. The film will be six months in the making, and it is planned to take the last three of four episodes in South America. Milton Moore is handling the camera.

Ibanez Novel for Metro—Word from the New York office that Metro has purchased "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and three other novels by Blasco Ibanez, and "The Lights o' London," the melodrama by George R. E. Mason Hopper has been engaged by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to direct the Booth Tarkington Edgar Comedies, which are to be produced at the Culver City Studios in two-reel installments. Scenarios for the Edgar stories, in which the famous interpreter of boy characters brings his newest creation to the screen, have been written by Mr. Tarkington and production plans have progressed to a point where the filming of the comedies can be started as soon as the cast is selected.

Douglas Fairbanks has engaged Henry Clive to do the art titles for "When the Clouds Roll By," Fairbank's latest Big Four production.

The George Beban Company, now working as an individual producing oragnization, is busy in its work of preparation at the Katherine MacDonald studios. Helen Eddy, who has played opposite Beban in twelve different photodramas, will play the lead in the current picture. Others included in the cast are Lloyd T. Whitlock, Dorothy Gunin, George B. Williams and Jennie Lee. De Witt Hagan is production manager; Ross Fisher, cameraman; Fred Schafer, technical director; Charlie Watt, assistant manager.

Harris Assisting Ince—Sherrie Harris is assisting John Ince in the direction of "Old Lady 31." Mr. Harris was also assistant to Mr. Ince for "Should a Woman Tell?" which was recently completed at the Metro studio.

Sol Polito with Lytell—Sol Polito is now cameraman for "The Right of Way," Bert Lytell's new Screen Classic picture being filmed at the Metro studio.

Larger Lunch Room — Handsome Harry, the Metro studio care magnate is building an addition onto his eating emporium to accommodate the members of the studio.

HEADS FILM BOARD

Maurice Wolf, resident manager of the local Goldwyn Exchange, was elected on November 25th, to the presidency of the Los Angeles Film Board of Trade, an organization of influential film men affiliated for the purpose of straigtening out controversies that arise between exhibitors and exchanges. The Los Angeles Film Board of Trade is the oldest and strongest organization of its kind and has been the most far-reaching in the results obtained. Although Mr. Wolf has been head of the local exchange for only a little over four months he has gained the confidence of his brother exchange managers and the entire personnel of the exhibitors througnout the territory served by his office. As Mr. Wolf has been an exhibitor himself, as well as manager of other exchanges, he is well equipped to aid in deciding impartially upon the merits of any case of disagreement that might arise between exhibitor and distributor.

AUTHORS HERE

Zane Grey, Stewart Edward White, Emerson Hough and Winston Churchill, are in Los Angeles in business, connected with the filming of their novels by Benjamin B. Hampton, the motion picture producer who made Grey's "Desert Gold" and White's "The Westerners". The success of these pictures through the East, where they are now showing, and the unqualified approval of the authors have brought other noted writers into negotiations with Mr. Hampton for the production of their works. An Emerson Hough novel, another of Zane Grey's books, and a Winston Churchill novel follow shortly. All are to be special all star productions.

After a rehearsal of three weeks, the Douglas MacLean—Doris May company has started work of actual shooting on their latest comedy which has been given the working title of "Playing With Fire". Lloyd Ingraham is directing the production under supervision of Thomas H. Ince, who has supplied an excellent supporting cast for the co-stars, which includes such names as Wade Boteler, who made a big hit as the Mess Sergeant in "Twenty Three and a Half Hour's Leave", Norris Johnston, Wilbur Higby, Mollie McConnell, Grace Morse and Bob Walker. Bert Cann is behind the Camera.

Rene R. Rivierre, J. Warren Kerrigan's personal representative returned this week from New York with the film rights of two novels and a quart of the genuine stuff. These purchased involved the expenditure of several thousand dollars.

Doris May, who is co-starring with Douglas MacLean in a series of comedies under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince entertained Lieutenait Commander Henry Rupert Keller, Chief Navigation Officer of the Flagship New Mexico of the Pacific Fleet, and Dr. Joseph Kaveney Chief surgeon of the Fleet, recently on the set where she was working under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham, on scenes for the next MacLean-May feature "Playing With Fire".

Sol Lesser will distribute the George Beban pictures throughout the United States.

Myrtle Steadman, who is now playing an important part in "Sex," the forthcoming J. Parker Read, Jr., production in which Louise Glaum is the bright, particular star, will probably be a stranger to recent devotees of the screen. Older habitues of the picture theatres will remember her as playing leads with House Peters, Wallie Ried and other Lasky-Paramount stars two years ago, at which time she deserted the Kleigs for an extended concert tour of the United States. Miss Stedman is a vocalist of distinction and was beguiled from the concert stage by the lure of the camera to add another laurel to the wreath she already wore.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

The Studios of
THOMAS H. INCE
Los Angeles
June 2nd, 1919.

Rev. Neal Dodd,
4695 Hollywood Blvd.,
Los Angeles, Cal.
My dear Mr. Dodd:

I am greatly interested in the plan you outlined to me in our brief conversation, of a church whose ministry should be devoted to the spiritual welfare of the members of our great, and I fear in some respects, little understood, industry.

Around the studios, in Los Angeles, small settlements have grown up with interests, aims and ideas, that tend in a way to separate them from the general community. To one who could bring insight, understanding and sympathy to the work, would I am sure meet with an appreciative welcome from a fraternity quick to respond to the broad-minded interpretations of the finer things of life.

In the theatrical, so closely allied with the motion picture art, there are several alliances who have for years dedicated their services to the welfare of the stage. These have always met with a hearty response from the actors and their associates, and have firmly established themselves in the affections of the profession. In this motion picture center, I feel confident that there is a field for one who could bring to the work the qualities I have indicated.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) THOS. H. INCE.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

AS TOLD BY BERT GRASSBY

Few movie actors can truthfully say they ever aroused the professional jealousy of Richard Mansfield. Maybe the method of arousing Mansfield's ire and jealousy wasn't exactly ethical, but Bertram Grassby was only 16 years old at the time and it was the night of his first speaking part on the legitimate stage.

Grassby, who is one of the principals in Mildred Harris Chaplin's new picture, "The Inferior Sex," now laughs when he can be persuaded to tell the story. But he didn't laugh the night of the incident.

"When I was 16 years old I ran away from home and joined the Mansfield Company. The great actor gave me a small speaking part, probably because he had been my father's friend many years before in England.

"Although very young I was of Mansfield's build and people even remarked that one or two of our features showed more than a slight resemblance. Proud to know that I resembled the famous actor I tried to complete the resemblance by making up. One night in "Prince Karl" I came on the stage made up like Mansfield—same colored wig, same costume and with makeup errandicating the difference in years.

"Through the first act the audience gaped at Mansfield and then at me. There were a few titters and many smiles. Mansfield never got next until the curtain went down. Luckily I had a few feet head start and was a good sprinter. Mansfield chased me off the stage, out the door and up an alley. I think if he had caught me he would have terminated not only my stage career, but my earthly existence. It was only through the aid of a friend that I secured my clothes and parted company with the Mansfield Company.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

NARROW ESCAPE

Mary Alden, who is supporting Mildred Harris Chaplin in "The Inferior Sex," believes in getting to the studio on time, no matter what happens.

While the last scenes of the picture were being shot recently at the Louis B. Mayer studios, Los Angeles, Miss Alden made a dramatic appearance at the studio. Her hat was awry, hair disheveled, and on either side of Mary marched a policeman trying to convince her she should go to a hospital instead of to work.

Ten minutes later Miss Alden was on the set and between scenes she related her experiences.

Mary's taxi collided head-on with a trolley car and was completey demolished. Miss Alden's head was poked through the glass windshield, but a felt hat and heavy furs prevented laceration.

While bystanders hurried the chauffeur to the emergency hospital, Mary sat up in the mass of debris and prevented a kindly disposed rescuer from throwing water in her face. "I'm made up," she explained in the nick of time.

WHAT DOES CINEMA HOLD OUT FOR AMBITIOUS BOYS?

By Joseph de Grasse.

Would I advise a boy to aspire to direct or act in motion pictures?

Yes, if he feels strongly that he has something to express that the world will want to know, and he believes it can best be expressed through such a medium.

No, if he is merely looking around for an easy vocation that promises to pay him more than he earns or to give his vanity large scope.

In one event he will be apt to grow nobly on his best side and give something to the world that will make it a better habitation; in the other he will most likely be one of the languid and mediocre crowd—those who, having no purpose, no goal, drift along and miss even the rich rewards that the cinema, like other agencies of endeavor, always holds out only to the industrious or the specially talented.

If a boy needs to be advised to go on the stage or into pictures he might better stay away from them. If he feels an urge amounting to something like a passion thus to express himself, he will not need the spur of advice; he will attain his ambition without trying to have any easy road pointed out to him.

The best evidence of my sincerity in saying that the cinema holds out great chances for the right kind of boys is the way I bring the matter to my own doorsill. I have a boy that is coming down the stretch toward young manhood. At one time I would have advised him to shun the actor's profession because its hardships and temptations were still sharply remembered, and I did not consider the question of duty to self or the world. But now I would like to have him become one of the makers of motion pictures because of the tremendous influence they are going to have in shaping the ideals of the world.

But only if he has vision and a sense of responsibility, mind you. If he hasn't these he might better be a good plumber or chauffeur. The merely technical part is not hard to learn.

There is no way to tell a boy how to knock on the door of opportunity, or how to find it. He must find it for himself in this field as in others. Perhaps he may have to make great sacrifices to reach it; he may have to rob himself of the playtime that other boys demand, or he may have to subsist on crumbs of bread in order to be on the spot, ready for the door to open.

If he has this kind of stamina, the cinema wants him. It will not deny him a chance. The world does not deny the demands of him who will not take no for an answer.

Let him approach the studio this way, with a willingness to take any job, however humble, in order to get a start, and the rest will take care of itself. There is no royal road, and if there were it would not be good for him.

We have a phrase: "Come on in, the water's fine." So I say to ambitious boys: Cone on in, there is room for boys with good stuff in them in our vocation and to that kind it will provide a means of noble expression and perhaps a road to fame.

FINIS FOX

By Mildred Davis

Finis Fox is an efficiency fiend. He is always mental. Always a student. Particularly is he a student of people—and he knows his fellow-men both in theory and in actuality. His entrance into pictures gives a good example of his thoroughness.

Mr. Fox was the sales manager of a big manufacturing company in Louisville, Ky., when he wrote his first story. He was a big-salaried man with an enviable position. But after his first story was purchased and produced he continued to write successful stories, finally deciding to follow this work permanently. He probably could have continued indefinitely to turn out good stories. But he was not content with just that, so when he was offered a writer's position with Metro he accepted—but not as a writer—as an assistant director. All this for efficiency's sake.

"I was there to learn the technicalities of picture making, to become familiar with every detail of production," Mr. Finis Fox tells us, "for that reason I made a bum assistant. When I should have been calling the people and running an errand I was actually sticking close to the 'set' absorbing information. I often laughed at what my former business associates would think if they could see me doing my insignificant assistant director duties."

After completing this self-appointed lesson, the outhor was able to feel secure in a knowledge of his subject.

So he went to work as a regular scenario writer without any qualms about the accuracy of his technique.

Thus it has been in every enterprise of his life. The root of things, the why and the wherefor, and the little cogs that make the wheels go round—these are the things that held an unfailing mystery for Finis Fox. For several years he held a high position with the Cudahy Packing Company, where his persistent search for information was a company joke.

"Fox knows where every pine in the plant begins and ends," was often said of him.

Finis Fox has been engaged in a dozen different types of work. He has made money—two fortunes, and lost them. Always with a smile, for he felt there was yet another chance, and each blow was only a stepping-stone. He has known success and he has been down and out.

Through it all he has maintained and developed a dogged perseverance and infinite patience which has enabled him to stand the worst knocks.

"When my mind is set upon the attainment of an object I can stand the most cruel injustice, the most gross insult, in silence," Mr. Fox tells us, "because I know that before the race is done I will be the master."

That steel-like quality of silent endurance is the most important reason for the Fox success. Then, too, he has learned the queer twists of human nature so well that when he wants to make a point he knows just where to hit with his direct forcefulness. He is efficient throughout, never wasting a word or an action.

Mr. Fox explains that in his writing he always tries to be as concise and direct as possible. He tries to say in a few words what another writer would say in many. "Perhaps my way is not always so well, yet there is less chance of going wrong, and has the advantage of holding the reader from the start. There are few people who have the patience or interest to continue reading unless they are caught by the first line."

We asked Mr. Fox what he thought was the most essential characteristic for the make-up of a successful scenario writer.

"Animaginative, analytical and practical mind," he replied. "The same is true for a successful director. A perfect but rare combination. So seldom is it found that the accepted method for picture production is to assemble different people with these qualities. Even then there is usually too much of one thing so that the finished product is unbalanced."

So there is another point in favor of Finis Fox's achievements as a motion picture writer. He possesses that analytical, imaginative and practical mind. When you have heard him talk you know this—and you know that he always gets what he goes after, for he is the master of himself.

DIRECTOR PRAISES STAR-PRODUCER FOR STOPPING PICTURE MUTILATIONS

Reading a news paragraph the other day to the effect that a famous star-producer of pictures intended to discipline exhibitors who cut down film plays to meet time requirements, Frank Lloyd, the director of many of the best William Fox and Goldwyn pictures, said "Allah be praised," or words to that effect.

The news item said that Miss Pickford did not intend to stand for such mutilation, now that she had something to say as to who should have her films.

"It is a common practice," said Lloyd, "for theatre managers in the smaller towns who are more concerned about the number of shows than the quality of shows, to apply the shears ruthlessly to photo-plays that the producer, director and film editor have labored over with great care.

"The showman who is imbued with the honky-tonk spirit of 'get 'em out so you can get 'em in,' takes the scissors and with less discretion than a sheep-shearer exercises chops with a sole desire to make as many shows a day as the clock will permit.

"The situation is intolerable. Fancy a stage production coming out over the country from New York and theatre managers expecting the right to lop off the fourth act or take a piece out of each act so that they could give two performances in an evening.

" The reputation of directors and the financial safety of producers have been put on the chopping block in this way, and there has been no redress. Authors have been made to appear to have written sheer rubbish by the gaps thus left in their stories, and actors have been made to do perplexing things.

" Gentle theatre patrons should be merciful in their judgment when they find unaccountable evidences of stupidity in acting, directing or motivation in a picture play. Like as not it has been chopped by an exhibitor who 'needs the money.'

"I have sat in a theatre before a picture that I directed and died a thousand deaths as its mutilated travesty has unrolled before my eyes.

"Theatres should buy feature pictures as they come from the makers or leave them. In putting a stop to the mutilation of her films into distortions of the originals Miss Pickford is starting something from which we hope to gain much peace of mind."

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

—By—

WYCLIFFE A. HILL

Author of

"Ten Million Photoplay Plots" and various feature photoplays

NOTE—This is the second of a series of twelve installments that Mr. Hill has consented to write for Camera! the finished series being a most complete and thorough treatise on writing motion pictures. The chapters will be printed consecutively from week to week.

INSTALLMENT TWO

BUILDING BY INDUCTION

(Copyright 1919 by W. A. Hill)

In the previous chapter we had a list of the thirty-seven basic dramatic situations, classified under seven heads. Now in order for the reader to profit from such a list he may use the exact reverse process of that which was employed in reducing all of the plot material in existence to a list of thirty-seven basic situations.

In other words we will say that in the list of thirty-seven basic dramatic situations, we have a concentrated extract, the units of which may be built into an unlimited number plot combinations. To do this means to employ the imagination and to stimulate its elasticity.

Each of the basic situations should be made a careful study. A very good procedure would be to create at least a dozen, or more, examples of each. Make each example different from the other. Preserve the result for future use.

RE-CLASSIFICATION

For a certain reason, which will be demonstrated later, we will now reclassify the thirty-seven basic situations under two other general heads. By a study of them it may be observed that certain of the situations are of such a nature that their presence may introduce complications which result in innumerable other dramatic situations. The remaining ones are nearly always present as a result of the combination of others which have preceded. The first described, we will classify under the head of "Probable Cause For Action" situations, and the second, as "Resultant" situations.

PROBABLE CAUSE FOR ACTION SITUATIONS

(4)—Supplication, or entreaty.
(5)—Obstacles to love.
(6)—A rivalry between unequals.
(7)—Rivalry between kinsmen.
(8)—The enigma.
(9)—To love an enemy.
(12)—Possessed of a consuming ambition.
(13)—A fatal indescretion.
(14)—Pursuit.
(15)—Revolt, or rebellion.
(16)—Enmity between kinsmen.
(17)—An effort to obtain.
(18)—A daring effort.
(19)—Vengeance.
(20)—Vengeance against kinsmen
(21)—Mistaken jealousy.
(22)—Involuntary criminal love.
(23)—Struggle against a deity.
(24)—Abduction.
(25)—Sacrifice to passion.
(26)—Adultery.
(27)—Murderous adultery.
(28)—Criminal love.
(32)—Erroneous judgment, or an innocent suspected.
(34)—Learning of the dishonor of a loved one.

Here it will be seen that the majority of the basic situations are those which are calculated to introduce complications which will quickly bring on other dramatic situations. We may begin a story then, by simply starting with one of the situations which come under this head, and build to it by using a line of reasoning to determine what would naturally be expected to follow. This is writing stories by the process of INDUCTION.

Let us create a simple example. We will select Basic situation Number 6, "Rivalry Between Unequals." After having studied this one carefully we have learned that the rivalry may be between rich and poor, strong and weak, powerful and humble, good and bad, royalty and plebian, or where any circumstance places an unfair handicap on one of the rivals. The nature of the object which is desired by the two rivals may be position, wealth, the love of a woman, liberty or any one of many other things. Also, the individualities of the rivals may be varied almost without end.

EXAMPLE:

Let us suppose that the two rivals are rich and poor and that the object desired is the love of a pretty girl. This is common-place but simple. John, a poor boy, and Tom, who is wealthy, both love Mary. She is undecided. John pleads with Mary (Supplication). Failing to impress her, he decides to use different tactics. He argues that if he had a chance to meet Tom on equal ground, it would quickly be demonstrated which was the most deserving. (Effort to Obtain). Mary tells him that squatters are on her fathers place and that some one is stealing his cattle. She will put both John and Tom to the test. The first one that brings the guilty person to justice shall have her hand. (The Enigma). John starts out to detect the criminal. (Pursuit). He meets Fidelis, a pretty little maid, and begins to compare her with the haughty Mary. He soon learns that she is the daughter of the man he is after. (To Love an Enemy). Tom shows cowardice and refuses to undertake the mission of danger. Mary is disappointed in him. (Learning of the dishonor of a Loved One)., etc.

So far we have used the process of INDUCTION in building the story. If we decide now, what our climax is to be, and want to place it far enough ahead to make the story five reels in length, we will have to build backward, or use DEDUCTION. On the other hand we may continue with the process we have started until we nearly approach the climax.

It would be good practice for the student to try his hand at finishing the story we have started, and to then create examples with each of the other basic situations under the head of "Probable Cause for Action" situations.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the next issue of Camera Mr. Hill will describe plot construction by the process of DEDUCTION. He will create a concrete example just as in this chapter. Every reader who is interested in the subject of scenario writing or plot construction should preserve his or her copy of Camera as back numbers will be limited in quantity.

NO STRIKE!

If the eight-dollar-a-day aristocrats of the building industry run true to form, Anita Stewart will soon have one of the most unique dressing room bungalows on the Coast.

The building, now under course of construction, is too palatial and impressive to be termed cute, but it meets the happy combination of being roomy and still small snough to have a cozy, cheerful atmosphere. The roof is gabled and peaked and very pretty, and there is a balcony which Miss Stewart thinks is far more beautiful than the one made immortal by Romeo and Juliet.

Tom Bates has gone north with the Marshall Neilan Company playing a character part in "The End of the River."

New Director—Clarke Irvine directed, titled and cut a one-reel travelogue picture the day Abraham Lehr announced the purchase of the big field adjoining the Goldwyn Studios. The film shows the entire studio from the outside, with lap dissolves, running shots, and new panorams, bringing the beholder into the grounds and through the maze of stages and big street settings, winding up with "The smallest building of them all, but by no means the least, the film vault—insured for two millions." The picture was shown the following night, fifteen minutes after Irvine had finished cutting and assembling it.

Tom Gibson is to direct Gale Henry in a new series.

Eugene Besserer late of the D. W. Griffith Company, has been engaged by the Louis B. Mayer Company to appear in the next Anita Stewart production.

Miss Agnes Wiener, private secretary to D. W. Griffith, arrived from New York last Saturday with the negative of Mr. Griffith's latest production. She has been busy for one week shaking hands with friends, and will try to rest this week, returning next.

Anita Stewart is now settled in ner new home in Laughlin Park. While she was in New York, Rudolph Cameron, her husband and manager, secured the beautiful Italian villa on the hill, formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin. Since her return from the East the popular star has divided her time between exploring the house and surrounding gardens and unpacking her trunks preparatory to starting work on her new picture.

CONCERNING THE SCRIPT SHOOTERS

William Le Baron, author of "Apple Blossoms" and several other stage successes, has become editor of Cosmopolitan Productions, and will hereafter pronounce the final word on the feature film output of this company.

Winifred Dunn is to write a six-reel society play for the Tyrad Pictures in New York, for which General Director Jacques Tyrol has engaged a prominent star to play the leading role. The studio work will begin, it is announced, the first week in January. Miss Dunn's first screen work was done about six years ago. It was in the Chicago studio of Col. William M. Selig.

H. H. Van Loan has been asked to prepare a story for Eva Tanguay, who is at present in Los Angeles. Mr. Van Loan will do so provided he is able to finish the several plays he is now working upon. These will keep him occupied unti lthe first of the year.

Irene Rich, Goldwyn leading lady, wrote and sold a five-reel scenario over a year ago, while she was trying out the motion picture profession and did not know whether to become a star or an authoress of screen dramas. It was sold to Paralta Plays, Inc., which became defunct as a producing concern before the story was produced. Then it passed into the hands of Edwin Caspar, with a number of other stories. Just the other day Miss Rich received an offer from Mr. Caspar, now in New York, to play the lead in a series of four all star pictures, which will probably be produced at Brunton Studios. And one of those stories of the series is her own brain child:

Reginald Barker, who is directing Goldwyn pictures, wrote and directed his first stage play at the age of 16 years.

Philip J. Hurn of Universal has just finished two continuities intended as starring vehicles for David Butler. The first is from Leroy Armstrong's "Patsy Keep Your Head," and the other is an adaption of "The Girl in the Mirror," by Elizabeth Jordan.

Billy Wing will be given screen credit for "Vanishing Trails" the current Franklyn Farnum serial being filmed at Selig's.

LOCAL AERO CLUB

The latest in aerial organizations is the Goldwyn Aero Club, which was formed yesterday at a meeting of flying enthusiasts at the Goldwyn Studios in Culver City. This club is a bona fide organization and has already put upthe money for a new Curtiss JN4d two-seater plane to be delivered at the new club's field in Culver City by the Syd Chaplin people next week when the hangars will be completed and the take-off oiled and rolled.

Ex-Lieut. C. B. Manly, late of the U. S. army and an American ace in France, and Clarke Irvine are the organizers of the new club. The temporary officers are, C. B. Manly, president and treasurer; Clarke Irvine, vice-president and secretary; Mason N. Bitson, business manager; Charles P. Stallinger, director of construction; Claude Camp, director of maintenance, and Milton D. Gardner and W. F. Hutchinson, directors.

Chester S. Widom, also known as "Widdy," has just finished costuming production for Dustin Farnum Company, "The Corsican Brothers," also for Lew Cody Company, "The Butterfly Man." Mr. Widom was formerly with the Famous Players-Lasky Studio for nearly three years in capacity as costumer, and had complete charge of castuming Douglas Fairbanks' first "big four" production, "His Majesty, the American." Widdy is now costuming for Goldwyn Studio in Culver City. There are ten companies at work on that lot.

Dwight Crittenden, now playing the school teacher in Jack Pickford's "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," had traveled twenty thousand miles when only five years old.

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.), ingenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $2.00 per month.

ECHOES FROM THE GREAT WHITE WAY

New York, Nov. 24.—The D. W. Griffith Company has gone to Florida to take the exteriors for Mr. Griffith's second First National picture. The company is working near Miami and will make quite a part of the exteriors along the north Cuban coast. Also a number of scenes will be made in the interior of Cuba. Those who are cast, at the latest report, are Carol Dempster, Clarine Seymour, Richard Barthelmess and Adolphe Lestina.

Miss Doris Keane is also in Florida with Mr. Griffith, discussing the filming of "Romance," in which she is to be starred under his personal direction, it is stated.

Seena Owen has come East to make a picture. "The Princess Beloved" happened to be the very type needed for "The Woman Hater," Owen Moore's next Selznick production. She is now at work at the Selznick Fort Lee studios.

Vera McCord Productions, Inc., is producing "The Wild Fawn," by Mary Imlay Taylor. It is being directed by Chester DeVonde at the Bacon & Backer studios, 230 West Thirty-eighth Street, under the personal supervision of Miss McCord, treasurer and general manager of the new corporation. The story has been running as a novel in Munsey's Magazine for the last three months.

William Eisenhardt, former auditor of Triangle, and for the past three years comptroller of Hallmark Pictures Corporation, has resigned his post with the latter concern (effective some time this month) to enter the production field.

Catherine Calvert has left the forces of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to be one of the stars of Films, Incorporated, the newest motion picture producing corporation. Miss Calvert will be featured in this company's first photo-play, the production of which is now under way.

A verdict in favor of Mary Pickford was returned by the jury to Supreme Court Justice M. Warley Platzek Friday afternoon in the suit brought against her by Mrs. Cora C. Wilkening for $108,000, which the latter alleged was due her for services rendered in obtaining a contract from Adolph Zukor. The plaintiff said that Miss Pickford netted $1,000,000 on the contract and that the amount sued for was due her on commissions. The trial was the second of the same case, the former resulting in an award for Mrs. Wilkening, which was reversed on appeal and a new trial ordered.

George Fawcett, one of the best-known character actors on the spoken stage, has joined Vitagraph's staff of directors and will direct Corinne Griffith in her next feature. He comes here from the West Coast, where he has been assisting D. W. Griffith. Mr. Fawcett deserted the stage for the screen a few years ago and has since played in several notable productions. For a number of years he conducted Summer stock, which admirably prepared him for the duties of screen director.

Oscar Price is mentioned as a possibility for the position of Secretary of the Navy, and the best reports are that Bill McAdoo will be at least the silent president next campaign. Any more news from the Big 4?

BY-PRODUCTS

Frank Lawrence, film editor at Universal City, stood recently at a window of his office and ran through several reels of film, looking through the transparent strips of drama by measuring it off before the light. A woman passing turned to a friend and said: "The by-products of the motion picture industry are immense. Just look at that man making patent-leather belts out of old film."

Edfried Bingham, of the Goldwyn scenario department, is author of the two popular novels "Art Thou the Man?" and "The Heart of Thunder Mountain."

Tod Burns, now playing with Jack Pickford in Goldwyn's film version of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," is going to leave pictures to engage in mining work in Northern California.

Emily Chichester, now playing with Pauline Frederick in making "The Woman in Thirteen," has an ambition to go to England and play in comedies, says it would be great gratification to make an Englishman laugh.

Nick Cogley, who plays negro parts in Tom Moore's picture "Toby's Bow," and Jack Pickford's "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," has an uncle in the English parliament.

Octavus Roy Cohen, of the Goldwyn scenario department, has written six novels, three successful plays, and 200 short stories.

Naomi Childers, who appears in Goldwyn pictures, designs all her own gowns. She also has a great liking for pearls.

Thomas O'Brien has completed his contract with Frank Keenan and has been signed for a long term by Benjamin B. Hampton. He will first appear opposite Claire Adams in "The Dwelling Place of Light," from the novel by Winston Churchill. Jack Conway will direct.

Lew Collins, who starred in Klaw and Erlanger's Chicago productions of "The Fortune Hunter" and "Common Clay," has signed a stock contract at the Brunton studios. He is cast in Bessie Barriscale's next production.

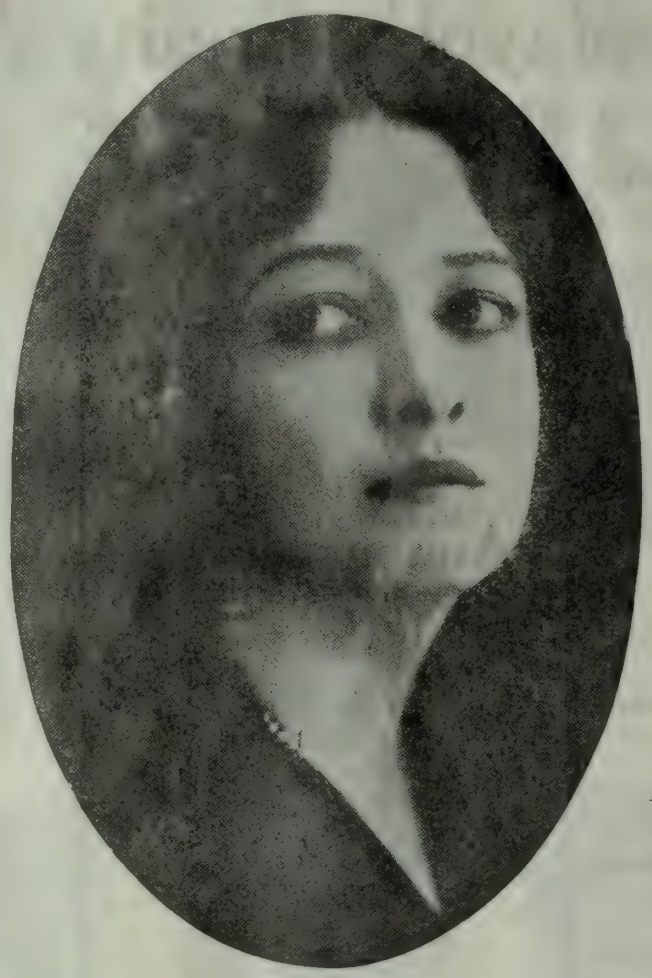
FRED JANISS



A Woman's Greatest Problem

As vital to every woman as life itself is the problem of choosing a husband. To Letty, the problem was fraught with difficulty. Her life had been a pitiful, unending struggle against poverty—barren of the comforts and luxuries that every woman craves.

Then three men sought her love. One, a moneyed barbarian; one, an unprincipled nobleman—a defiler of women; and the other, a struggler like herself, but a man worthy of the name.

On one side stood the gilded Palace of Wealth and its glittering promise; on the other stood the House of Poverty, with its drudgery and drabness lighted only by the flame of love.

Standing on the threshold of a great temptation, Letty made her choice—and beheld a startling revelation. See "The Loves of Letty." It tears aside the curtain from the great stage of Life, stripping bare the soul of a woman struggling against temptation. A dramatic thunderbolt that you will remember long after you have seen it.

PALMER·PHOTOPLAY·CORPORATION

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Instruction in Photoplay Writing

THE richest market in the world today for original story material is the photoplay market. Producers are scouring the country far and wide for story ideas that can be successfully made into moving pictures. Acceptable stories readily command $100 to $2000. One Palmer student sold his first play for $3000. Others have received from $350 to $1000 for their stories. Still others have obtained lucrative staff scenario positions and are now working in Los Angeles studios. The Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing enables the student to master photoplay fundamentals through correspondence instruction without loss of time or present position.

The Advisory Council

Directing the educational policy of the institution is an Advisory Council comprising CECIL B. DeMILLE, Director General of the Famous Players - Lasky Corporation; THOMAS H. INCE, Head of the Ince Studios; LOIS WEBER, Producer, Director and Author, and ROB WAGNER, Special Contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and Screen Authority.

The Sales Service

The Photoplay Sales Department serves as a connecting link between the writer and the buyer of stories. Material accepted for marketing is handled strictly on a commission basis. Writers are invited to investigate the unusual features of this service, which include registration, editing and personal representation at the studios. The department is headed by Kate Corbaley, well-known photoplaywright and author. Affiliated with the bureau are Bess Meredyth and Anne Scott, composing the Bess Meredyth Exchange.

Aside from this, however, an entirely new cast will be selected. It will be remembered that Joe Ryan is to be featured in another serial; so that his appearance with Mr. Duncan comes to an end in the last episode of "The Man of Might." It is stated that Mr. Duncan's decision to renew his serial contract was arrived at only this week, it being unknown until this time whether or not he would continue his activities with Vitagraph.

More Goldwyn Finances—Confirmation of the many stories appearing during the current week to the effect that the Du Pont Powder Company and others were joining forces financially with the Goldwyn Company, comes in a special announcement from the studio. This addition of resources in all probability will make Goldwyn the strongest and most powerful organization of its kind. Another announcement has it that a studio and laboratory equal in size to the Culver City plant will be erected in New York City.

Elect Vice-President.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Brentwood Film Corporation this week, Dr. W. H. Rimmer was elected vice-president of the company to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. R. G. Beebe, whose loss is severely felt by those who were associated with him in this undertaking.

Victor Schertzinger, together with his assistant cameraman, director and a group of players, have gone to New York to produce the next Mabel Normand picture at the Goldwyn studio.

STAFF CHANGES

This issue marks a change in the working staff of the Camera! partly through acquiring new signatures and some important shifts in the positions already established.

Due to the absence of Mr. Robbins for several months, much of the work of management has fallen unnecessarily on the shoulders of Mr. Cannon, who has been doubly burdened, due to his studio work. As a compensation, Mr. Cannon will now retire from active management and devote his time to pictures. Mr. Robbins assumes the position of business manager and managing editor.

Mr. Cannon, of course, retains his partnership and identification with this paper.

Miss Davis, who has been practically the editor of the entire paper, will devote her time to social news and work of a special nature.

Mr. King, who has been chief advertising solicitor, has returned from his vacation and assumes the post of advertising manager.

It is also with much pleasure that we announce Retta Badger, well known for several years as associate editor of the Times Magazine, to become acting editor of Camera! with the next issue. Mrs. Badger is too well known to need an introduction.

As a staff writer, Mr. Edward Reinack will give us from one to two columns weekly concerning what's going on across the waters. This news will be the very latest accurate reports available. The field will cover England, France, Italy, Austria and Germany.

They're naming their babies after Kathleen Clifford now. At the Douglas Fairbank's Studio, a miniature edition de luxe in the house of Rex Turnmeyer of the Fairbank's staff, is now Kathleen Clifford Turnmeyer. Such is fame.

Hello, Bill!—The well-known Mr. Fairbanks is now a full-fledged Elk. Last week Tommy O'Brien, accompanied by a howling mob of thirty other brawny young Elks, descended upon Doug. while he was peacefully posing for the camera at his studio in Hollywood. They tied him tight as a tamale, tossed him into an auto and hit it up for a Santa Monica lodge, where he was put through a lively initiation ceremony. Latest reports have it that Doug. is gunning for Mr. O'Brien.

Film Inspection Machine—Dudley T. Blanchard, Superintendent of the Cutting Room and Laboratories of the National Film Corporation's production plant in Hollywood, has completed the invention of a director's film inspection machine which promises possibilities. The machine is used in the cutting room for the purpose of matching long shots and close ups and for the proper placing of titles without the necessity of leaving the cutting table and projecting the picture upon the screen. Those who have examined it declare that by this device the time required for the editing of a film can be reduced one-third to one-half and also making it unnecessary ever to change the placement of a title. A number of different machines have been made and tried out for this purpose but all have proved inadequate. Blanchard's device, with its electrical attachments, it is said, renders the work rapid, accurate and practical. "Daddy" Daley, one of the first cameramen in the profession, built the machine under the supervision of the inventor. Blanchard has applied for patents.

Lionel Belmore, who appears with Will Rogers in the forthcoming Goldwyn picture, "The Strange Boarder," played on the stage with the late Henry Irving for over fifteen years.

Frank Braidwood, who is now playing in Goldwyn's filmization of Rex Beach's "Going Some," has lived in England, India, Australia, Scotland and America, and like the old U. S. A. best of all.

Harry Beaumont, director of Goldwyn pictures, has an ambition to direct a picture of his own with scenes all the way around the world.

Charles Clary, playing opposite Pauline Frederick in her latest Goldwyn picture "The Woman in Room Thirteen," appeared in the first five-reel feature made in the United States.

Sydney Dean, now supporting Will Rogers in the Goldwyn picture "The Strange Boarder," was once manager of a bank in New South Wales.

Helen Chadwick, now appearing in Goldwyn pictures, yearns to become a famous pianiste.

BEBE DANIELS

By Mildred Davis

In Bebe Daniels we have another child of the stage.

Little Bebe's first professional appearance was made at the tender age of ten weeks, in her father's stock company, for which her mother was leading woman. That was in Dallas, Texas, Bebe's birthplace. Since then, until she was eight years old, she was on the stage, doing all sorts of parts. When she was five she was co-starred in San Francisco, after which the Daniels family moved to Los Angeles. And there they remained.

Ten years ago when picture production in Los Angeles was beginning to flourish, Bebe, who was just eight years old, was offered a part in a Selig picture.

"I'll never forget it," she tells us, "it was a good part, and the pay was very good, but, as young as I was, I was terribly ashamed of it. You know stage people thought the pictures were disgraceful, at that time."

Even the picture work appealed to Bebe and she did several pictures, both with Bison and Selig, before giving up the work for school. She was placed in a Los Angeles convent, where she stayed until she was thirteen years old. Her picture work was then resumed, continuing her studies at the same time. After a short while in child plays, she qualified for the more popular field of ingenues.

Four years ago Bebe signed with the Rolin Film Company to appear opposite Harold Lloyd, in comedies. This engagement was preceded by a short season on the stage, which Bebe declares was one of the funniest events of her short career.

She was called by a small stock company at Long Beach to do the ingenue in a regular old melodrama. It was a hurry call—gave her one day to get over sixty "sides." She learned them and managed to struggle through the first performance, being duly abbetted by the rest of the company. The leading man was new, and the heavy had imbibed too heavily of the flowing nectar (i. e., booze). Bebe saw the season through and called it enough.

Through her comedy work she has become very well known, and has gained a store of valuable experience. She attracted the notice of not only the fans but of the profession as well. So favorable was her impression that six months ago Jesse L. Lasky offered her a contract to appear in Paramount-Artcraft pictures. She accepted, signing for four years.

And this is the strange thing about Miss Bebe's recent work. Though she will not be nineteen until next month, and has but lately graduated from light comedy work, she has been doing with Lasky's the most "willainous of wamps." She has portrayed with unusual success the characters of adventuresses and divorcees—women much older than she, and of far wider experience. She played Vice in "Everywoman, and in C. B. de Mille's "Why Change Your Wife" she did the heavy. Certainly strange proceedings for one so young.

Bebe is delighted with her new work in drama. She is very conscientious and talks eagerly of her work, and of items relative to her work. She is a sincere admirer of Cecil de Mille, and takes great interest in the development of the productions. The attention given to elaborate details and intricate beauties are particularly interesting to Miss Daniels, due to her own love of beauty. She takes the greatest pleasure in Oriental art—whether in customes, ornaments or music. Be is a chosen "hobby" or a natural expression, it is certainly well suited to the Daniels beauty, which is, indeed, Oriental.

"All this Oriental stuff amuses me in a way," Bebe laughed, when speaking of it, "because my mother is Spanish and my father was Scotch. Rather an odd result from such a combination, don't you think?"

Yes, odd, but pleasing. And here is another thing for Miss Daniel's admirers to look forward to. Cecil de Mille is going to produce "The Wanderer" and Bebe will have an important part. Of course, the cast has not been announced, but if you are familiar with the play you can draw your own conclusions about the role the recently established vampire will do.

Russell Simpson is silent these days even to his press representative. But we smell a "mice" because Russ is in receipt of two stories if satisfactory will be produced with him in the title role.

Sydney Ainsworth, who is playing in Goldwyn pictures, has an ambition to own a big country home.

Lawson Butt is a fine piano player and spends most of his time at this instrument when not working in Goldwyn pictures.

HELL FIRE AND BRIMSTONE

WOMAN

There is supposed to be one supreme test to any story, be it told through the medium of pen, of song or of celluloid. It must show quickly and plainly the answers to these three questions: First, what did the author set out to do? Second, did he do it? Third, was it worth doing?

I don't know when I have had two hours of more real enjoyment than I experienced during the prologue and filming of Maurice Tourneur's latest creation. Part of this joy was on the screen, part of it came from watching the causes of a number of very caustic criticisms written mostly by the female of the species. Added yet to this was a running fire of comment heard both from seats, behind and in front, which were occupied by women; and one might conclude from listening to these comments that Mr. Tourneur has not made any tremendous hit with the opposite sex. On the other hand, there were husbands present who enjoyed it loudly to say the least. All of which proves that Mr. Tourneur did something. Now, let us try to find out what he did and whether he meant to do it or not.

Beginning with the prologue of unusual beauty and interest, he sets forth a series of chapter plays carrying the theme of woman through different ages down until the present time; the most modern period beginning and ending the series, with an occasional flash between the episodes of the past. We are given first a husband and wife in an ordinary petty quarrel. The wife accuses the husband of knowing nothing of woman except that which he has read in books. The husband, slightly cynical, laughs and watches her make her exit. He turns then to the encyclopaedia and under "Woman" is supposed to see the different episodes that take place in the film.

It is at this point that we must decide whether Mr. Tourneur is giving expression to his own opinion, or whether he is making the one character of the modern husband responsible. We chose the latter, and it is with this decision in view that we claim for Mr. Tourneur's picture not only an excellent production, but one which is a credit to womanhood in general. We choose to believe that the man who was reading learned before he finished, that no matter what her whimsicalities may be, there is, nevertheless, in the fully developed woman the most beautiful ideal that God has yet chosen to set upon the earth; but, she must be developed.

The episodes tend to build from one stepping stone to another the fact that woman is not developed to her full extent until she has experienced the one great passion, the one great emotion —love. Not the love that begins at 3:15, goes through the justice court at 3:35 and ends up in a fight at 7:30; but the one real, enduring love that consumes all things and is a part of eternity. This, according to one critic, is described in the sentence: "Mr. Tourneur evidently believes that the only thing woman is good for is Red Cross nursing and motherhood." However, the critic seems to have a strangely distorted view of the matter. The Red Cross nurse is beginning to experience the love which will make of her a developed woman; and motherhood is a still higher step toward the pinnacle.

In the matter of individual acting Henry West, Flore Revalles, Faire Binney and Warren Cook seem to us to be far the more convincing; in fact, Mr. West's portrayal of Adam was worth the price of admission. In photography it must be admitted that the usual beauty of the Tourneur productions is not present. The first episode is wonderfully well done, with double exposures and beautiful back lightings. The balance of the picture seems far too contrasty with soot and whitewash taking the place of the beautiful softness seen in the first reels.

In his direction of the picture Mr. Tourneur undoubtedly lays claim to some of the finest bits of atmosphere that have ever been screened. The scenes are short, the players unknown; yet it has never been our privilege to see backgrounds drawn with people in a finer sense of proportion and fitness than was exhibited in this picture.

It has been said that the continuity of the picture is sacrificed by the episode features; but, although we watched this very carefully, we could not see how one change made in cutting could improve the picture as it stands now.

As a box-office attraction far be it from us to make any prophesys; but it would seem that a great measure of the picture's success would be in having the first night audience in the average city see the picture in the right light and not become twisted in its idea of what Mr. Tourneur set out to do.

SOCIAL FRICASEE AND CAPER SAUCE

By Mildred Davis

Surprise Party—This week brings another motion picture birthday. Clarke Irvine, of the Goldwyn Skeleton, is the honored one in this case. Thursday evening Mr. Irvine's sister, Miss Myra Irvine, gave a surprise party at the Donovan home in celebration of her brother's birthday. Those who enjoyed Miss Irvine's hospitality included Miss Irene Rich, Miss Leatrice Joy, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Badger, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Cooley, Mr. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Grey, Mr. Jack Donovan, Mr. Bill Badger, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burton and Mr. Hume.

The guests were entertained with several special musical numbers, but the chief feature of the evening was Jack's Brazilian parrot. This parrot has superceded the Donovan bull dog in favor, and has now attained the dignity of riding about in the Donovan roadster.

Oh, yes, we almost forgot another important addition to the festivities. The Goldwyn orchestra furnished music for dancing.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

Another Star Appears—Whether she will be a comedienne as per her father's well known calling, or whether her future will be punctured by the figures of the dance, are things about which it is far too early to speculate; but the fact remains that Miss Ruth Marlynn Wilson has arrived and will make her future home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilson. She weighs nine pounds. This latest and cutest addition to the local colony made her appearance early in the morning of Wednesday the 26th at the Angelus hospital. Mrs. Wilson is doing nicely and Thomas is bearing up as well as could be expected.

MILDRED HARRIS CHAPLIN PARTY

Celebrating the anniversary of her natal day, November 29th, with a charming function at the Chaplin home in the Wilshire district, Mildred Harris Chaplin's invitation list read like a page from the "Who's Who?" in the Cinema Blue Book. Among those invited Mary Pickford, Kathleen Clifford, Anita Stewart, Blanche Sweet, Louise Glaum, Douglas Fairbanks, J. Parker Reed, Bennie Ziedman, Henry Mayer, Randolph Cameron, and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Ince figured conspicuously.

Birthday Dance—Mrs. John Harron gave a dance last Saturday evening in honor of her daughter Madeleine's eighteenth birthday.

Thirty-two guests were present, including the Misses Manaker, Ann and Marie Cudahy, Margaret Stellacy, Thelma MacCarthy, Francis Parks, Sarah Craven, Clara Aggeler, Dorothy Mueller, Freida Van De Minden, Elizabeth McCann and Marie Scott. Also present were the Messrs. Adrian and John Costello, Frank Goodall, William Webster, Leo Aggeler, Ford Aggeler, George Fuller, Turner, George Weiler, Frank Hoyt, Louis Artique, Jack Hollenbach, Marvin and Dr. H. Adair.

Music for this interesting event was furnished by the McQuaid orchestra.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

Thomas O'Brien, formerly leading man for Charlotte Walker, entertained a group of motion picture people Thanksgiving evening at the Sunset Inn: Wedgewood Nowell, Roy Stewart, Nancy Case, Elliott Howe, Henry Walthall, Lew Cullen, Fritzi Brunette, Claire Adams and Renee R. Rivierre.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

Engagement Announced—Hall Griffin and Mack Stenglar have announced their engagement, and the marriage ceremony is scheduled for the first of the year. Their friends have a "hunch," however, that almost any date in the near future is apt to be the "fatal" day.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brunton returned this week from their motor jaunt to San Francisco. Enroute to the northern city the producer and his wife were guests of several important social functions; notably a carnival at Del Monte. While in San Francisco, Mr. Brunton obtained a number of rare tapestries, rugs, keramics, and art curios for the property department of the studio.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

Mr. H. Tipton Steck and Arthur Edeson tendered a dinner party last Wednesday evening to Miss Lucille Bay, who left December 1st for the West Indies. Among the guests were Ruth Stonehouse (otherwise known as Mrs. Jos. A. Roach) and her husband Jos. Roach and Miss Pauline Starke.

Dug-Out Benefit—Saturday night a big benefit dance will be given at the Dug-Out in Hollywood. Elaborate plans have been laid by Mrs. Meredith Woodward and the Dug-Out girls for a successful event. Everyone is invited and the proceeds from the affair will go toward a Christmas fund for the relief of poor families. The good work in this endeavor is not limited to the dance alone, for numerous members are doing sewing and donating clothes, books and staple food. An appeal is sent out to the picture people to do what they can, even though it be in a small way, toward swelling the fund or adding to the collection of useful and entertaining articles.

Margarita Fischer, American-Mutual Star.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

Installment Three

Building By Deduction

From a study of the previous chapter we have learned that twenty-five of the basic dramatic situations may be classified under the head of "Probable Cause For Action." This is encouraging to the story writer. Every story must have a "cause for action." Now when it is borne in mind that each of the basic situations may appear in dozens of forms, each of which may supply the cause for action, and that the result may take a thousand or more different courses, it is easy to see that material for the construction of story plots is as inexhaustable as the air which we breathe.

It is true that there is nothing new under the sun, but there will always be new forms of combinations of those things which do exist. Did you ever stop to consider that while every man has two eyes, two ears, a mouth and might be paraded before you, and no two would look exactly alike? Remember also that there are only eight basic notes of sound, yet there has been thousands of tunes, all different—and there will be thousands more. As in the case of the dramatic situations, each basic note has its variations. It is their different arrangement, and tempo at which they are produced that make an unending variety of melodies.

Let us now study the basic dramatic situation which may be classified under the head of "Resultant" situations. Any of these may provide a climax for our story. They are:

(1)—Deliverance.
(2)—Recovery of lost loved ones.
(3)—The miracle.
(10)—Sacrifice for an ideal.
(11)—Self sacrifice for another.
(29)—The loss of loved ones.
(30)—To fall prey to misfortune.
(31)—A disaster.
(33)—To be obliged to sacrifice loved ones.
(35)—Madness or mental derangement.
(36)—Slaying kins man before recognition.
(37)—To suffer from remorse.

Number thirty-five, "Madness or mental derangement" might also be classified under the head of a resultant situation, as its presence is certainly calculated to bring on many complications. Indeed, there are some cases where any of the others in this list might appear as a cause for action, but they have been classified as they appear, for the sake of convenience.

It is said that in all his writings, Shakespeare overlooked number thirty-six, "Slaying kinsman before recognition." This is certainly a tragic situation and it is surprising that the great dramatist should not have availed himself of its use.

As before stated there are two methods of plot building at our disposal. One is to select a situation from the "Probable cause for action" list, and to then build ahead to the climax. The other is to choose one that will make a fitting climax, and to then begin a line of reasoning to determine what combination of circumstances might have led to it, or to build backward. The first is INDUCTION and the latter DEDUCTION. These two methods may be combined in the construction of a single plot, or they may be used alternately.

Let us create a simple example of the process of deduction:

We will choose basic dramatic situation number one as our climax. It is "Rescue." This suggests that we introduce some character who is in great peril. We determine the nature of the peril. If we are going to have a rescue, there must be another character who effects the deliverance. Love interest is always desirable in a story, hence we will have one of our characters to be a man and the other a woman.

We will give a name to the two characters, describe the peril and the means used to effect the rescue.

David is about to be hung by a crowd of angry cowboys. Nell rides in at breakneck speed and covers the crowd with her gun. They let David down. She has Pete tied to a rope which she trails from the pummel of her saddle. She convinces them that Pete is guilty of the offence for which they are about to hang David.

Here we have a climax. There must have been a cause for action. Looking over the list of "Probable cause for action" situations, we find number thirty-two, "Erroneous judgment, or an innocent suspected." That looks good. What crime or offense could David have been accused of falsely? It might have been murder. Suppose the foreman of Nell's ranch has been murdered. How was he murdered and what for? Why was suspicion cast upon David. If it was done by Pete, what was his motive? Was he in love with Nell and jealous of the foreman? Or was he in the act of stealing a horse, caught by the foreman and forced to shoot? How did David and Nell become acquainted. Was David in love with Nell or did he love a chum of her's? etc.

When we arrive at the beginning of our story, we now have a bare skeleton of the plot. The next thing is to go back over it, polish up the rough edges, add minor characters and details—and we are sure to find where we can add other dramatic situations. The question of whether we have told the story in such a manner as to arouse interest and hold suspense, will be taken up in another chapter.

CONSTRUCTION NOT PURELY MECHANICAL

While it is desirable that the dramatic student make a careful study of the basic dramatic situations and their many variations, he or she must not, for an instant, believe that all that is necessary in order to construct a plot is to string a bunch of situations together as a child would construct various designs with his tinkertoys.

A full knowledge of basic plot material and its study will stimulate the imagination of the writer. Why should he or she wait until an unusual situation presents itself in a newspaper item, a personal experience, or that of another, or until something that "really happened" takes place, for the germ of a story, when everything that ever did or will happen, of a dramatic nature, could be a product of the imagination by applying the processes of induction and deduction to the thirty-seven basic dramatic situations and their multiple variations.

It is said that artists catch snowflakes and photograph them through magnifying glasses in order to obtain novel and artistic designs from which to make patterns. When you come to think of it, there is not a pattern or design thus obtained that could not be produced artifically by the artist himself if he has the creative ability. Actual happenings, on which many writers base their plots, are like the snowflakes. A peculiar combination of dramatic situations are accidentally thrown together. Perhaps it has taken months or even years for the complete result to take form, while the creative imagination of a trained dramatist

FRANCE

Some of the chief attractions at Paris during the first part of November were Mabel Normand in "The Little Village Demon," and Ruth Clifford in "The Cabaret Girl" at the Maxivaux, followed at the same house by Maurice Tourneur's "White Heather," considered a great success, photographically, histrionically and with regard to the well selected Scotch scenery. "Le poney de Rio Jim," with William Hart, and a comedy with Charlie Chaplin, are likewise highly commended. At the Tivoli "La reine du Charbon" with Mme. Jacobini in the leading role and "Les Plus Beaux Yeux du Ranch" with Dustin Farnum proved centers of attraction. Dustin Farnum was also shown at the Omnia, in "Le Sort Plus Beau," and Ruth Roland in the serial, "Tigre Scare."

GERMANY

We hear that at the Exposition for ndustry and Commerce, which took place at Frankfurt on Main (close to the German region now occupied by the Allies and associated powers) in October, there was a remarkable absence of nearly all the leading firms of optical and related industries. Goerz, Steinheil, Voigtlaender, Zeiss were not represented. The most probable explanation of this circumstance is the fact, that aforementioned concerns hold such enormous orders from Germany and abroad, that already their capacity is taxed for several years to come. Different novelties were shown. A new flashlight powder, Fumosin, nearly entirely smokeless, by a firm from Offenbach, a new film print machine "Standard," a film drying drum of steel, a film measuring apparatus.

Following we give the opinion of a German authority on the present state and future of the German film market.

"In the German Film Industry at the present time great debates are taking place regarding the abolition of restrictions on importation of films and the danger of foreign competition. Regarding importation the idea seems to prevail that importation ought to be allowed; some concerns incline towards a period of protection, as for the next season all contracts have been signed; many, especially the small factories will object to importation. Ultimately it will be found that if Germany wishes to export films, she will be obliged to allow foreign ones to enter, for the simple reason that a refusal would cut off the foreign market. On the other hand the value of the German mark is of the greatest importance. There exists a further danger which is that the foreign film producers, should there be no control, will import all their inferior products and even at the risk of a loss will try to conquer the German market and kill the young industry. The importation should therefore only be allowed very restrictedly. Already at present there are said to be awaiting importation in adjoining countries quantities of film amounting to several times the yearly output of Germany. In ventilating the subject of foreign competition the United States is mentioned foremost, while the French and Italian producers, so powerful up to the present, are hardly cited. Indeed it is learned that the French and Italian films are less dangerous to the German producer as they have lost much of their importance in the world trade. To the United States one will have to look for the most serious competition and already today it seems more than likely that a great part of the small and smallest German concerns will perish in the coming strife and that only the largest firms and such which make the very best films will survive. However, the demand for German film from abroad is great. Not alone Austria and the Balkans, which obtained their film from Germany during the war are buyers, but also neutral countries and Greece, Argentine and several others."

William A. Vogel, formerly interior decorator for National and Ince and later for Constance Talmadge, sailed the 29th for England and France on the steamship Adriatic, to select furnishings and objects of art for a wealthy New York family's new Long Island home. Mr. Vogel recently recovered from a break down and pneumonia, which he contracted while decorating the Swift home in Chicago.

Miss Sylvia Jocelyn is with Tom Mix Company in "Three Gold Coins," working title.

CONCERNING THE SCRIPT SHOOTERS

Frank M. Dazey and Director Edward Jose collaborated on the script of Caroline Lookhart's novel, "The Fighting Shepherdess," now in production by Anita Stewart.

Luther Reed, author of "White Ashes," the coming Dorothy Dalton-Ince feature, also prepared the scenario, burning the midnight oil to get it out on time.

Katherine Reed has come out to Los Angeles as a special writer for the Myron Selznick Company. She adopted Elaine Hammerstein's first Selznick feature from a one-act playlet by S. F. Kaufman, and she is the author of the Selznick story now going into production at the Brunton Studio. Miss Reed was formerly on the Vitagraph writing staff in the east, and adapted the majority of the O. Henry stories produced there. Previous to taking up film work, she wrote advertising for one of the largest advertising firms in the east.

H. Thompson Rich, who, before going abroad to do his bit, was editor of the Forum Magazine, and who since that time has been on the Vitagraph scenario staff in New York City, has been signed by Metro and is expected to arrive at once to assume his duties in the scenario department of the West Coast Studio.

Comedy scenario writers may land jobs with the Hank Mann Comedies in Hollywood if present plans of Morris R. Schlank materialize. Mr. Schlank proposes to establish a complete scenario department at the Hollywood studio.

H. Tipton Steck, who has finished adaptation continuity of "The Forbidden Woman," Clara Kimball Young's next starring vehicle, has been engaged to adapt and write continuity of "The Yellow Typhoon," from the famous novel by Harold McGrath, which will be used as a starring vehicle for Miss Anita Stewart.

William Parker is whipping the next King Vidor story into shape for production. Mr. Vidor is collaborating.

AMONG THE MEN .... BEHIND THE GUNS

An invention which may be of great value to the art of photography was perfected recently by Eliot C. Howe, a motion picture director, who is now making Frank Keenan photoplays. The principal of the invention is the use of three or four complete lenses and lens apertures instead of one. The result is said to be clearer, brighter images, with great depth of focus, produced by much shorter exposure. Mr. Howe has experimented so far only with the motion picture camera, but the possibilities of improvement in photography of all kinds are immense. By adjustment beautiful soft-focus effects are produced. Its great depth and defining power will make the multiple lens of almost universal focus, and pictures produced by it will appear to stand out from the paper rounded, and in natural perspective. Color photography will be vastly simplified by this method, using three lenses with color filters for green, violet and red rays, the primary colors of light. This will accomplish by a single exposure what has hitherto required three exposures to accomplish.

Dave Kisson has moved from the Garson Company and is now the latest addition to the camera staff of Marshall Neilan Productions. He was Neilan's cameraman several years ago when the young producer was directing for Famous Players Lasky.

George Webber has gone East with Victor Schertzinger to film the next Mabel Normand production, "Maggie," which will be made at the New York Goldwyn studio.

King Gray is twisting his Bell & Howell with the Ben Wilson Company.

Len Powers, one of the official photographers with the American army in France, is now turning the crank for the Hank Mann Comedies.

What the motion photographer knows as a floating mat box—a device geared to a camera shaft and used to "float" one scene off and another scene on without any visible parting line—has been purchased for the use of Metro cameramen by C. P. Butler, general superintendent of the studio. The device is the invention of Gaetano ("Tony") Gaudio, who claims that it eliminates all guess work in making accurate double exposures.

A studio record was made when Robert Kurrle ran a mile and a third of film through his Bell and Howell in one day's photographing of "The Right of Way." The record was made on location. The company started work at 7:30 o'clock Saturday morning, and continued until 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Seventy scenes were photographed, and a total of over 7000 feet of film exposed in twenty-two and a half hours.

Tony Gaudio is shooting "The Fighting Shepherdess," with Anita Stewart. From the advance information given concerning the script there should be ample opportunity for beautiful location work using sheep as backgrounds and the long ranges of the grazing country for much of the outdoor stuff.

Joe Walker, who photographed "Back to God's Country," has just returned from a twelve weeks' auto tour of Washington, Oregon and Idaho, object of which was to pick locations for Nell Shipman's next picture. He states, however, that so far he is quite well satisfied with California.

Scenario Market

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

EDNA SCHLEY AND WM. CAMPBELL TO BECOME PRODUCERS

Telegraphic communications from New York state: The Schley-Campbell Comedy Productions have met with great success, and have just closed deals that call for thirteen two-reel and twenty-four one-reel comedies in the next year.

William Campbell's animal comedies are in a class by themselves, having appeared on the screen for the last five years, released through Paramount and Fox Companies. His "Wild Lions and Tame Women" is one of the funniest animal comedies ever produced.

Edna Schley, a niece of Rear Admiral Schley, has been instrumental in getting this organization together. She is a noted author and successful business woman, maintaining offices in Hollywood for the past three years, handling the works of Celebrated Writers for the screen. Under the pen name of "Norris Shannon" she has written numerous stories produced by the biggest stars in photoplays.

Lieut. Commander Stephen W. Wallace, Ret., who, until his retirement two months ago, was handling the affairs of Uncle Sam in the San Diego Navy Yard, will act as Treasurer of the company.

Willie Hopkins, the famous sculptor and art critic, late of Laskey's Studios, whose "Miracles in Mud" are best known on the screen, will have charge of the Art department, designing of acts and technical work.

K. M. Miles of New York will take care of the publicity and spend a great part of his time on this coast.

Al McKinnon, who far a number of years has been identified with the Campbell Comedies, will be acting manager of the organization.

Arrangements have already been completed with John Rounan, of the E. and R. Jungle Studios, for the animals to be used in the comedies and work will begin immediately on Mr. Campbell's return from New York.

NEILAN STARTING

Marshall Neilan will begin work on his second independent production next week, while waiting for suitable weather conditions to prevail in the north to complete the exterior scenes of his first production, 'The River's End."

The new picture, the title of which has not been announced, will be made at the Douglas Fairbanks studio in Hollywood and in the cast will be Marjorie Daw, Matt Moore, Wesley Barry, Betty Bouton and Tom Guise. The business offices of the Neilan company will remain at 1723 Allesandro Street.

Henry Kolker has completed filming and is now cutting his first production as author-director for the Brentwood, "The Third Generation," for early release through Robertson-Cole.

Edward Kull is directing a new two-reeler, "Blind Chance," at Universal City, with a cast featuring Robert Burns, Natalie Warfield, Peggy O'Dare and Charles Dorian, while Phil Rosen is supervising another short subject, "Roarin' Dan," with Hoot Gibson and Ethel Shannon in the cast.

"Alias Whispering White," a totally different story of the west by W. G. Tuttle, has been secured by Universal as the next starring vehicle for Harry Carey.

A dark stage measuring 65 feet by 175 feet will be constructed shortly at the corner of Gower street and Santa Monica boulevard, Hollywood, by the National Film Corporation, owners of the property. According to I. Bernstein, production manager for the National, the 1920 production schedule of his concern requires considerable additional stage space, the dark stage of the dimensions stated above meeting the need nicely.

Taylor Holmes, producer-star, will release his productions through Metro. Mr. Holmes will organize his own company.

BIBLE FILM STARTED

The Historical Film Corporation of America, the organization recently made for the purpose of filming the Bible, announce that work has begun at their new studio, located near the foot of the Verdugo hills, about a mile northeast of Burbank.

The picture will probably be released under the title, "The Pageant of the Bible." It will be in the nature of a serial, each episode being designated as a "Spectacle." There will be in excess of fifty of these Spectacles and probably a hundred. Each Spectacle will consist of two full reels.

The first Spectacle will be "The Creation," a visualization of the first chapter of Genesis No release date can be announced as it is not known how soon the first Spectacle will be completed, but it is expected to get the Pageant well on its way before spring. It may require two years to complete the entire work or it may require five, but President McGill believes that no time limit can be fixed until the first three Spectacles are completed.

The Pageant will terminate with The Ascension of Christ, as being the logical ending of the Bible story. The working staff of the company is comfortably settled in the old Hinsdale farm house, which has been remodeled into offices and workshops. The first stage has just been completed, but others will be erected as rapidly as needed.

The city of Jerusalem, at the time of Christ, will be constructed in the foothills in a place where the topography is almost identical with the site of Jerusalem. This will be the largest set ever built in the history of the motion picture industry.

The Garden of Eden will be built in a canyon of the Verdugo hills on the land of the Southern California Corporation, which has placed a hundred thousand dollars worth of trees, plants, flowers and shrubs at the disposal of the company.

Williams Casts for Metro—Horace Williams, who was Metro's casting director for a year and a half, resumes that position Monday, according to David H. Thompson, production manager. Mr. Williams has been affiliated for ten months with the service bureau of the Motion Pictures Producers' Association. Mr. Williams was born and schooled in Dallas, Texas; he fought in the war with Spain, and afterwards coached football and studied law. He came to California in 1914 when his health broke down. William Ely, who has been casting director at Metro, for the past ten months, has gone to the Balboa Studios where he is co-directing. SATURDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1919

It is not very often that the New York Times bursts into paens of unstinted praise with regard to a motion picture actor. The following, then, concerning Richard Barthelmess and Griffith, is unusual enough to demand attention:

"Much of a man's character and life may be revealed in the way he shoots.

"Shortly after the appearance of D. W. Griffith's 'Broken Blossoms,' the writer remarked on the vehemence of the revolver with which the Chinese poet kills the English prizefighter, the reckless way in which it spits out its bullets in a torrent, and so for the moment is the man who desperately resorts to the unfamiliar and terrifying means of violence to destroy violence incarnate.

"In 'Scarlet Days' Mr. Griffith has made another scene of shooting. This time the principal is Alvarez, a Spanish outlaw in the uncurbed California of 1849, whose days are all scarlet. From youth, it may be assumed, he has lived on horseback, with a weapon for either hand, intoxicated with the joy of his dangerous life, glorifying in his ability to make a quicker draw and a truer shot than his adversary, a man to whom shooting is an art and wasting a shot a sin. When Alvarez shoots, therefore, he is not like the frantic Chinese poet. In one scene he is in a cabin attacked by a Sheriff's posse. He darts from window to window, eagerly peering for an exposed head or limb, firing in one direction and then another, each shot a distinct act, every aim for a particular mark. He is alert, cool, and always smiling in keen relish for what is fun to him. He does not hate the men he is killing, as the Chineman hates Battling Burrows. His victims simply play a necessary part in his sport.

"Richard Barthelmess, is the Chinese in 'Broken Blossoms' and Alvarez in 'Scarlet Days,'' and it is his art, as well as that of Mr. Griffith, that illuminates each character in his own scene."

THE GERMAN MARKET

In this issue, Mr. Reinack, our foreign news editor, gives a very complete digest of "Who's Who" in the German film industry, and we have asked him to make it a point to get every bit of information available as to just what is going on in the German empire, or whatever it is right now, as it has a distinct bearing on American production. While trade with the enemy is shut off just at present, the said enemy is becoming judiciously busy, and it is a safe wager that he is heDitsafea cnt'rle Cffffb,d ETAOIN ETAOIN ETAOINN leaving no stone unturned to fill every picture with as much German propoganda as possible in order to stimulate trade when the channels are re-opened. The time, then is coming when the local producer is to be asked to do something to counteract this movement. If Camera! can prepare him with the news of what has already occured, he will be in better shape to do his bit in support of American trade abroad.

BOLSHEVISM IN PICTURES

When the world war brought the motion picture interests to the front with every department uniting in the effort to produce pictures of a patriotic and propaganda nature, the power of the screen made itself known for the first time in its history, in fact it surprised even the most optimistic in the industry itself, and the press of the nation recognized this power and gave credit. Crude as were many of the films, as viewed in the time that has now elapsed, they nevertheless served, and with honor.

Now, however, it comes a different problem, that of combating the Bolshevik propoganda, and doing it in an effective manner. The war film found an audience already excited and stirred with at least some degree of patriotic fervor. The scenes we now remember having received wild outbursts of applause would not hold an audience today. They were too much along the type of soap-box oratory. The anti-bolshevist picture must be made along a different line, more subtle, less melodramatic, and appealing to the cold intelligence of every type of audience. And they must, foremost of all, be logical.

An audience distinctly critical will greet these pictures, for it must be admitted and held in mind that the average American has not yet placed his stamp of disapproval on the Lenine theory, and the government has been tending more and more each administration to introduce legislation based on theories distinctly socialistic. The laborer is going to find out the truth about the bolshevik theory before he marks it finally N. G. Thus it will be seen that any picture drawn too broadly, too plainly propoganda or partisan must inevitably fail, and in many cases react against both producer and exhibitor, as well as weakening the cause for which it was made.

SCENARIO CLASS

A beginning class in scenario writing has been started by the University of Southern California, under the lectureship of William Gilmore Beymer, of the extension division. The class is held Thursday evenings from 4 to 6 p. m. at 405 Union League building. The membership is limited to fifty.

ANOTHER FILM CORPORATION

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the state secretary by the Union Label Film Company. The incorporators are: Seymour Hastings, F. P. Young and Fred Caldwell. The capital stock is $75,000 of which $15 was subscribed.

FOREIGN NEWS DIGEST

By Edward Reinach

As only little information concerning the German Film Industry has come to our knowledge during the period of the war, we give today, complementing our article of last week, a few details of its financial aspect.

The biggest producing firms in Germany at the present time are, (1)—The Universum Film A. G., which has absorbed the following concerns: The Union Projection Company, The Messter Film Co., The Oliver Concern with all its theaters, The May Film Company. (2)—The Decla Concern. (3)—The Rheinische Lichtbild Company. (4)—The Munich Lichtspielkunst Company.

The Decla Concern has a capital of eleven million Marks, several millions of which are now in the hands of Mr. Pommer, whose concern was chiefly devoted to film production and film leasing. The remaining and biggest part of the stock is owned by a banker in Bremen and by a Rhenish Glass factory. Besides these eleven million Marks the Decla Concern disposes of more than three million Marks in credits abroad. The moving spirit of this combination is Mr. Oliver, who left the Universum Film Co., a few months ago. The Decla plans to dedicate itself not only to producing, but also to exhibiting; besides the cultivation of its German interests it aspires foreign relations, especially the Russian market, for which purpose it already has opened a branch office at Riga.

In Berlin it intends to construct a huge motion picture theater in a building, which until now was used for different sports. It has further leased Hagenbecks Zoological Garden; fifty acres of which were set aside exclusively for producing purposes and the building of a vast studio.

The Rheinische Lichtbild Company, which has existed little over a year, seems to have worked without profit during the period. Here a new organization is being formed, backed by one of the biggest banks of Berlin, which up to the present time had held aloof of all film interests; a transfer of headquarters to Berlin and a change of name to Deutsche Bioscop A. G., is proposed. The present capital is five and one-half million Marks. The concern owns two well equipped studios at Babelsberg, twenty theaters in Berlin and twenty more in other German cities; nine film exchanges in Germany and one in Vienna; it has further concluded a community of interests in Copenhagen and is also negotiating for connections in Holland.

New motion picture theaters are constantly springing up all over the young republic, in Berlin alone twelve large ones, the biggest containing four thousand seats.

The whole capital invested in the German Motion Picture Industry including Motion Picture Theaters amounts to about eight billion Marks, which even at the present low exchange represents the formidable sum of approximately $200,000,000.

Editor Camera:

A little more than one year ago THE PLAYCRAFTERS were formed, a club of writers and actors, interested in writing, criticising and producing their own plays.

The club has now grown to over one hundred members, has given two public performances at the Gamut Club Theatre, and is increasing in membership so rapidly that they have twice had to move to larger quarters, and now threaten to double their initiation fee.

Their work has attracted such favorable attention that Mr. Pantages has offered them the use of his theatre for public performances of thei sketches one Friday each month, at which time the Playcrafters may put on as many acts as they desire, on the regular matinee performance, and any of these acts, proving suitable vaudeville material will receive booking. In addition to this, the Playcrafters are giving public performances every two monthes at the Gamut Club Theatre, and the number of these performances will be increased as the number of actable plays are written and the number of artists interested in playing increase.

At present the great need of the club seems to be for artists who are experienced and capable of presenting the plays. In time, the Playcrafters will have a permanent organization of players and will give performances along the line of the little theatres of the country—with this important differande, that the plays will all be the work of the members of the club. The organization is rapidly growing and promises to become a recognized force in the dramatic life of Los Angeles.

ALFRED HOLLINGSWORTH.

SOCIAL FRICASEE AND CAPER SAUCE

STUDIO CLUB NOTES

The Studio Club is planning a very elaborate out-door Christmas pageant to be given on the evenings of December 22-23. The spectacular pantomime deals, of course, with the Nativity, based on Tissot's "Life of Christ." Unusually beautiful dancing and scenic effects are being evolved. Miss Mary Cutler, of the Y. W. C. A. is here from New York to stage the pageant. A large circular theater is to be built in front of the club house, to be utilized in combination with the natural beauties of the grounds.

The complete cast has not been decided upon, as yet, but Saturday night at eight o'clock a meeting of members will be held at the club for the final selection. Following the pageant a children's party will be given, and the club will hold open house in the old time Yuletide spirit.

Miss Freddie Hawkes, the little studio club protege, has returned from a short visit to San Francisco, where she met her soldier brother on his return from service in Hawaii.

Miss Beth Ivins, who has been living at the club for some months, has taken a house, with her mother, on Vine Street, in Hollywood.

Miss Edna Harris spent two days last week with friends at the Mission Inn at Riverside.

Dug-out Benefit—The Dug-out members are elated over the results of their benefit dance given last Saturday evening. Enough money was derived from the proceeds to purchase the much-sought sewing machine. Added to that success a Dug-out friend donated a bolt of flannel, which is rapidly being turned into garments for the poor children.

This Saturday night another dance will be given and all who attend are assured of a very pleasant time. The Dug-out girls are deep in plans for Christmas time charity, and ask all who can to send or bring nuts and candies (or money to buy them), with which to fill the Christmas stockings. These little stockings will be given to the poor kiddies of Los Angeles. As many will be made as can be filled, so do not neglect to do your share.

Dinner Party—Sunday evening a very interesting dinner party was given by Mrs. Al Semnacher at her home. The evening was spent in informal visiting between the guests, who were all well known to each other. Those who enjoyed the Semnacher hospitality were Miss Edith Johnson, Mrs. Louise Semnacher, Mr. and Mrs. Benny Rothwell, Mr. and Mrs. David Butler, Mrs. and Mrs. Arthur MacMacken, Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Karr, Mr. Richard Stier, and Mr. Larry Semon.

Moreno Entertains—Tony Moreno entertained at the Victor Hugo Thursday night with a little dinner in honor of Miss Clara West. Miss West just returned from New York City. Miss Bebe Daniels and Mr. William O'Callahan completed the party of four.

Dinner at Ship—Arline Pretty and Ulrich Bush were host and hostess to a group of friends at the Ship last Saturday evening. After dinner the party remained to enjoy the dancing. Those who wined(?) and dined were Miss Doris Palm, Miss Shirley Mason, Mr. Buster Keaton, and Mr. Louis Gasnier

Miss Pitts Vacationing—Za Su Pitts, the Brentwood star, is now in her home town, Santa Cruz, taking a "vacation." She plans to be gone about two weeks, and will probably take a rest when she returns to Hollywood. We add the last because if her friends show the same persistence in entertaining her as they displayed when urging her to return to Santa Cruz—well, we don't see much rest for Za Zu.

Return From N. Y.—Tuesday night Gloria Swanson, Thomas Mieghan, Max Fisher, and Herbert Sanbourn arrived from New York Wednesday evening Mr. Sanbourn celebrated the return with a dinner for the party at the Alexandria. The dinner marked, also, the official announcement of Miss Swanson's and Mr. Sanbourn's engagement.

Sunday Dinner—Last Sunday evening another little dinner party at the Ship included Miss Bebe Daniels, Mr. Louis Gasnier, and Mr. Sydney Cohn.

Miss Moran Resting—Miss Polly Moran is resting after her strenuous labors on the first two-reel comedy of the series which she and Hugh Faye are producing, at Culver City.

"Chi" Resting—Oh, no, Miss Emily Chichester has not gone to New York, nor does she expect to leave in the near future. She is only taking a rest after her work in the Frederick picture at Goldwyn.

Begins Picture Work—Miss Fair Craven has cast aside all social festivities for the time being. She has settled down to work in the new serial being produced by Selig, at the Mission road studio.

New Home—Miss Ethel Clayton has finally completed the furnishing and arrangement of her own home in Hollywood and is prepared to receive her friends there.

Mrs. Santa Claus—Miss Bessie Bird of the Brunton studio, is planning a very merry Christmas for many of the poor kiddies of Los Angeles and San Francisco. Miss Bird has purchased about two thousand dollars worth of toys, which she will distribute personally among the children of San Francisco and Los Angeles, where she has become well known by her charity work for the poor kiddies.

HOLLYWOOD WOMAN'S CLUB

The Mitchel Saturday dances at the Hollywood Woman's Club have been proving very popular with Hollywood screen folks.

Among those who have recently enjoyed themselves there are Za Zu Pitts, from the Brentwood, Florence Gilbert at the Balboa, Mildred Davis at the Rolin, Jimmy Aubrey at Vitagraph, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Sid Smith, Antrim Short, Jimmy Wilson, Gertrude Short, Milton Markwell, Agnes Nowatt'ois Woods, Betty Peterson, Duffy Kirk, Miss Pickering, Jullane Johnston, Charlie King, Jane Plaskette, Texas Driscoll, Paco, Olivo, Neal Kelly, and many others.

Jimmy Mitchell is planning a series of novelty dances, the first to be a novelty dance contest, when five prizes will be awarded. This takes place on the thirteenth.

Eugenie Besserer is very busy filling a new engagement with the Samuelson Film Corporation of England, producing at Universal City, and completing, at the same time, her part with Sessue Hayakawa.

Eliot Howe, Frank Keenan's director, spent the week-end in San Diego. He drove down in his Stutz.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

The Question of Motive

The student must bear in mind that every act of a character in the story is the result of a cause for action, and must be justified by a motive, which must be established. The motive may be either good or bad, but it must precede the act. The story is more logical, and convincing, with the unquestioned established motive back of the actions of its characters.

Back of the motive is a human emotion. The gamut of human emotion is as unlimited as are the variations of the thirty-seven basic dramatic situations. From the tenderest love note, the scale runs to the heavy crash of rage. We will say then, that the human heart is an instrument, exceedingly delicate, and susceptible to its environment. On its strings may be produced the sweetest soothing melodies, or the fiercest of rhapsodies. These we call emotions.

As the Will, influenced by the emotions, proceeds to formulate motive, action is determined. Let us devote a little study to the emotions, the most minute vibration of which may result in a powerful motive, and then dramatic action. As there are thirty-seven basic dramatic situations, so are there an equal number of Principal or Major emotions. As in the case of the dramatic situations, each emotion has its shadings or variations. Following is the list, which I have classified under four heads:

Noble Emotions

Love—Of God, of parents, of offspring, of brothers and sisters, of fellow man, of mate, of friend, of faithful servant, of dumb beast, etc.

Sympathy—For a fellow being who is equally unfortunate with one. (See comparison with Pity.)

Pity, Compassion—For an inferior being, who is in some respect, more unfortunate than one.

Gratitude—For a favor enjoyed, for blessings received.

Humility—Before God, or another superior being.

Loyalty—To God, to country, to friend. (The patriot—the martyr.)

Piety—A sense of respect for the deity—for the right.

Malignant Emotions

Hate, Despite, Malice—Of fellow man, of enemy, of superior.

Avarice, Greed—For wealth, possession, pleasure.

Jealousy—Of an equal who is more fortunate than one. (See comparison with Envy.)

Envy—Of a superior, who is more fortunate than one.

Passion—For drink, for gambling, for worldly pleasure (stronger than desire).

Revenge—Against a real or fancied enemy of one's self or loved one.

Contempt—For an inferior in any respect (the opposite of pity).

Painful Emotions

Fear—Of injury, of pain, of death, of misfortune.

Grief, Anguish, Sorrow—Over misfortune, injury, loss, to self or loved one.

Remorse, Regret, Shame—For an overt act, for an offense, crime or injustice done by one's self.

Disappointment, Discouragement—Over misfortune, loss, ingratitude, a shattered ideal.

Despair—Of relief, of life, of possession, of all hope for self or loved one.

Dread—Of an unpleasant experience or painful duty, of impending doom.

Horror—Of death, the appearance of evil, unpleasant surroundings.

Terror—Of punishment, of pain, of death, of injury.

Anxiety, Concern—Over misfortune to self or loved one, the coming of which is uncertain.

Bewilderment—At unexpected and rapid occurrence of events, usually of an unpleasant nature.

Rage, Anger—At opposition, at an affront, at an injury or injustice.

Disgust, Abhorrance—At an act or object of a loathsome nature.

Miscellaneous Emotions

Surprise, Amazement, Astonishment—At the occurrence of an unexpected event.

Resolution, Decision—To act, or to refrain from doing so.

Desire—For possession, for relief, for pleasure, for revenge.

Wonderment—Over an unusual event, a phenomena.

Awe—Of God, of great spectacle, of wondrous beauty.

Indecision—Over a problem, of what course to take.

Self Pity—For misfortune suffered, for an injustice or injury, for loss.

Amusement, Merriment—At a funny or diverting incident.

Relief—From pain, injury, misfortune, an unpleasant circumstance.

Joy, Triumph, Gladness—Of living, of attainment, of deliverance or accession.

Revolt, Rebellion—Against a persecutor, an injustice, an unpleasant circumstance or condition.

A study of these emotions is valuable, for the important reason that all motives must come from an emotion, or a combination of emotions. When delineating the action of a character in the story, the dramatist must put himself, or herself, in the place of that character, and study what emotion would be present. In this way the motive is discovered, and the resultant action will be logical. For example the emotion Love for a friend or kinsman may result in Hate of a person who has wronged the loved one, and the motive Revenge is the result. On the other hand the same love may prompt a self sacrifice in order to gain relief for the loved one.

George Webb is finishing work in the current MacLean-May production —a record of four consecutive heavies for Ince. Next!

Pat Moore is cast for the title role in "Our Mutual Child," with the American Film Company at Santa Barbara.

When the usual stranger, unusually low-browed, asked the stereotyped question: "Do you believe in the Darwinian theory?" Director Al Santell, looking first at the stranger and then at Joe Martin, the ape actor, replied: "I do, but Joe doesn't. He's sensitive."

H. O. "Pop" Harrison, cinematographer who shoots all Goldwyn art titles, has just completed nine months' service at the crank in this high tension work. He has an enviable record of having made titles, double exposures, and all intricate camera shots without a single mistake.

Tom Mix and H. H. Van Loan, who is writing a series of stories for the Fox star, spent three days together at Catalina Island, off the Southern Californian coast, last week.

F. H. Sturgis, for the past three years connected with Evans' Studio, has returned to the cinema field. He is now second cameraman with the Federal Photoplays, Inc., Brunton Studios, working with E. J. Vallejo and under the direction of Jack Conway.

The Hon. John McCready's twins made their debut with Sessue Hayakawa in his present picture. The Hon. John is laboring under a large peeve because his twins got a better salary than he did in his first picture some ten years ago.

Za Su Pitts is vacationing at Santa Cruz.

King Baggot has signed to lead opposite May Allison in her next picture.

Harry Burns is busy as assistant director to William Campbell on the new series of animal comedies being started. The company is working at the E. and R. Jungle studio.

Prominent Visitors at Metro—Mrs. Robert Argyle Brunton and a party of friends visited the Metro studio Monday to watch Mme. Nazimova at work. Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Maywood also visited the studio Monday. Mr. Maywood is manager of the Sheraden Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Jack Sayre is assistant casting director at Goldwyn's.

Members of the company filming the Screen Classic production of "Old Lady 31" spent several days on location near Downey this week. Emma Dunn, who is being featured in the picture; Henry Harmon, who portrays the role of Captain Abe Rose; John Ince, director; Sherrie Harris, assistant director; W. J. Beckway, cameraman; Rodger Heman, Clara Knott, Carrie Clark Ward, Sadie Gordon, Lawrence Underwood, Martha Mattox, May Wells, Ruby Lafayette, Arthur Lloyd and a number of extra people made the trip.

The Goldwyn Studios went over the top for the poor of Los Angeles in contributing to the Mayor Snyder Municipal Christmas Fund. All the stars and players, to say nothing of technical workers, donated close to five hundred dollars. The committee appointed by Vice-President Abraham Lehr, worked day and night to insure a large sum being sent to the fund. The committee was as follows: Clarke Irvine, chairman, Henrietta Schreiber, G. B. Manly and Harry Connelley.

Jack Hoxe has been re-engaged by National for another picture in which he will be featured.

Ray Moore is location manager for Goldwyn.

Jack Ford is to direct the next Corbett picture at Universal.

Vivian Martin is to star in eight independent productions under her own management.

Edward Sloman will direct the next Barriscale pictures.

Katherine MacDonald is again at work on a new story, her fourth under her contract with First National. The production is being made from the widely read novel, "The Guests of Hercules," by C. M. and A. M. Williamson. J. A. Barry is directing with Bill Lull as his assistant and Joe Brotherton is in charge of photography. Norman Kerry is playing the leading male role and the other artists prominently cast are, Rudolpho Valentino, Nell Craig, Edwin Stevens, Virginia Ainsworth, Howard Gaye, Fanny Ferrari, Alice Wilson and Walt Whitman.

Four new directors have been added to Metro's art staff. They are A. H. Webster, Sidney Ullman, A. W. Alley and A. E. Freudeman. Together with Amos Myers and John Holden, who have worked on several Screen Classics productions, these men will be associated with M. P. Staulcup, supervisor of art interiors.

Jack Perrin, leading man in the Universal serial, "The Lion Man," who has performed a dozen reckless stunts every day during the past five months without turning a hair, is suffering from a sprained ankle as the result of miscalculating the exact number of steps in front of his new Hollywood bungalow. And Jack was a total abstainer even before the first of July.

Arthur D. Ripley has been selected by Maxwell Karger to direct Bert Lytell in the Metro-Screen Classic production of "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Mr. Ripley has been film editor of Kalem, Fox, Universal and Metro.

Mayo Assisting Ingram — Walter Mayo will assist Rex Ingram in the direction of the Screen Classic production of "Shore Acres," in which Alice Lake is to be featured.

Peggy O'Dare is back at Universal.

Jack Gilbert has signed with Goldwyn for two years.

Russell Simpson is on the lookout for a ripping good snow story. Not the kind that is used on the wrist however. Here's a chance for a budding scenarioist.

Getting into pictures usually means, first of all to be screen struck, and second to avail yourself of the belief

PAULINE FREDERICK in "The Loves of Letty"

that probably no screen star on earth has the latent abilities that you possess and will show if some bonehead of a producer will just allow you a little screen room. Therefore it is a certain pleasure to meet a man who is willing not only to go to the trouble and expense of finding out for himself whether or not he is good picture material, but is apparently willing to abide by the decision of people who are supposed to have some little knowledge of the industry.

The above refers to one I. D. Opat, a recent arrival from Chicago, who has neither asked anyone for a job, nor even announced a desire for one, as near as we are able to determine. On his arrival here some time ago, Mr. Opat made a call at the Camera office and asked a lot of questions as to where he could get tests made, etc. Later he showed us a set of photographs in character make-ups which were very good. Some of these we published at the regular advertising rate. Still he did not ask for a job.

Now comes the one that gave us the big surprise. Opat arrived at the office and asked if we would kindly give him our straight opinion of him as a screen possibility, after looking at his tests, and we found he had hired space and cameras and had posed for a full reel of character delineations, so that he himself might see what he would look like and what his work would look like on the screen.

He gave us Hamlet, Othello and a dozen others he had done on the foreign stage, and while we do not personally care for the deeper pantomimed tragedy, we must admit that he had something to show us that was worth watching. We do not know what his next move is, but if he keeps it up he certainly should land somewhere on both feet. He has a very pleasing face when he wants it to be, and his close-ups show a variety of expression seldom met. His pantomime is excellent.

HENRY KING
By Mildred Davis

. Henry King, who is now directing the H. B. Warner pictures, at the Jesse D. Hampton studio, has traveled a long road in theatrical work. He was born in Lafayette, Virginia, where he went through the teething, schooling and growing periods. Nature paid careful attention to the last mentioned for while yet in his "teens" Henry stood six feet tall. Nature took care of the first mentioned, but when the second, namely—school, was left to the youngster he decided against it. In spite of his decision he had not neglected his literature for at seventeen he became a Shakespearean actor. He toured the country with some of the best tragedians of a decade ago, appearing under the Harris and Savage management as well as various others.

After his Shakespearean spree he returned to New York and devoted his time to more modern drama. His most successful appearances were made in "The Lion and The Mouse," "The Devil," and "The House of a Thousand Candles." Then like the scores of other legitimate players the motion picture field attracted King and he left the stage.

He entered the picture drama as leading man for the Lubin company, with which he remained for some time. The Balboa company then came into being and King joined their forces at the very start. He still played as leading man, but when the serial, "Who Pays?" was made, King was co-starred with Ruth Roland. He acted in this company's best features which were released through the Knickerbocker and Pathe exchanges. As yet he had done no directing, his only interest in that line being limited to the co-operation and suggestions usual between actor and director. All the while he had been learning, and studying production from the directorial viewpoint.

His chance to direct came when Balboa engaged little Marie Osborne for the Mary Sunshine series of pictures. Though inexperienced he undertook one of the most difficult stunts in the industry—that of directing a child. But with his patience and unusual ability he made a star out of Baby Marie. After guiding the Mary Sunshine series successfully over the rough spots he joined another company.

This was the American film company at Santa Barbara, where he directed Gail Kane. On completing a number of "Flying A" features with the various American stars, King returned to Los Angeles. As a director his location changes as often as a free-lance actor, and the reason is quite evident. He has much to offer—knowledge gained through years of experience both as actor and director.

Mr. King's screen achievements include work on "The Unafraid," "Souls in Pawn," "Southern Pride," "The Mate of the Sally Ann," "The Specter of Suspicion," "The Locked Hearts," and "A Case of Wits."

And now he is directing H. B. Warner—a gratifying combination from which you can expect productions of a very high standard.

BARNDOLLAR IN THE PICTURES

The art department of the motion picture industry has made a valuable addition to its forces in the person of Harry Barndollar, long of The Times staff. "Barny" does such clever stuff and his work for William S. Hart will, we predict, be something of the real thing in art titles. Mr. Barndollar will also assist in the art work of the Christie Comedies.

KING SPRUCE

The Mitchell Lewis Company are in the big tree country. On Big River the log jam of over 15,000,000 feet which formed on the North Fork last winter is to be blown up in part. A hundred pounds or more of Hudson powder will be used to create this scene alone. An old dam on the North Fork which was previously used in starting the log drive, is to be reconstructed and blown up after the water has been raised to a height of seven or eight feet.

Moisture in the air makes it impossible to do camera work after three in the afternoon and it is often quite late in the morning before the light is strong enough to commence work, so the company may be on this location longer than the three weeks originally set aside for it.

Mitchell Lewis and Mignon Anderson are co-starring in "King Spruce," which is directed by Roy Clements. In the cast are, Bessie Wales, Marie Bollman, Melbourne McDowell, Arthur Millett, Joe Ray, James O'Neill, Gus Sarville, Fred Herzog and Henry Bollman. John Carleton is assistant director and Arthur Hunziger, business manager. The camera are in charge of Fred Hartman and E. C. Peters. Tom Brooker is property man.

Johnny-on-the-Spot—One year ago Tuesday the first two stages of the new Metro studio were complete. There had been sharp rivalry between five companies to see which should "christen" the stages with actual photography. May Allison and Bert Lytell were out of the running because they had already started pictures on the stage of the old studio, and Viola Dana wasn't quite ready to start her picture.

Albert Capellani, who was directing Mme. Nazimova in "The Red Lantern," and Harry Franklin, Hale Hamilton's director, were neck and neck in the final race. Each was preparing a set on the stages. Mr. Capellani shot his first scenes at 3 o'clock, but Mr. Franklin claimed victory by an hour's margin. And the name of his picture was "Johnny on the Spot."

Donald B. Keyes, for the past few months publicity photographer at the Goldwyn Studios, left last Monday for New York, London, and South Africa, where he will make motion pictures and still photographs of various objects on the dark continent.

Betty Bouton is with the Neilan company.

Beatrice Burnham is with the Cabanne company at Universal.

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

CONCERNING THE SCRIPT SHOOTERS

Frederick Reel, Jr., one time newspaper reporter and dramatic critic in New York and Philadelphia, and for several years past the writer of several successes for different studios in the local film colony, has joined the scenario department of Brentwood and is working on scripts for future productions at this studio.

LeRoy Armstrong, veteran Chicago newspaperman and magazine writer, is building up an exhaustive research library at Universal City. For several years Mr. Armstrong has been at the world's film capital in the capacity of chief reader in the scenario department. Conscious of the need of a big producing organization for the most detailed information on any subject, Mr. Armstrong has perfected Universal's research department so that it is now said to exceed in usefulness any similar bureau.

William Allen White, the novelist, arrived in Los Angeles on December 8th, to co-operate in the filming of several of his novels. Mr. White is one of the novelists in Benjamin B. Hampton's author-publisher-producer combine, with Zane Grey, Stewart Edward White, Emerson Hough, Winston Churchill and other literary celebrities.

Frank M. Dazey, who wrote the scenario for "The Fighting Shepherdess," Louis B. Mayer's new First National picture starring Anita Stewart, has just finished another script for the Mayer organization. It is "Polly of the Storm Country," a Grace Miller White story, written especially for Mildred Harris Chaplin.

Ethel Shannon, who played the role of the American in Tsuru Aoki's latest Universal production, "The Breath of the Gods," has replaced Josephine Hill as leading woman with Hoot Gibson, Universal's western star. Miss Hill has been promoted to feature productions and will play opposite Frank Mayo in "The Primrose Path."

George Hively, the Universal scenario writer who set sail for Japan with Henry McRae to write the continuity for "The Petals of Lao Tze," in which Marie Walcamp is starring, has returned to Universal City. Mr. Hively returned with the belligerent sniffles, lumbago and the gutteral croup which, he says, he acquired in the soggy Japanese climate. In speaking of the incessant drizzle, Hively said, "I asked an American in Tokio if it always rained there and he said, 'Heavens no!—it missed last Thurs-

PRODUCERS ELECT OFFICERS

At the first executive session of the new producers' association held this week, Thomas H. Ince was elected manager and Mack Sennett, treasurer. The new organization will be known as The Associated Producers. The members of the new combine who were present at the election are Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett, Geo. Loane Tucker, Marshall Neilan, Allen Dawn and Maurice Tourneur.

The object of the organization is to eliminate the middleman in distribution. The rentals on combined products are said to represent a total of $20,000,000 annually.

Brown with Metro—Milton Brown is now photographer for the Metro News department. Mr. Brown was formerly associated with the Ince and Fox studios.

Lewis Celebrates—L. E. Lewis, of the Metro studio still photographing department, celebrated his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary last Thursday. A number of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis' friends dropped in at their home and spent a most enjoyable evening.

New Comedies—Cissy Fitzgerald, the former Charles Frohman star, has started his second comedy of the series of twenty-four feature comedies. The company roster includes Jim Davis, Jack Carlisle, Bobby Bowlder, Edwin Middleton directing, and William Noble cranking. Also bathing girls—large quantities.

Finis Fox is now wrestling with the intricacies of the scenario for "Hearts Are Trumps."

Paddy McGuire is now with the Craig Hutchison company at Christie's.

PALMER PHOTOPLAY EXPANDS

In order that talented persons of creative impulse may be encouraged to train themselves in the practical fundamentals of photoplay writing and thus assist in supplying the ever-growing demand for acceptable screen stories, four of the most prominent authorities on motion picture production have affiliated themselves with the Palmer Photoplay corporation's department of education as advisory council. They are: Cecil B. DeMille, director general of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Thomas H. Ince, head of the famous Ince studios; Lois Weber, noted woman producer and director, and Rob Wagner, the well-known special writer on motion picture subjects for the Saturday Evening Post.

The advisory council will in the future supervise the work of Palmer corporation's educational department, which is now the largest institution for the training and development of new creative writers in the country.

A staff of experts who will contribute valuable information to the Palmer course in photoplay writing includes: Frank Lloyd and Clarence Badger, Goldwyn directors; Jeanie MacPherson, noted Famous Players-Lasky scenario writer; Al E. Christie, producer of Christie comedies; Denison Clift, head of the William Fox scenario department; Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, of the Metro scenario department; George Beban, the noted character actor and producer; Hugh McClung, the well-known cinematographer and producer; Eric Howard, expert critic and author, and Kate Corbaley, photoplaywright and head of the Palmer sales department.

In addition to its educational work, the Palmer Photoplay corporation has in active operation departments for the preparation of continuities, and research and technical service. Dorothy Yost heads the continuity department. Adeline Alvord, formerly of Metro, directs the research department.

Frederick Palmer, one of the best-known scenario writers of Los Angeles, is president and director of education. Roy L. Manker, formerly a newspaper and magazine contributor and later a writer for Pathe, is general manager.

Scenario Market

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wisn the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

CINEMA-GRAND OPERA

Among Los Angeles' most distinguished visitors last week was Mr. G. H. Koopman, of Amsterdam, Holland, Director General of the Grand Opera of the Netherlands. Mr. Koopman has come to America to study motion pictures for he is the man who, with the masterfulness of genius, is going to combine pictures and grand opera. He is the man who gave Holland her national opera and now he is going to give the world something to talk about. Mr. Koopman says that the music of the opera is no longer enough to thrill the audience; that the voices and acting of the singers and the bit of scenery suggested by the stage drops do not satisfy the people in the orchestra chairs. Moving pictures have taken them so far, and shown them so much, that now they are no longer content to read on the program, and have indicated to them by a bit of painted canvas, that the scene is a castle, or a wood or a heath—they want to see the castle for themselves, inside and out and everybody that occupies it. They want to be taken into the depths of the wood, and when it storms they want to visualize the crash and confusion that the music tells of.

For long the great masters of the cinema have aided and interpreted their pictures with music, now, says Mr. Koopman, it is time to interpret the music with pictures. It is the age when the emotions and the brain are appealed to through the eye and shrewd Mr. Koopman, who is a business man as well as an artist, sees the chance to merge the interests of the stage with those of the newer art of picture making. He will combine the grandeur of the music of Verdi, of Wagner, of all the great masters and the dramatic art, and the golden voices of the singers with picturization of the scenes. It is a big idea and the man behind it is capable of working it out.

Mr. Koopman came to America from Amsterdam by way of around the world, traveling through Europe and Asia to study theatrical conditions in all lands. I asked him who was the universal favorite, what one actor filled the moving picture houses of the world, and he told me Charley Chaplin. In Pekin and Singapore, in Batavia and Hong Kong, Colombo and Shanghai, everybody goes to laugh at Charley. Whether the audience wears pigtails or is all dolled up like the prophets in the bible, they all "get" Charley's stunts. And they pay to is a dollar plus a city luxury tax of twenty per cent. This tax is not a war measure but what Amsterdam see them too. It costs you three dollars to go to the movies in Pekin. In Amsterdam, which, by the way, is certainly a fan city, having seventy-five picture shows, the admission price thinks is the right thing to do all the time. In Hague and Rotterdam the tax is fifteen per cent on amusements and yet the moving picture houses are overflowing in all these places. Mr. Koopman was much impressed by the wonderful cinema theaters of this country, those of Holland being very mediocre, with small orchestras and no pipe organs. As charming Madam Koopman put it, "They are not so chic."

EUGENE O'BRIEN WELL AGAIN

Eugene O'Brien has been unable to work for the past month owing to severe trouble with his ear which necessitated an operation. Last minute news of him received at this office announces that he has fully recovered from the effects of the operation and will soon be able to start work on a feature story that H. H. Van Loan has been preparing for him.

INSIDE THE CITY'S WALLS

Just exactly what is doing in the various departments of the city was discovered by H. H. Van Loan the other day when he was taken on a tour of inspection by Charles H. Treat, auditor of Los Angeles. All the inner workings of a big city were shown him; how they oil the wheels to make 'em go round; where the taxes go in and where they come out something we have often wondered about; how the mayor conducts his end of the business—in fact, Mr. Van Loan saw everything that goes to make this the prosperous, world-fatted city it is. All this information is to be converted into material for a story for Owen Moore, the title of which will probably be "The City Workshop."

SIXTH AND MAIN

—WHO'S YOUR KIDDIE?—

As an example of the value of a study of the emotions, suppose we are confronted with the spectacle of a father who wantonly murders his child who is deformed. Let us assume that the child is the very image of goodness and loves its father devotedly. We must establish a logical motive for such an unusual crime. In order to do this, we must know what emotion is present in the mind of the father. It might be Disgust or Abhorrence at the sight of the deformed little body. On the other hand it could be the great love of the father for the unfortunate child who is destined to suffer a life of misery on account of its deformity and for whom he believes there is no relief. It would of course be difficult to convince any judge or jury of the latter motive, which would be classified as "Effort to gain relief" for the child.

A man would not be apt to formulate the same motive from Fear, Terror, Horror, or Dread, that he would from Rage. And again, a crime that resulted from the presence of Hate, would certainly be dealt with more severely than if Rage formulated the motive that caused its commission. One would be premeditated and the other not. In other words, in one case we have murder in the first degree and manslaughter in the other.

The dramatic student will find it helpful to study carefully, the thirty-seven human emotions, so as to always be able to correctly formulate motive behind the action of his or her characters.

Editor's Note—In the next installment Mr. Hill will present a study of the three great Motives, by which all dramatic action is prompted.

MADGE KENNEDY

in "STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL"

from the famous comedy
"FANNIE AND THE SERVANT PROBLEM"
by Jerome K. Jerome
Directed by Clarence Badger

It's a wise man who knows his wife's relations!

And they're more particular about it in England than they are over here. Here you can marry anybody. In England, it isn't done. But it couldn't be helped in "Strictly Confidential."

Imagine twenty-three relatives all in one house, and Madge Kennedy went and married the Owner, after lying about her social connections. Funny? It's no word for it. It's a riot of risibilities!

Fancy pulling the bell rope for Uncle! Or pushing a button twice for Cousin Emily to bring up a brandy and soda (yes, they're still serving them in England). But all this is premature. The play's the thing!

See Madge Kennedy. She's inimitable. And if your wife acts uneasy, be charitable. No wife is responsible for her relations. She doesn't want to be — that's why she is living under an assumed name — Yours!

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

Youngdeer to Produce—A new stock company, under the guidance of James Youngdeer, is being organized and will start production the first of the year. This company is bringing new faces, and new ideas of production into the motion picture game. The first story to be filmed will be a five-reel modern drama filled with romance and daring. The cast is now being filled, and by New Year's the Youngdeer company will be settled in a Los Angeles studio, technical matters of "sets" and costumes arranged, and ready to shoot the first scene.

Miss Rita Nunn, a prominent St. Louis society girl, will be the featured player. Although Miss Nunn has never before appeared professionally, a great deal of her time has been devoted to dramatic study and training. She came to Los Angeles with the idea of taking up motion picture work and after careful observation she has placed herself udner Mr. Youngdeer's direction, feeling confident that with practical application and experience he can develop her natural histrionic abilities. Miss Nunn has been familiar with the director's success in the past in drawing out and developing raw material into stardust. A few of Youngdeer's former proteges include Louise Glaum, Bessie Eyton, Jackie Saunders, Mary Miles Minter, Jewel Carmen and Douglas Gerard. There are others also, but these few names show.

In a resume of the stock company we find that Booth Gilbert, Adele Prestage, Blanche Sherry, Franklin Rose, Granville Hayes, Chief Watuska, Wasona Silvermoon, and Princess Ane'-Mone will support Miss Nunn. Wasona Silvermoon and Princess Ane'-Mone are both Indian girls, of the Creek tribe. Miss Silvermoon is of full Creek blood, while the Chief's daughter is from a French and English mother. Though the theme of the story has not yet been disclosed the general line-up promises some very high class productions.

The Burston studios, 6050 Sunset Blvd., have been taken over by the Warner Brothers for the making of their feature films and the Paramount-Al St. John comedies.

Al already has started work on his fourth comedy, which is a western picture. Helen Holmes, the serial queen, will start toiling shortly at the same studio. Jack and Sam Warner expect to have two more companies at work before February.

CHANGE OF PICTURE

It is announced that Bryant Washburn, instead of doing "Where Julia Rules," will make "Mrs. Temple's Telegram" his next picture. He will be directed by James Cruze.

BUSY AT METRO

Six companies are now working at Metro. Mme. Nazimova has begun her new production. Bert Lytell and May Allison have started their new star vehicles. Alice Lake has started "Shore Acres," and Emma Dunn is nearly half-way through "Old Lady 31." An all-star cast is making the Drury Lane melodrama, "The Hope."

NAME SENNETT COMEDY

The Sennett five-reel comedy which has just been completed is to be titled "Down on the Farm."

E. M. Asher, Mr. Sennett's personal representative, leaves for New York today.

IMPROVEMENT AT BRUNTON

The Brunton studios are assuming still greater proportions. A five-room gymnasium is now being erected on the lot. The building will cover half an acre of ground and will be completely equipped with showers, dressing rooms, electric baths, lockers and athletic paraphernalia. A boxing ring will also be included for the use of Jack Dempsey, who intends to spar a few rounds daily while making his fifteen-episode serial.

A NEW FILM COMPANY

The Hermann Film Company of Santa Monica, Mr. E. P. Hermann, president, is a new organization. Mr. Hermann just completed "That Something," written by W. W. Woodbridge. Following "That Something," two other pictures of the same type will be produced at once. The first of these will be "Something Better" and the second "Something More."

The first unit of the studios which will cover the fifteen acres controlled by the company near the Santa Monica foot-hills has been completed. There will be stage space of 72x100 feet, all under roof, twenty-eight dressing rooms, wardrobe and extra talent rooms.

"THE PRINCE CHAP" STARTS

William deMille will begin work the day before Christmas on "The Prince Chap," with Thomas Meighan in the leading role, Lila Lee playnig the part of Claudia, and Kathlyn Williams appearing as Alice.

ADDITIONS

C. W. Bachman of the Bachman studios of Glendale, will shortly start work on a new dark stage at his studio. The plans call for a stage 65 x 100 feet. He will also add several new fronts to his Western street, which, as it stands now, is considered one of the most typical frontier streets on the coast.

ETHEL SHANNON

Miss Shannon is to be featured shortly in a series of comedies dealing with domestic situations.

A TWILIGHT BABY

The first Henry Lehrman feature has been delivered to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. The title of Mr. Lehrman's initial feature is "A Twilight Baby." In this release Mr. Lehrman has departed from the usual two-reel offerings as "A Twilight Baby" is in four reels.

"YANKEE DOODLE IN PARIS"

Mack Sennett's production, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," is to have its premier production next month in London and in Paris, and will then be shown generally throughout the British Isles and in Belgium, France, Italy, Spain, Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

TAKEN AT CAWSTON'S

Thomas Heffron is making Robert Warwick's picture for Paramount Artcraft, entitled "Thou Art the Man." Lois Wilson has the leading feminine role. As this story deals with South Africa, the ostrich plume trade and illicit diamond traffic, a number of the important scenes will be made at the Cawston Ostrich Farm.

GOOD WORK

Miss Elsie Bishop, who took part in the Elks' Memorial December 7th, deserves great credit for her excellent work as the sorrowing mother in the tableau presented on that occasion.

VIOLA DANA ON LOCATION

The opening scenes of Viola Dana's new picture, "Eliza Comes to Stay," will be filmed at Pleasanton, Cal. Miss Dana and twenty-six members of her company left Sunday for the Northern town.

In this production, Miss Dana will enact the part of "Eliza." W. A. Howell will direct, and John Arnold will do the photographing. Besides Miss Dana, Mr. Howell and Mr. Arnold, those who made the journey were: Al. E. Kelley, assistant director; Earl Rolfes, assistant cameraman; Ben Critchley, property man; George Kelley, second assistant; Robert Badger, Meaulley Geddes, Albert Breig, John Buck, Gertrude Baxter, Evelyn Angle, Patty McGee, Verne Clifton, Virginia Rist, Isadore Feldman, Josephine Crowell, Carol Jackson, "Cutie" Sipple, John Morse, Mrs. Geddies and Mrs. Rits. The last two were chaperones.

AT THE SELIG STUDIOS

Col. W. N. Selig announces the beginning of his new feature productions at the Seliz Zoo studios in this city.

He will produce five or six specials a year, from book stories. The first, just begun, is "The Mask," by Arthur Hornblow, in which Jack Holt will appeal in a dual role. He will play the lead and, at the same time, portray the twin brother in a ne'er-do-well character.

Hedda Nova is the woman of this peculiar and dramatic story, while Fred Malatesta and William Clifford will be seen as the "heavies."

Mr. Bert Bracken is the director, with H. A. Laver as assistant. Edward G. Linden, brought from the East by Colonel Selig for the cinematography of these features, is already cranking upon the first scenes.

Colonel Selig also has a new Franklyn Farnum Western serial under way, with Mary Anderson in support. William E. Wing wrote the story. Duke Lee, Vester Pegg, Bud Osborne, Pedro Leon and W. A. Orlamond are in the cast. Prince, the wonder dog, dog with the human brain, is a special is a special member of the troupe.

Mildred Harris Chaplin's new picture, "Polly of the Storm Country," was especially written for her by Grace Miller White. This picture will be the little star's second First National release under the Louis B. Mayer banner. Emory Johnson has been selected as Mrs. Chaplin's leading man. Other members of the cast are: Charlotte Burton, Charles West, Harry Northrup, Ruby Lafayette, Fred Kohler, Cora Drew, Cameron Coffey, Mickey Moore, Valentin Maurice and Dick Rosson. Arthur Rosson will direct the picture and his brother, Dick, will be assistant director. Hal Rosson is to be cameraman. George Hopkins, who designed the sets of "The Inferior Sex," Mrs. Chaplin's last picture, will be art director.

Clyde Fillmore has signed a four years contract with the Lasky Company. This good looking leading man has played twenty-four weeks as Captain McGinnis in "Civilian Clothes," at the Morosco Theatre, and has been kept busy at the film studios at the same time. He has just completed work in Von Stroheim's special Universal feature, and has already started work on his four-year Lasky contract.

Helene Chadwick rushed madly back from a hurried three weeks' trip to New York in order to be promptly on time to begin another already scheduled Goldwyn picture. But she might as well have dallied a while longer amidst the New York shopping and other lights, as the Goldwyn picture she was to have done removed its locality to New York just as Helene arrived on the coast. So at present Helene is awaiting her next Goldwyn call, and is engaged in the proverbial activity "resting" meanwhile.

The mere on-looker would judge that "resting" while a salary continues to be paid, is not such an irksome task after all.

William Russell has gone to Prescott, Arizona, to film his new Fox feature, which is taken from Harold Titus' book, "Bruce of the Circle A." Helene Ferguson, who has just completed the Goldwyn picture, "Going Some," will play opposite Mr. Russell, and Betty Schade, also has an important part in the Russell production. George Stewart, brother of Anita Stewart, will play the juvenile lead. Emmet Flynn will continue to direct the Russell features.

Eddie Sutherland has been cast for the role of "Bud," the younger brother in the forthcoming Lasky special production, "The Round Up." Young Mr. Sutherland has just completed the role of "Leach" in "The Sea Wolf," George Melford feature at the Lasky studio.

Don't it beat all how the Lord works with some people's press agents?

When the A. P. news (or was it P. A.?) came in that an ocean-going yacht carrying a whole company was missing at sea, we just threw up our hands and said, "Can you beat it?" Far be it from us to think any publicity department would use a little thing like that, but can't you just see Jack Lloyd down on his marrow bones on the deck, praying, not that the storm would cease, but that it would blow and keep on blowing till it had blown the news across the country? What more could any publicity man ask than that? And think of Bill Bitzer's legs wabbling as he cranked away on storm scenes, all donated by a kind and benevolent Providence! Oh, well! what's the use of talking, the motion picture business surely has divine endorsement!

FAKE SCHOOLS OF MOTION PICTURE ACTING

The particularly flagrant case of a teacher of acting which was reported to the police last week, but emphasizes the need to weed out these parasites that prey on the motion picture industry and those who would enter its ranks. The man in question escaped with funds said to have been gathered from his victims, and is still at large; but there are many like him who have not been reported and who are plying their spider-and-fly game every day.

A few years ago these schools operated as employment bureaus, but the law closed in on them as such and they changed their front to one of "trade schools," where they were safe for awhile; but in May, 1919, the state legislature passed a new law governing trade schools, which is, in substance, that any person or company engaging in such a business must have a permit so to do from the State Labor Bureau as well as a permit from the city police commission, which licenses must be displayed in a conspicuous place. How many of the "schols of motion picture acting" now in operation in Los Angeles can display such licenses

If you wish to make sure of the reliability of any school of acting, consult Herbert A. Cable, Commissioner of Labor, at the Labor Bureau, Union League Building. Telephone Pico 3622.

THE WHOLE FORCE

Gale Henry, screen comedienne and widely heralded as the homeliest girl in the movies, relates an incident which occurred during her early days before the camera. Her company had gone to Arizona on location, where the director found it was necessary to have a few sets erected. Rather than wire back to his studio in Hollywood for help, he wired a local theatre manager. The message read:

"Badly in need of carpenters, electrician and property man for movie set. Can I hire your men for a day?"

The answer came back:

"He will be there."

STARS SHINE ON CHRISTMAS

The really big people in movie-land, folks big in heart as well as in fame and income, are always veritable Santa Clauses when Christmas time arrives. Here is what some of them are doing this year:

Mary Pickford has organized an efficient company to dispense little Christmas gifts to children in every large city in the United States.

William Farnum will take a company of "newsies" on his yacht to a "desert isle" off the coast, and camp there three days, playing "Robinson Crusoe."

Nazimova sends over three hundred homes to which Christmas trees are unknown, ornamented trees and presents with which to load them.

Charles Ray has a novel Christmas tree plan. His own Boy Scout company of seventy-five boys, with their little brothers and sisters, will go to the star's camp in the Sierras, where the "Christmas trees" grow thickly. The pines and firs of the forest will be decorated and loaded with presents.

Irene Rich has arranged three Christmas outing parties for children, gifts for soldiers and sailors now in the service, and the distribution of an autoload of presents in Los Angeles Christmas morning.

Arthur Morrison has twelve separate "Santa Claus" roles to play Christmas.

Elict Howe has rented four popular motion picture theatres, which will show special features free to children all Christmas day. He is to play "Falstaff" at a Shakespearean benefit and Santa Claus at a children's gathering the same evening.

Bessie Love will look to the needs of her four battleshiploads of sailor boys of the Pacific Fleet.

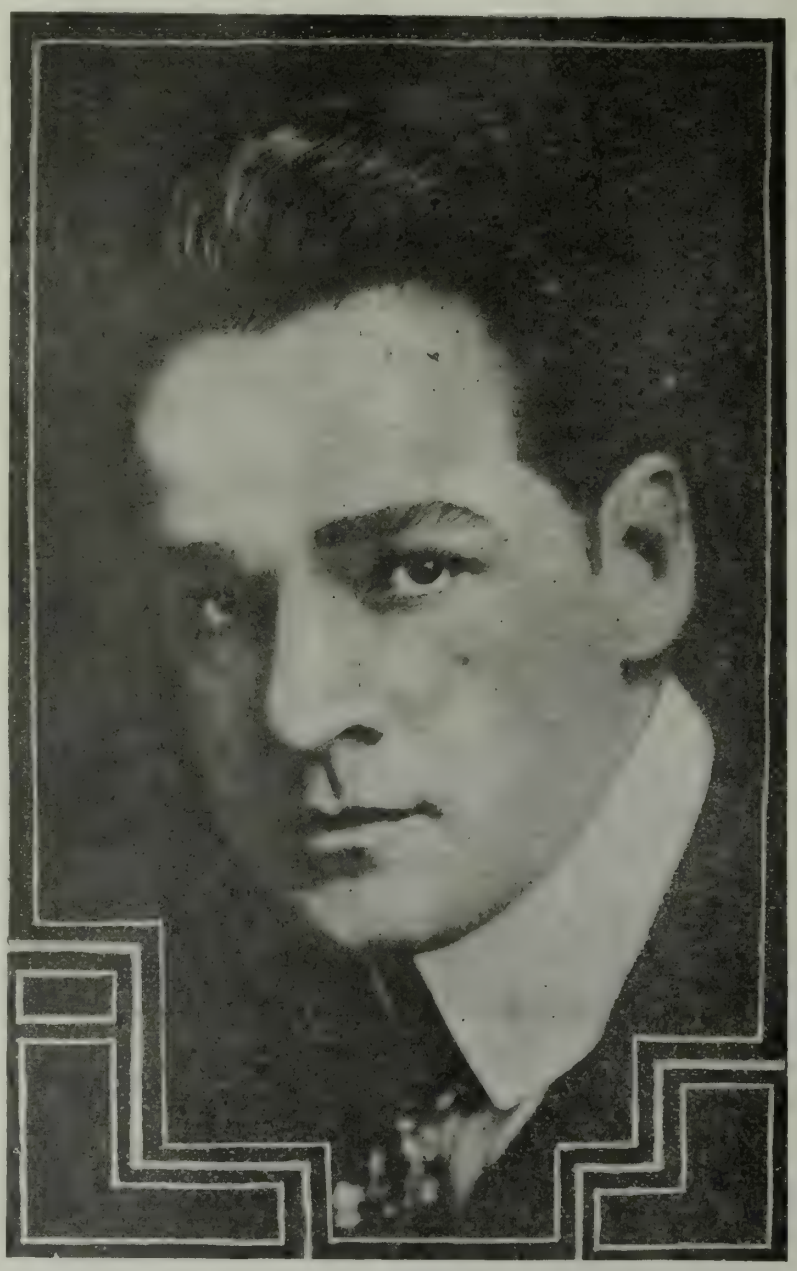
NO ADMITTANCE THERE

The prison wardens at San Quentin and Folsom have joined the Hollywood League of Landlords, David H. Thompson reported to Maxwell Karger on his return from the North this week.

"No children, dogs nor motion picture actors admitted," Mr. Thompson found to be the slogan of the penitentiaries when he wished permission to film scenes of Bert Lytell's "Alias Jimmy Valentine" behind prison bars.

YOUNG'S SOUTH SEA ISLAND STORIES

The picture which the D. W. Griffith Company are at present filming in the Bahama Islands is a screen version of "Blood of the Covenanters," by Gordon Ray Young, former literary editor of the Los Angeles Times. Mr. Young has just sold Mr. Griffith another South Sea Island story called "Heathens."



WILLIAM RUSSELL

DOMESTICITY

An item going the rounds says that "Enid Bennett and Fred Niblo are now the only celebrated husband-wife combination in films." So? How about Bessie Barriscale and Howard Hickman? Mr. Hickman and his world-famous wife entered pictures at the same time and as her director during a good part of this portion of her career has been largely responsible for her many successes. Previous to that they acted together on the stage.

THE PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

The new year will start off with a bang in the motion picture world. All the studios are busy and besides the pictures already under way there will be twenty-two new productions starting January first.

ART AND TECHNICAL DIRECTORS TO HAVE ELABORATE CLUBROOM

What will be the most elaborately fitted meeting room possessed by any of the motion picture organizations, was arranged for at the regular meeting of the Associated Art and Technical Directors Association held last evening at the Beaux Arts studio.

This association which only recently came into being, now numbers among its members the art and technical directors of practically all of the motion picture studios. These men are all experts on art works and decoration and their combined efforts will be put into the fitting of their new clubrooms.

At the meeting last evening, Mr. B. Hennessy, proprietor of the Beau Arts studio, donated the use of his studio to the association with the privilege of selection from among all of his art objects and period furniture, for the fittings of the association meeting room.

This offer gives to the association an unlimited selection from a wonderful collection of rare works and craftsmanship and when they are assembled the association will have a home that will rival any clubroom in the nation.

Mr. B. Hennessy's offer was accepted by Roy H. McCray as president of the association and the work of fitting out the headquarters was delegated to a committee.

HOW THEY WILL SPEND CHRISTMAS

Pauline Frederick will put on a big Christmas show at her palatial residence in Beverly Hills. Her Christmas tree has been ordered, and she is to decorate it herself. Willard Louis will play the star part for the whole family, his wife and Miss Frederick being very close friends. Mrs. Frederick says that every year Pauline is just like a child with her celebration, and always brings in her little friends and treats them to a glorious time.

Madge Kennedy and her mother will enjoy the day quietly. They will enjoy a delightful little dinner and a small tree will add to their fun at their cosy apartment.

Tom Moore intends having a big house party for his little daughter, Alice, at their Hollywood home. The little miss is to have a big tree, and all the trimmings, and all her playmates will be invited in.

Will Rogers, always sticking to his originality and western style, is arranging to have a huge tree in his studio-circus-field playground decorated and bringing his children over with a multitude of neighbor kiddies so they can have their fun outdoors, as California's Christmas day, 99 out of a hundred times, is bright and sunny.

Mabel Normand and Geraldine Farrar are in New York.

"RIGHT OF WAY" FINISHED

Waiting four days until heavy rains stopped, Bert Lytell made the final scenes of "The Right of Way" at Monterey, Cal., last wek. The story was twelve weeks filming.

SNATCHED FROM DAVY JONES

SNOWED IN FOR TWO DAYS

The Marshal Neilan Company has been trying for some time to find a location for snow scenes and last week they certainly got it, for the whole company was snowed in at Bluff Lake, six miles above Bear Valley, for two days with nothing to eat but some beans and coffee. Even the food itself was a fortunate accident for they found it in the one-room shack in which they took refuge from the storm, and in which they all lived for the two days. They knocked a hole in the roof of the cabin to let out the smoke, and built a fire in the middle of the floor in an improvised fireplace of stones. Mr. Neilan acted as chef and cooked the beans and coffee, which the hungry actors found stored away in the shack. The company made a good time out of what might have been considered a disaster by some people and they were able to get all the snow pictures they wanted.

In the party were: Marshal Neilan, Marjorie Daw, Lewis Stone, Matt Moore, who just went along for the trip, Mr. and Mrs. Wellar from Bear Valley Tavern. Henry Cronjager, Sam Landers, and Dave Kesson, assisted by Foster Leonard and Howard Peyton, were at the cameras and Tom Held was assistant director. Mr. Eddie O'Hara was there too.

FLORENCE PARKS AT BRUNTON'S

Florence Porter Parks, former dramatic editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and for some time past feature writer for Camera!, has joined the Brunton publicity staff to succeed Calvin C. Day. Rene R. Rivierre has taken over the directorship.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING
THE THREE GREAT MOTIVES

Installment Five

As stated in the previous chapter, emotions shape motives, which in turn suggest action. Motive may be classified under three general heads, REVENGE, DESIRE FOR POSSESSION, AND EFFORT TO OBTAIN RELIEF. Either of the three may be put forth in behalf of one's self or for a loved one. All action may be accounted for by a motive which can be classified under one of the three heads named.

Let us study that of:

REVENGE

The same situation that prompts the commission of a crime or offense by one character, may spur another on to brave and nobler deeds and to self-sacrifice. Below we have a list of situations which may constitute a cause for action—either in the direction of crime or self-sacrifice. One may commit a crime against another to revenge themselves or a loved one for the reason that another has—

(A)—Dispossessed them of the affections of a mate or lover. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(B)—Dispossessed them of worldly possession by force. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(C)—Deprived them of worldly possession by legal proceedings. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(D)—Deprived them of worldly possessions through business dealings. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(E)—Dishonest methods used to accomplish the same thing.

(F)—Caused bodily or mental injury to them. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(G)—Caused disgrace to them. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(H)—Given insult to them. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

(I)—Deprived one of his liberty. Made a real or fancied attempt to do so. Committed the same offense against a loved one.

DESIRE FOR POSSESSION

Desire for possession, while perhaps not as powerful a motive as Revenge, is prolific of all manner of complications, as it exists in the mind of every human being. From the standpoint of crime or offense, this motive may result in:

(A)—An effort to secure money by violence, theft or fraud.

(B)—An effort to secure any other object, other than money, which will afford pleasure, by violence, theft or fraud.

(C)—An effort to secure any instrument which opens the way to the possession of money or valuables or pleasure, by violence, theft or fraud.

(D)—An effort to secure any instrument which may serve as a means of securing revenge, through violance, fraud or theft.

(E)—An effort to remove any obstacle which stands in the way of the achievement of an ambition, by force, fraud or theft.

EFFORT TO OBTAIN RELIEF

Effort to obtain relief for one's self may prompt the commission of a crime, or if expended in behalf of a loved one, may result in either the commission of a crime, or an act of self-sacrifice. In either event this motive is productive of numerous dramatic situations.

A crime or offense may be committed, or a sacrifice made, under any of the following circumstances:

(A)—In an effort to secure liberty for self or loved one.

(B)—In an effort to escape from a perilous position, or to deliver another.

(C)—In an effort to obtain an object which is necessary to sustain life or health for self or loved one.

(D)—In an effort to remove a person or object which casts a reflection on the good name of self or loved one.

(E)—In an effort to remove an object or person which is causing mental or physical unhappiness to one, or to a loved one. (Fancied or real).

The above sub-classifications of the three great motives are given in order to stimulate the imagination of the reader. It is suggested that he, or she, create five or more concrete examples, all different, of each of the situations listed. Describe in detail, the identity of characters, their relation and the combination of circumstances which led to the situation described. For example let us take (D) under Revenge, which is, "Deprived them of worldly possessions through business dealings."

"John Hall is a young rancher who has struggled all his life to pay for a little piece of land. Philip Hale, a capitalist, learns that there is evidence of oil on Hall's land and buys it for a song. A big gusher is brought in. Hall is beside himself. To revenge himself, he abducts Hale's pretty daughter, etc."

Now let us twist the same situation around and introduce a sacrifice in the place of the crime, abduction.

"Young Hall has a beautiful sister who is engaged to the son of Hale. Hale objects to the union. He has an option of Hall's land. A gusher is brought in on an adjoining tract. Hale offers to release the option if Hall's sister will give up his son. She makes the sacrifice for her brother. Figure out some way for the girl to get young Hale anyway."

We will now create an example of (D) under "Desire for Possession." It was "An effort to secure any instrument which may serve as a means of securing revenge, through violence, fraud or theft."

"Robert Stanton, a district attorney, has sent Dick Walton to prison, for a crime of which he was innocent. Dick serves his time and returns. Stanton is a candidate for Governor. Dick learns that in Stanton's safe is a paper containing a record which if known

At the Picture Show in Japan

By Retta Badger

Just back from a year in the Orient, Miss Ellen Le Garde, traveler and lecturer, was, I knew, the person who could tell me what a picture show in Japan was like, so I sought her out at her hotel. There, surorunded by wonderful prints and things Japanese that I would not dare to try to name, she told me about it.

In Japan the theatres are all together in one long, very narrow street, called Theatre street. This street is known by the same name in any Japanese city, and in any Japanese city it is crammed ,ull, inght and day, with people going to the picture show. There is no cessation and the people would mortgage their homes to be there.

The Japanese use the "kakemono" method of advertising, which means that their posters are all in the form of scrolls or banners instead of the hard and fast billboard of America. Along Theatre street are huge bamboo poles, taller than a telegraph pole, and from them swing enormous posters at least six feet square, telling in large painted characters the names and places of the different shows. In front of the theatres are very large paintings in which some local artist has done in his very best style weird likenesses of the star of the current bill. Strange Clara Kimball Youngs vie with slant-eyed Norma Talmadges, and here is a very Jappy-looking Douglas Fairbanks, who is always referred to politely as "the rising young actor." Large lithographs that show a tendency of the Japanese theatre to adopt American methods of advertising are hung loosely from fruit stands or any place else available. Miss Le Garde says that all this advertising of the shows is unecessary, for you couldn't keep the people away. The theatres open at 11 a. m. and close at the same hour at night, and they are crowded all the time. The audience comes early and stays late, often bringing the family lunch and spending the day.

Around the entrance to the theatres are bouquets and wreaths of paper flowers by way of decoration. In the lobby there are tea stands, where one may stop for refreshment. In passing into the theatre everyone leaves his "geta" (shoes) at the door and proceeds in his "tabi" (a sort of stocking with a special place for the big toe, like a mitten for the foot), or in his bare feet if he had no "tabi" on. Foreigners who object to removing their shoes are provided with coveralls for them. These are placed on their feet for them by a man who stands at the door for that purpose. Women ushers, an innovation in Japan, show you to your place.

The floors of the theatres, as are all floors in Japan, are covered with "tatimi," which are padded matting mats, always all the same size, six feet by three. Floor space is measured by tatimi. Thus a man building a house plans a room six tatimi in size, that would be nine by twelve. The capacity of a theatre is reckoned the same way. The lower floor of the theatre has no chairs. The Japanese canont use them. They are used to their own way of sitting with their toes doubled under them, and cannot stand the strain of any other position. The balcony contains chairs for the benefit of foreigners, but these only in the back part. The front of the balcony, the space occupied by loges in an American theatre, has a very steeply sloping floor furnished only with the customary "tatimi," and has no chairs. This is the choice part of the house, and is always filled with the elite squatting in what look to be a very uncomfortable positions.

Smoking is permitted, and both men and women puff away on those funny little pipes that have to be refilled after every two whiffs.

The music is usually an automatic piano. However, in the Komparu Theatre in Tokyo an American orchestra plays the látest fox trots and popular selections.

The dates of the films can be judged from a program from the Komparu for April 5:

THE KOMPARU THEATRE

The audience is responsive. They love the whole bill, but the slap-stick comedy holds first place with them. Miss Le Garde says the whole nation is only "acachan" (children), and they show it more at the picture show than anywhere else. The titles are all in English, which necessitates the services of a translator. This is a regular part of the show and is done by a man who stands at one side of the screen and translates the words as they are thrown on. For those who read English and do not speak Japanese, this is a great drawback, for it distracts the attention and makes the picture anything but silent drama. But the Japanese themselves enjoy it. They have the greatest admiration for foreigners and anything foreign, and like the flavor of the English titles.

While in Kioto Miss Le Garde was asked to take a class in English in the Higher Commercial College, where boys of eighteen to twenty-one were specializing in English. She gives this sample of a lesson: One morning she announced that the first work of the day would be conversation and invited questions. This is what she got: "Are you from Amercia?" "Yes." "California?" "Yes." "Do you know Charlie Chaplin? Is he not the biggest man in America?"

WHAT'S DOING AT UNIVERSAL

James J. Corbett has finished his first picture, "The Prince of Avenue A," from the pens of Frank and Charles T. Dazey. It was formerly used as a starring vehicle by Mr. Corbett on the legitimate stage.

"The Primrose Path," by Bayard Veiller, has been put into production, with Christy Cabanne at the megaphone. Frank Mayo and Josephine Hill in the principal roles. Mae Busch, Rudd Christians and Beatrice Burnham are in the cast.

Tsuru Aoki's second feature is now being produced under the direction of William C. Dowlan. The photodrama is entitled, "Locked Lips" and is based on the story by Clifford Howard, known as "Blossom." Miss Aoki is supported in the principal role by Magda Lane, Stanhope Wheatcroft and Jack Abbey. "Locked Lips" is the story of a Japanese girl, but its scenes are laid in the Hawaiian Islands and San Francisco.

Work has been resumed on "The Moon Riders," the serial featuring Art Acord and Mildred Moore, which is now in its seventh episode.

Mary MacLaren's next feature, "The Forged Bride," is now in its second week of production, Douglas Gerrard being in charge. Supporting the star are Barney Sherry, Thomas Jefferson, Dagmar Godowski, Harold Miller and Dorothy Hagen.

Erich Von Stroheim has shot the last scene on his second feature, "The Devil's Passkey," formerly known as "The Woman in the Plot," and is now busy supervising the editing and cutting of the film.

Two western photoplays are now being produced, "Blind Chance," with Robert Burns, Charles Dorian, Natalie Warfield and Peggy O'Dare, directed by Edward Kull; and "Roarin' Dan," with Hoot Gibson, Ethel Shannon, Bert Frank and L. Pattee, supervised by Philip Rosen.

Miss Walcamp and an entire Universal photographic unit is at present in Japan, filming scenes for her latest serial, "The Petals of Lao Tze."

Frank Lawrence, film editor at Universal City, has been given general supervision over the photographic laboratory. The vacancy in the management was occasioned by the resignation of L. L. Lancaster, former laboratory chief, who left to take a camera under the direction of William C. Dowlan, directing Tauru Aoki in "Locked Lips." Monroe Bennett will operate the laboratory, assisted by Jack Guerin. S. M. Tompkins, formerly chief deputy of the laboratory, has been named superintendent of photography.

The largest title ever made has been painted at Universal City for "The Breath of the Gods," the Universal photodrama in which Tsuru Aoki is starring. The title is 38 by 42 feet and fills the entire proscenium opening of the stage at the replica of the Odeon theatre, erected for Erich Von Stroheim's photodrama, "The Devil's Passkey." Japanese players will draw aside the curtains, revealing the title as it introduces the play.

The titles of several Universal photoplays have recently been changed previous to release. The Harry Carey feature, the working title of which was "The Three Godfathers," is now "Marked Men." Von Stroheim's production, "The Woman in the Plot," has been changed to "The Devil's Passkey," while Allen Holubar's story featuring Dorothy Phillips and heretofore referred to as "Ambition," will be known as "The Gorgeous Canary."

T. Gibson Gowland

GIBSON GOWLAND TO PLAY McTEAGUE

The film world is to have another new star. This time it will be Gibson Gowland, character actor. Gowland has been asked by Eric von Strohiem of "Blind Husbands" fame to play the title role in "McTeague," the famous story by Frank Norris. Gowland will start work immediately at Universal following his engagement with Anita Stewart in "The Fighting Shepherdess." The actor's most recent work was with Metro where he played the role of Jo Portugias in Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way." He also played the leading character role in "White Heather," "Ladies Must Live," and "Blind Husbands."

ROSEMARY THEBY

By Mildred Davis

Rosemary Laughs—that should be the title of this tale. Why? Oh, that's easy. No it's not because she is highly amused, or "tickled to death," it's simply that she has acquired a sense of humor. It is such a recent acquisition that she herself is not quite used to it.

"Perhaps you can't believe this, but up until three years ago I was the most serious person in all the world," and she laughed as she said it. "I looked at the world with sober eyes, and nothing could jar me into a laugh. I couldn't take a joke or see the point in a funny story. In fact, my friends despaired of every making me laugh, and when a humorous story was forthcoming in my presence someone would always suggest that it be saved till later, that Rosemary would never "get it." That is all over now though. Why, sometimes I thing that my sense of humor is too highly developed, for I laugh at everything, usually when I shouldn't."

And here is the most foolish part of it all.

Just when Rosemary's viewpoint was at the pinnacle of sobreity she was being featured in two reel comedies, by Universal. Those little features were enthusiastically received by the public and straight faced Mary became well known as a comedian.

"I didn't like that work at all. I disliked the frivolious stories, I hated trying to be funny, so I generally played everything without a smile—and that very seriousness was what brought in the box office receipts."

Smiling at the recollection, she told us that she had to leave Universal, and break her contract, in order to get into straight dramatic work.

Since she left Universal Miss Theby has been free-lancing. Her success in the dramatic field has been phenominal. As nearly as we can ascertain she is the highest paid free-lance actress in the profession.

Her path has not always had roses in it, for she started her picture work with the rest of the gang, 'way back when the "famous fifth industry" was regarded with severe distaste by all self-respecting stage people.

It was about ten years ago. Rosemary had just finished a dramatic course in New York City, and had turned toward a career. She had had no practical experience and knew nothing of ways of theatrical life. Feeling that the first step would be the booking office ambitions Mary started the monotonous routine of visiting them. A few trips discouraged her—the people seemed cheap, tawdry and worn-out. Rosemary looked—and decided that there was nothing in it—who could tell but that ten years from then she would be doing the same thing.

Then one day a friend gave her a letter of introduction to Mr. Thompson of the Vitagraph. She did not have the usual abhorance of films so she used the letter with the result that she joined the company. There she was in stock for some time—later playing with Bison, Lubin and various other companies.

Miss Theby was sent to Los Angeles from New York by the Universal company, but since returned East, to Florida, where she worked for two years. The last two years she has spent with the Hollywood film colony, and in that time she has not missed one day's work.

For the past few weeks Rosemary has been a Spanish Senorita as the featured player in Augustus Thomas' "Rio Grande," which Edwin Carewe is producing at Brunton's studio. When this picture is finished—well, Miss Theby is not prepared to say what next.

In fact she hasn't decided but we know that there is at least one very good contract waiting for her signature. And we believe it's a lucky producer who gets that signature—for Rosemary Theby is a good bet for the best of them.

CASTING DIRECTORY

Copyright Applied For.

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $2.00 per month.

will defeat Stanton. He breaks into the office in Stanton's absence and robs the safe, obtaining the paper. He discovers that a girl with whom he is in love is the daughter of Stanton and——"

While we are about it we might as well create an example under "Effort to obtain relief." Let us choose (D), which is "In an effort to remove a person or object which casts a reflection on the good name of one's self or of a loved one."

"Harold McKim has committed a crime, the only witness of which is Tony Cerino, a poor Italian. The Italian is induced by Harold to keep his secret but McKim is always fearful that Tony will tell. He secretly trumps up a charge of sedition against Tony in order to get him deported. The evidence is against Tony but he does not suspect Harold. He goes to Harold for help. Harold promises him everything and then secretly pushes the case. Just as Tony is torn away from his sweetheart——"

Now I assure my readers that these examples were thought out as fast as I could type them. Thus it will be seen that the list does stimulate imagination. Scores of other examples could be invented from the three sub-classifications that suggested these three. In the first example we must bear in mind that we have the usual triangle, two men and the worldly possessions for which they are both contending. Each of the two men may be given scores of identities and the same thing is true of the worldly possession as well as the nature of the business dealing which defeats the unfortunate one—and the result of same may take innumerable turns.

The same rule applies to every other sub-classification on the list. Why then wait for something to "actually happen." Get busy and create combinations.

(Editor's Note—In the next installment Mr. Hill deals with the various forms of misfortune which may beset a character in the story).

Scenario Market

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one some want synopses only; others wisn the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Instruction in Photoplay Writing

THE richest market in the world today for original story material is the photoplay market. Producers are scouring the country far and wide for story ideas that can be successfully made into moving pictures. Acceptable stories readily command $100 to $2000. One Palmer student sold his first play for $3000. Others have received from $350 to $1000 for their stories. Still others have obtained lucrative staff scenario positions and are now working in Los Angeles studios. The Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing enables the student to master photoplay fundamentals through correspondence instruction without loss of time or present position.

The Advisory Council

Directing the educational policy of the institution is an Advisory Council comprising CECIL B. DeMILLE, Director General of the Famous Players - Lasky Corporation; THOMAS H. INCE, Head of the Ince Studios; LOIS WEBER, Producer, Director and Author, and ROB WAGNER, Special Contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and Screen Authority.

The Sales Service

The Photoplay Sales Department serves as a connecting link between the writer and the buyer of stories. Material accepted for marketing is handled strictly on a commission basis. Writers are invited to investigate the unusual features of this service, which include registration, editing and personal representation at the studios. The department is headed by Kate Corbaley, well-known photoplaywright and author. Affiliated with the bureau are Bess Meredyth and Anne Scott, composing the Bess Meredyth Exchange.

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

MARSHALL NEILAN'S SECOND INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

Immediately after completing "The River's End," which marked his initial effort as an independent producer, Marshall Neilan started work on his second personally directed feature at the Douglas Fairbanks studio in Hollywood.

While Mr. Neilan is putting in most of his evenings, cutting "The River's End," he is hard at work through the day directing the second feature which is an adaptation from a popular novel and for which he paid a huge sum for the screen rights.

The title of the picture has not as yet been announced but the story is said to be one of the cleverest comedies written in years. Marion Fairfax wrote the scenario.

Marjorie Daw, who is under a long term contract with Mr. Neilan, will have the leading feminine role and Matt Moore will play the male lead opposite Miss Daw.

A special part has been created for Wesley Barry, who is also under contract with Mr. Neilan.

COMEDIES

"Help" is the title of a new comedy featuring Gale Henry, work upon which started this week under the direction of Tom Gibson. Gale's support includes Billy Franey and Hap H. Ward. George Richter is behind the camera. George Jeske is playing the heavy; Blanche White, a native of old Blighty, and wife of Leo White, who played the French count in many of Charlie Chaplin's Essanay comedies, is cast as the ingenue, and Mavis Pumphrey and Bob Gray are also in the cast.

Hank Mann this week started work on the fifth in his new series of two-reel comedies under the direction of Herman C. Raymaker and general supervision of Morris R. Schlank. Madge Kirby is playing the feminine lead while Hank's other support includes Vernon Dent, Jack Richardson and Jess Weldon. Morris R. Schlank, producer of the Hank Mann comedies, this week shipped "Paper, Paste and Poultry" to Arrow, his releasing concern, in New York. This marks the third two-reel comedy ready for distribution.

WILLIAM D. TAYLOR

The Famous Players-Lasky company have paid a signal honor to William D. Taylor by signing him to a new long-term contract with the announcement that hereafter all his output is to be labeled "William D. Taylor Productions." These are to be trade-marked and given the same prominence that now is given to the productions of Cecil B. de Mille. At present Mr. Taylor is directing Mary Miles Minter. He has made pictures in recent years for Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and other noted stars.

KENTUCKY COLONEL

Joseph J. Dowling, Francis McDonald and Elinor Field, the National Film Corporation has begun the screen version of Opie P. Read's best known novel, "The Kentucky Colonel." William Seiter is directing. The continuity was written by L. V. Jefferson.

EDDIE POLO IS NOW A DIRECTOR

The Universal star has been assigned the difficult task of directing his own serial, "The Vanishing Dagger." Jacques Jaccard, who was handling the Polo serial, has been loaned to Fox where he will direct the forthcoming Tom Mix film.

Polo is filming the third episode of the serial.

Jack Dempsey has begun his work and has leased the residence in Los Angeles formerly occupied by Fannie Ward.

SOL LESSER TO PRODUCE

Sol Lesser, not being satisfied with handling distribution alone, has now gone in for producing and has affiliated himself with two producing units, George Beban and Annette Kellerman. Other film stars are to be secured by Mr. Lesser, who expects to soon build his own studio.

GEORGE BEBAN'S OWN

George Beban is now going ahead with his first play to be produced by his own individual producing organization, "One Man in a Million," written by himself.

The cast selected by Mr. Beban includes Helen Jerome Eddy, Irene Rich, Lloyd Whitlock, George Beban, Jr. (Bob White), Jennie Lee, and others.

In the Beban technical staff are De Witte Hagar, production manager; Ross Fisher, camera man; Fred Schaefer, technical director, and Chas. Watt, assistant.

DESERT STUFF

Tod Browning's company, with Priscilla Dean in the leading role—that of a Turkish beggar girl—recently returned from the Oxnard desert region, where more than four hundred horsemen participated in the scenes of desert storms and clashing of arms made there.

Carl Laemmle told Mr. Van Loan that he liked "The Virgin of Stamboul" so well that he would be pleased to have him create another foreign feature story along similar lines in the near future.

RED TERROR

"The Red Terror" is the title of H. H. Van Loan's latest story for Tom Mix. The scenes are laid in Russia and were developed by the author from incidents witnessed by him while visiting the Bolshevik-infested land in 1914.

Mr. Van Loan at the time was representing an American newspaper syndicate and had been sent from London on a special investigating mission to Russia.

"Mary Minds Her Business," a Ladies' Home Journal serial story by George Weston, will be screened during the first weeks of 1920 by the National Film Corporation of America. The book will be published in one volume as soon as the motion picture is released.

NEW OUTDOORS LOCATION

Three acres of valuable land adjacent to the little mountain town of Sunland, located about 35 miles from Los Angeles, have been leased by the National Film Corporation for general location purposes. The contour and situation of the property is well suited for general production purposes as it can be adapted to almost any sort of "atmosphere" needed for picture purposes. Besides the National's production of "The Kentucky Colonel," Sunland furnished the best exteriors for Mary Pickford's production of "Heart o' the Hills" and Metro's "Old Lady 31."

The National has built several semi-permanent "sets" on the property.

GIBSON GOWLAND

By Mildred Davis

Gibson Gowland was born in Spennymoor, England, in 1877. Until he was thirteen years of age he remained at home with his parents. He was a happy-go-lucky sort of a kid and cared little for home life, so early in the year 1890 he struck out for himself, but finding it hard to earn his own living he again returned home after a few months spent in London. However, he again became dissatisfied with domesticated life and for the second time struck out for himself. For the next ten years he would return home at periods during which time he would attend some of the most famous private schools in England. He, however, did not like schooling and avoided the institutions as much as possible.

At the age of twenty-five Gowland set sail for South Africa on a more or less adventurous trip. He arrived in Durban, Port Natal, and immediately set to spending the money he had saved up in England. After exhausting his funds he began prospecting for diamonds in the famous Vaal Valley. He was highly successful and returned to Johannesburg where he organized a stock company. His first play was "David Garrick," in which he took the title role and won considerable fame as a "drunk" character. Among the other plays the company produced were "Trilby" and "Still Waters Run Deep." But the lure of the forest was too much for him so he disbanded the company and went into Zululand, a jungle in South Central Africa. Here he spent the next five years of his life raising sugar cane. During his stay in Zululand he took part in three rebellions.

In 1909 he returned to England—and home. But again he was dissatisfied with home life. Seeking new adventures he crossed the Atlantic and arrived in Montreal, where he endeavored to rid himself of a small fortune. He seemed to have no trouble doing so, for in a few months he paid his last few dollars for a ticket to Vancouver, B. C. Somehow or another he struck it lucky in Vancouver and was engaged almost immediately following his arrival by the Walter Sanford Stock Company at the Empress Theatre. He also played with the Isabelle Fletcher Stock Company at the Imperial. He was three years with the two companies.

Late in the fall of 1914 he set out for Los Angeles to win his way to stardom in motion pictures. Soon after reaching Los Angeles he got his first bit—a part in a Carlyle Blackwell production, under the production of the now famous Jack Dillon. He then played with Max Figman in the film version of "Jack Chantry" for which he received sixty dollars a week. Feeling that he had earned quite a sum during his engagement, he took a rest and remained out of films until D. W. Griffith began producing "Intolerance." For five months he worked with the master director playing everything from a Babylonian soldier to a modern roughneck. Later he played with Francis X. Bushman in "Pennington's Choice," by Johnston McCulley, and he also appeared in many productions with the late Harold Lockwood.

But it was not until the first of 1919 that he received his first great part. One day he was out at Maurice Tourneur's studio in Culver City talking with the casting director when happened along Tourneur. Tourneur gave him the once over and beckoned him into his private office where he again scrutinized him. Without much further talk he engaged Gowland for the "Sea Captain" in "White Heather." From that time Gowland's rise has been phenomenal. He has played with George Loane Tucker in his new production, "Ladies Must Live," with Eric von Stroheim in "Blind Husbands," and in Metro's production of Sir Gilbert's Parker's "The Right of Way."

Following his engagement with Anita Stewart in "The Fighting Shepherdess," Gowland will again return to Universal where he will be starred in "McTeague," from the pen of Frank Norris. The picture will be made under the direction of von Stroheim.

BESSIE BARRISCALE'S PICTURE FINISHED

"The Luck of Geraldine Laird," Bessie Barriscale's latest photodrama, has just been completed. It was directed by Edward Sloman and was taken from a story by Kathleen Norris, who had previously furnished two of Miss Barriscale's best vehicles. Heretofore her husband, Howard Hickman, has directed her special productions, but Mr. Hickman turned this one over to other hands while he took up the work of directing another star for the time being for the benefit to be derived from the change by all parties concerned.

CAREW VS. CAREWE

Not so long ago the knowing boys on Broadway, New York, watched daily for a real muss-up affair if Edwin Carewe, director, ever met up with Arthur Carew, leading man.

It was only a little matter of mail instead of the female you suspected but when Art got all of Ed's mail and Ed read a few of Art's pink notes by mistake, Broadway became a warpath for both of them.

But the end of the war wasn't the only thing that brought folk together.

But the screen is a great soother for stage enemities.

Probably because the mailman at the Brunton lot is a bit ahead of New York mail carriers and can read. Anyway, Ed is directing Art in "Rio Grande" and mail scented and otherwise is getting into the right man's hands.

BRUNTON TO HAVE THEATRE

Robert Brunton is negotiating for a site in the Los Angeles business district, upon which to erect his own playhouse. Plans for a theatre and office building, calling for an expenditure of approximately $700,000, have already been drawn up and constructive work will begin as soon as a proper site can be secuerd. The new theatre will bear the producer's name and will probably be exclusively devoted to the showing of Brunton-made productions.

NOT ALL BAD

That line about there being nothing new under the sun may be old stuff—

But anyway here's something fairly new on the screen.

The Mexican people of all classes from peon to president are being given a square deal at last. Director Edwin Carewe is giving it to them in his filmization of Augustus Thomas' "Rio Grande."

Every Mexican in the cast of this powerful play of the river of red romance is not a bad hombre and the villainy, heavy and light, is fairly distributed between the folk hailing from north as well as south of the border line.

AUTO CLUB OF SO. CAL.

Lule Warrenton is being considered for a role in the picturization of Mary Roberts Rhinehart's "Tish" stories.

Wallace Beery wore his chest high last week. The reason? Well, Wallie had the leading heavy roles in Maurice Tourneur's "Victory" and Alan Dwan's "Soldiers of Fortune" and the critics gave him some mighty fine reviews.

NOVEL THEME

The theme of the serial now being made by the Frohman Amusement company, with Ruth Clifford and Jack Sherrill as co-stars, is a supposed unknown element or energy which might be employed by enemies of society to imperil this planet if misused. This energy, which gives the title, "The Invinsible Ray," is discovered and extracted from hidden deposits in the interior of Persia.

Elinor Fair has completed her return journey to the Pacific coast as far as Leavenworth, Kansas, where she is visiting relatives.

THE GREAT IBANEZ

June Mathis has just returned from Chicago where she had a conference with Blasco Ibanez relative to the adaption of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" for the screen.

"When I telephoned Senor Blasco Ibanez at the Auditorium Annex in Chicago," related Miss Mathis, "he seemed disappointed that I knew neither French nor Spanish, as he does not speak English.

"Possibly he was also doubtful as to the intellectual capacity of a woman scenario writer. Or maybe it was doubt as to the propriety of his seeing me. Anyway I took my mother with me and he seemed relieved to see that I had a duenna!

"Vincente Blasco Ibanez is about 45 and wonderfully brilliant. We spoke, of course, through an interpreter. Talking that way is usually beastly slow, but strangely enough I found the senor's face so expressive, his gestures so eloquent, that often I knew his meaning before the interpreter—a Senor Suarez—spoke. Sometimes it seemed that Blasco Ibanez was just as quick to understand me.

"But about our talk on 'The Four Horsemen':

"Blasco Ibanez—pronounced 'Blas-co I-ban-ya'—evidently expected that I had some kind of scenario for him to look over. As I had merely discussed the production with Mr. Rowland in New York, I told Blasco Ibanez that I had read the book carefully and had outlined my plans mentally, but that I wanted to talk them over with Mr. Karger before proceeding further.

"He also made several wonderfully inspirational suggestions, very clever and very valuable, for effects in the cinema production. In fact he showed a remarkable knowledge of the making of motion pictures, at least from the European angle. He readily understood our technical terms, too.

Blasco Ibanez is widely traveled. He described conditions in South America, where some of the scenes are laid, and told of the tango days in pre-war Paris when he was living there.

"He assured me that he was certain whatever I did with the novel would be all right. The senor recalled that I had picturized 'Out of The Fog,' and was responsible for 'To Hell with the Kaiser!' He was so good as to assure me that the woman who made those must be 'all right' to picturize 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse'!

"At the end of our hour and a half talk he expressed his pleasure at knowing me and said that he wanted me to work with him in the future on other novels. He promised to see me again when he reaches Los Angeles the middle of January."

Miss Mathis also brought news from New York that the first Taylor Holmes production, "Nothing But the Truth," had been completed. She assisted in the cutting of the picture.

Miss Mathis brought a verbal request from Richard Rowland, Metro president, that Director General Karger spend his vacation in New York instead of Japan, as he originally planned.

For Bert Lytell she had a message from the Hattons.

"Frederic Hatton told me that 'Lombardi, Ltd.,' was the only one of their stories that had been satisfactorily screened. He liked the screen characterization of Tito Lombardi better than the stage portrayal. I told him that you were doing 'Beauty' Steele in Gilbert Parker's 'The Right of Way' and he said, 'Ye gods! Think of him playing both characters!'"

FALSE REPORT

There is a false report out that Darrell Foss has quit the local picture field. Such is decidedly not the case. At present he is at his beach house nursing various bumps and bruises acquired during the taking of the society circus stuff in "The Walk-Offs" with May Allison.

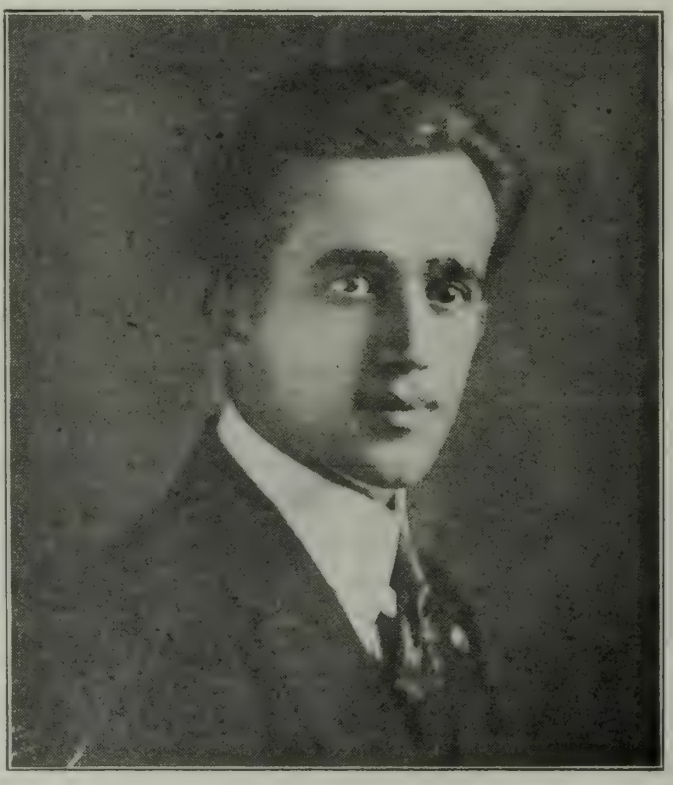
Foss says that it is easy enough to walk a tight wire or spin a rope, but the rub comes when a fellow tries to work both together. Every time he tried it the blamed wire would rear up and throw him.

FOR MISS CARLISLE

To Larry Semon goes the credit for having given one of the most attractive affairs of the week, when he entertained a group of the popular Studio Club girls, at a supper-and-theatre party, Saturday evening, honoring Miss Lucille Carlisle, who recently returned from New York City.

Supper was served in the Indian Grill at the Alexandria Hotel. A huge centerpiece of American Beauty roses graced the table, and the corsage bouquets were of Cecil Bruner roses and violets. After the supper, Mr. Semon's guests were entertained at a box party at the Orpheum, later being joined by young men guests, and returning to the Alexandria for dancing.

Those present at the supper were Miss Lucille Carlisle, Miss Grace Kingsley, Miss Grace Gordon, Miss Margaret Ettinger, Miss Julanne Johnstone, Miss Helen Eddy, Miss Sarah Y. Mason, Miss ZaSu Pitts, Miss Helen Carlisle, Miss Betty Roberts, Miss Edna Harris, Miss Gene Copeland, Miss Constance Palmer, Miss Nell Newman and Mrs. Ettinger and Mr. Larry Semon.



JOVAN J. KNEZEVICH

Jovan Knezevich, known sometimes on the screen as Roland Daly, is the only Serbian in motion pictures. Mr. Knezevich came to America to escape political troubles in Serbia, where he was well known as the editor of the Novo Vrijeme, a radical Jugoslav journal. Entering the field of motion picture industry, he has been successful both as a director and actor.

"PARLOR BOLSHEVISTS"

The latest movie producer to take Bolshevism as a theme for a picture-play is Jesse D. Hampton. Henry B. Warner is the star of the picture and he will be directed as usual by Henry King. In this case the story revolves around the so-called "parlor Bolshevists" and has to do with their supposed influence in spreading the doctrines of the dominant Russians in America. The title of the picture is not yet announced.

SCHOOL FOR WRITERS

The leading school for photoplay writers on the Pacific coast has enlarged its staff of experts who act in an advisory capacity. Among these specially chosen experts are Cecil B. de Mille, director general of Famous Players-Lasky; Rob Wagner, the noted Saturday Evening Post writer; Frank Lloyd and Clarence Badger, Goldwyn directors, and George Beban, the character actor.

HOW TO TEST YOUR ABILITIES AS A WRITER OF PHOTOPLAYS

"Study the screen if you want to test your capacities as a writer of photoplays," says Frank E. Woods. "Scenario schools and other similar media of instruction are very good as far as they go, but real benefits along this line are best obtained by putting into use one's faculties of analysis. Charles A. Dana, the great editor, made the remark that the best school of journalism was a newspaper office. Dana meant that it is practice more than precept that draws out one's abilities and trains them. So it is with writing for the silent drama.

"I would advise aspirants along this line to pick out one of the best pictures made by a recognized master director, watch it unroll two or three times with a critical eye, then go home and try to write out the continuity scene for scene from memory. Then go back and see it again to compare this work with the film.

"Next take the results of this comparison and analyze them to discover why its episodes have been treated as they were, why the fade-outs, cutbacks, close-ups and so forth were used.

"If you can understand why, you may be pretty sure that you will demonstrate your capacity to prepare your stories to the satisfaction of the scenario departments.

"Analyze—that is the keynote of my suggestion. That this dissecting process is seldom employed by aspiring writers is proven by the character of the vast majority of offerings that come to us. One hour of this work is worth many days of instruction from any other source.

"The most successful directors employ this method to improve their technic. I know of one young director who went to see "The Birth of a Nation" every night for a week in order to study its detail and the reasons for Mr. Griffith's treatment of his subject. That director is now one of the recognized leaders in his profession.

"To paraphrase Mr. Dana, the best school of photoplay construction is the motion picture theatre. Any one who has real time and lacks only the ability to put his thoughts in acceptable form for screen uses will gain surprising benefit by following the course I have here outlined."

KARGER NEWS PREMATURE

Maxwell Karger today branded as premature a locally published story to the effect that he would return shortly to New York to produce pictures known as Maxwell Karger productions for release by Metro.

It was announced in the East by Richard A. Rowland a few weeks ago that Metro would resume production at the Sixty-first street studio in New York, and that plans were to have stars, directors and writers work part of the year on each side of the continent. It is presumed that this, coupled with the fact that Mr. Karger will leave shortly for a vacation in New York, lead to the publication of the story.

Maxwell Karger will continue as director general of all Metro-Screen Classic productions. His statement regarding "Maxwell Karger productions" is as follows:

"That story is premature. My plans are indefinite. The chances are that I shall be here as director general until spring."

AROUND THE WORLD

Margarita Fisher is concluding her contract with the American Company and is to make a round-the-world tour with a U. S. government cinema expedition. Miss Fisher will star in the pictures taken on this trip, which will be largely educational.

STOWELL ESTATE

William Stowell, the Universal actor who was killed in a South American railroad wreck, left an estate of $17,000, which an aunt in Chicago will inherit.

ATTENTION, P. A.'s

Camea! asks the co-operation of the various publicity departments in keeping the "Pulse of the Studio" chart up to date. Even when given the most careful attention in our office, mistakes will appear in the chart unless the studios will co-operate in sending in accurate corrections and data. As the Pulse is referred to repeatedly for information throughout the week, it is absolutely necessary that it be up-to-date. In mailing in your data, see that it reaches the Camera! office not later than Wednesday evening.

Charlotte Merriam is back at Universal and has started work in a new comedy picture under the direction of Al Santell.

Bert Apling is back in town after finishing a two months' engagement with the Curwood Company.

Jack Pickford, who has recently completed his first Goldwyn picture, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," made a flying trip to New York to spend the holidays.

Alec E. Francis recently signed a year's contract with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

WHERE TO FIND PEOPLE YOU KNOW

PICK-UPS BY THE STAFF

HAYAKAWA IN GREENWICH VILLAGE SATIRE

Sessue Hayakawa, who has just finished "The Brand of Lopez," an original story written for him by E. Richard Schayer, and directed by Joseph DeGrasse, will start work on January fifth on a new picture, the working title of which will be "The Bloodhound." The story is a satire on the condition of the story market, where no one whose name is not well known has a ghost of a show to sell anything. Mr. Hayakawa is cast for the popular author whose "best sellers" are always in demand. Frank Williams runs the Hayakawa camera.

THE CARTER DE HAVENS

The Carter De Havens have just finished "Spring," the third of their series of comedies. The two previous were "Teasing the Soil" and "Hoodooed." Work was pushed through on "Spring" in order to give the company a two weeks' Christmas vacation. Charles Parrott is directing the De Haven comedies with Rowland C. and Walter H. Price at the cameras. Bob McGowan is the scenarist and assistant director, in fact Mr. McGowan is the busiest man around the place with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. De Haven themselves, for he does every thing but actually work in the picture.

George W. Stout, studio manager for the Haworth Pictures, returned last week from New York, where he ran into Harry Caulfield and Lee Moran, who were there just to look around. Mr. Stout says that "Soldiers of Fortune" and "Male and Female" have made big hits in New York.

Peggy O'Dare has rejoined Eddie Polo and will appear in his support in "The Vanishing Dagger."

Virginia Fairs, the New York girl who won the recent Fame and Fortune contest, was sent to Universal by Carl Laemmle and has already begun work. She is playing opposite Hoot Gibson in a two-reel western, "Runnin' Straight," being produced under the direction of Art Flaven.

Edith Story has just finished "The Greater Profit" and will take a rest until she has decided on another vehicle. William Worthington directed the picture and Eddie Gheller was at the camera. Pell Trenton played the lead and Ogden Crane, Lloyd Bacon, Bobbie Roberts, Jack McCready, Lillian Rambeau and Dorothy Wood were in the cast. Ben Cohen wrote the continuity.

Mr. Leon T. Osborne has signed with Cliff Smith to direct Edythe Sterling Productions for the coming year, to be released through the Republic Film Corporation. Alvin Neitz will write the five-reel stories to be directed by Cliff Smith.

Milton Sills will be Viola Danna's leading man in "Eliza Comes to Stay." Mr. Sills will have the part of "Sandy" Varrell, the naturalist and explorer, who adopts the orphan girl, Eliza, in H. V. Esmond's play. Mr. Sills was Miss Dana's leading man in "Satin Jr."

"Eliza Comes to Stay" was adapted for the screen by A. F. Younger. It will be directed by W. A. Howell.

Marguerite de la Motte, Jack Mulhall and Ruth Stonehouse have been engaged for principal roles in "The Hope."

Albert Shelby LeVino has started work on the script of "Burning Daylight," Mitchell Lewis' first Metro Jack London production for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc.

Viola Dana and twenty-six members of her company spent five days at Pleasanton, palm-treeless town of California, filming initial scenes of "Eliza Comes to Stay," under the direction of W. A. Howell.

Harry Van Meter has been engaged to play Tozer in "Judah," the Henry Arthur Jones play in which May Allison is starring.

Henry Otto directs "Judah," which has been adapted for the screen by Lois Zellner.

Joseph Strauss Dances — Joseph Strauss, Metro studio manager, made a name for himself as an exponent of graceful dancing at the latest Hotel Hollywood hop.

Davis Assisting Blache—Alfred Davis is assisting Herbert Blache in the direction of "The Hope."

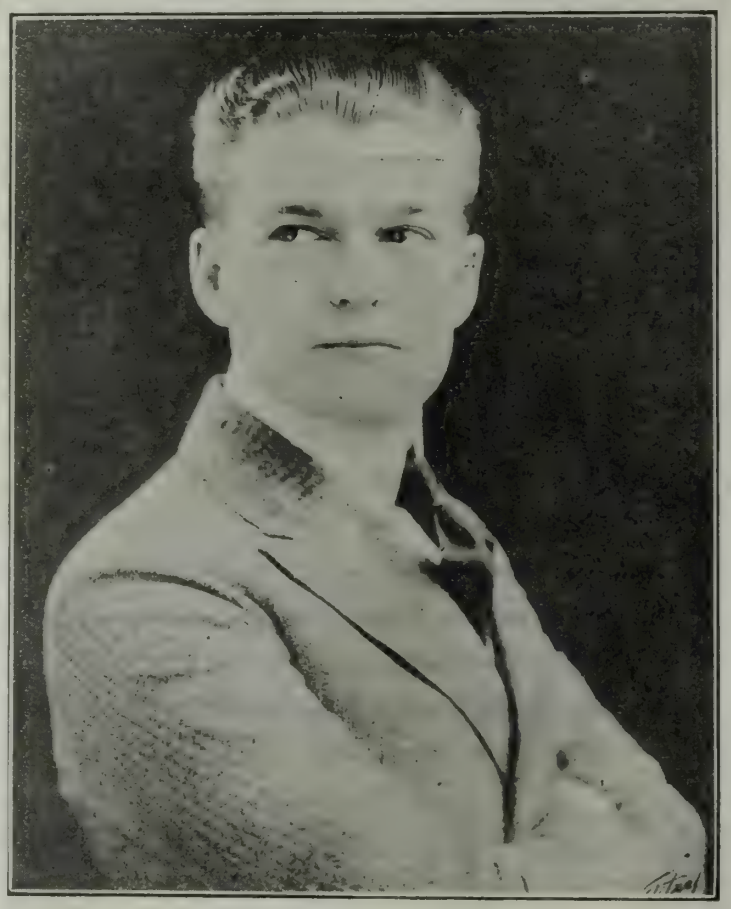
Rich Has the Fever—H. Thompson Rich, who has recently joined the Screen Classics scenario department, has been in Hollywood only two weeks but already he has ordered a new automobile. Mr. Rich declares that in the east he had good old John W. Hay Fever—but thought he was through with fevers when he came to California. Now, however, he has the automobile fever. The difference between the two being to blow your horn instead of your nose, says H. Thompson Rich.

Percy Challenger has concluded five weeks with Allan Dwan Company and is now engaged at Metro in "Judah," which is being filmed by Henry Otto with May Allison in leading role.

May Walters has a character part with Jack Conway at the Brunton studios.

H. Thompson Rich, former editor of The Forum, is the newest addition to the Screen Classics scenario staff. He arrived at the Metro studio last week from New York City and was immediately assigned to do the script for a forthcoming production. The scenario department, headed by June Mathis, is now made up of Finis Fox, Albert Shelby LeVino, A. P. Younger, Lois Zellner, Arthur J. Zellner, and H. Thompson Rich.

The picturization of the Drury Lane melodrama, "Hearts and Trumps," has been assigned to Finis Fox.



WALLACE MacDONALD

SHOOT!

Aggie Herring, who appears in J. Warren Kerrigan's latest Brunton production, "The Dream Cheater," created the role of "Barbara Fritchie" on the legitimate stage. She tells an amusing story of how she came to play "Barbara" on the screen.

While she was in San Francisco with a road show a well known motion picture producer called at her hotel.

"I want you to play Barbara in pictures," he said.

"Not a chance," replied Aggie, "I'm making too much money on the boards."

"I'll give you double your present salary and an interest in the picture," said the producer.

"In that case," said Aggie, "shoot if you will this old, grey head!"

H. H. Van Loan's story, "The Great Redeemer," is being prepared for production by Maurice Tourneur.

OVERTURE

J. Warren Kerrigan recently engaged a crew of workingmen to redecorate Kerry Villa, his Hollywood home. One evening he invited them all to the Brunton studios to see a preview of his latest production, "The Dream Cheater."

The men accepted the invitation and attended the preview in a body. The following Saturday, however, Kerrigan was tendered this statement by each member of the force: "For three hours over-time, Wednesday, Jan. 2, at the Brunton studios, $4.50."

"APHRODITE"

Dorothy Dalton has made a pronounced hit in the chief role of "Aphrodite," the spectacular stage production now showing in New York. "Aphrodite" is to be filmed by the Famous Players-Lasky company with Miss Dalton probably featured.

GRIMWOOD IS AGAIN SOUGHT FOR LEGIT

Captain Herbert Grimwood, the famous English actor who was sought by Morris Gest for an important role in "Aphrodite," is again in the limelight. Grimwood is in receipt of several flattering offers to join a new production soon to be launched on Broadway. He was forced to turn Gest's first offer down as he had signed with Fairbanks to do the heavy in "When the Clouds Roll By."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS NEW PICTURE

Casting for Douglas Fairbanks' new five-reel Western began the day after Christmas. The scenario was written by Tom Geraghty and the picture will be directed by Victor Fleming, assisted by Ted Reed; William McGann and Harry Thorpe at the cameras. Albert McQuarrie is casting for the Fairbanks pictures.

MAX LINDER LOOKING AROUND

Max Linder arrived last week from France. So far he has not made any arrangements for starting production but has spent most of the time in social visits to his friends here. He is looking over the ground, however, for he intends to make about six pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Linder and Mr. Linder's secretary, who accompanied him from France, are at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

LOUIS BENNISON

It is rumored that the motion picture colony is to be augmented by the arrival of Louis Bennison, who has been exploited on the screen by an eastern company to some extent, but is to be given hereafter much greater prominence.

"The Right of Way" is finally ready for the screen after twelve weeks of work. Leatrice Joy shares the honors with Bert Lytell. In the cast also are Carmen Phillips, Antrim Short, Virginia Caldwell, Frank Currier and Graham Pettie.

In "The Strange Boarder," which director Clarence Badger has just completed for the Goldwyn company with Will Rogers as the star, appears Lionel Belmore, a veteran of the stage, who played with Henry Irving for fifteen years.

The Famous Players-Lasky company have been enjoined from showing the movie version of "Peg o' My Heart." Hartley Manners, author of the play, alleges violation of contract.

Fritzi Brunette is playing opposite J. Warren Kerrigan in "One Week-End," a story of New York society life. This marks Miss Brunette's sixth engagement with Kerrigan.

Wedgewood Novell, who played the heavy part in J. Warren Kerrigan's recently completed Brunton production, "The Dream Cheater," has departed for the Ozark mountains on a much needed vacation.

Ruth Langston, former leading lady for Lewis Bennison and Henry Miller, has been engaged by Robert Brunton for a leading part in the Jack Dempsey serial. Miss Langston starred in Klaw and Erlanger's New York production of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" and played opposite Dustin Farnum in several pictures.

Lule Warrenton has just finished a big part with Fox, and is being seriously considered for a character role in the picturization of Mary Roberts Rhinehart's "Tish" stories.

Wallace Beery has been chosen for the part of Buck McKee in Lasky's forthcoming picturization of "The Roundup." Beery is now playing the heavy lead in Priscilla Dean's "The Beautiful Beggar."

Betty Bouton, who came to light in Mary Pickford's "Heart o' the Hills," is now with Marshall Neila.

MOVING PICTURE MAKING IN THE FAR EAST

The manager of the cinema company which reached Shanghai last week en route for Peking and Mongolia for a million dollar production, "The Lotus Petal," saw possibilities of good "business" in the Autumn Race Meeting, and proceeded to make the most of the opportunity. The result will no doubt be that all the most interesting phases of the meeting will go down to history on the film, with perhaps a few additions unknown to official records. Nothing of note escaped the busy man with the camera, from the "finish" of the Champions to the cashing of a $5.10 dividend. We have all supposed that Mr. John Johnstone won the big race on "Silver Streak," but should not be surprised if the movie man discovered that the race was really won by Percy de Brougham, who had dashed over from Pootung in an aeroplane just in time to win the race and thwart a villainous coup.

A second edition of the Champions was run off on Saturday, a field of ten turning out to oblige the company, and doing a single "quarter" in fine style, with a camera man on the back of a motor car which led the way. The race was won by Midas (a movie star up—and, it might be added, well shaken by the time the race was over. The "heroine" of the company was to have ridden the winner, but a rather too strenuous morning's gallop deprived her of this honor. It was the heroine, however, who, attired in full riding costume, rode the winner into the paddock and received showers of congratulation, faithfully registered by the camera man. The making of the story went on in various parts of the enclosure, and if the finished picture happens to come this way we shall probably discover the November 1919 meeting to have been a frightfully romantic affair.—From The North China Herald.

THE ROADS AROUND HERE

Coast Route North—The best route at present between Los Angeles and Ventura is via Hollywood, Cahuenga Pass, Lankershim, Van Nuys, Chatsworth and the Santa Susana Pass Road to Somis. Turn left at Somis and follow to Camarillo, then use the regular state highway into Ventura. Saticoy Bridge is under construction, therefore the direct route between Somis and Ventura cannot be used. Construction work is now under way on the Conejo Grade and the road over that grade is now closed. Maintenance work is still under way between the foot of Cahuenga Pass and Calabasas. Therefore it is necessary to go north—or south via the route first above mentioned. Pavement extends from Ventura north through Santa Barbara to the Los Cruces Store in Gaviota Pass and is broken only by short stretches of dirt road approaching two bridges, one over Refugio Creek and the other over Dark Canyon. The 14-mile dirt stretch between Los Cruces and Zaca is getting to be quite rough. Pavement extends from Zaca north through Los Alamos to Divide. Between Divide and Orcutt, a distance of 3.5 miles, construction work is under way and the detour provided alongside the construction work is sandy and rough and extremely poor in wet weather. Pavement from Orcutt north through Santa Maria to the city limits of Arroyo Grande. Dirt road through Arroyo Grande, then pavement to the southern city limits of San Luis Obispo, thence paved to Paso Robles. Rough dirt road through Paso Robles then highway through San Miguel to a short distance north of Bradley where a 100-foot detour is necessary along construction work. This detour is in good condition and cannot be affected by rains. Paved the balance of the way into San Francisco with exception of dirt road through King City.

Inland Route North—Use either North Broadway and Avenue 20 of the road by way of Hollywood and Lankershim to the San Fernando Boulevard in driving from Los Angeles to Saugus. The Ridge Route is entirely paved from Saugus to Bailey's Ranch. Advise motorists not to exceed the 15-mile speed limit in driving over it. Pavement is had from Bailey's Ranch to the Kern County line, then rough oiled road will be found to the summit of the Grapevine Grade. Between this point and the foot of the grade the main road is under construction and it is necessary to make a detour approximately 2 miles long. Two detours along this construction work have been provided, one to carry northbound travel only, and one for southbound travel. The former detour is very steep and narrow, but will give no difficulty in dry weather if ordinary care is exercised in driving. The detour for southbound travel has no grades over 15 per cent and is less than one mile in length. After making the detour, pavement extends north through Bakersfield to Delano. From here a choice of two roads is had to Fresno, one by way of Tipton and Tulare, and the other through the orange grove section of Tulare County via Porterville, Lindsay, and Visalia. Both are paved. Balance of route to San Francisco paved—some repair work under way in Dublin Canyon.

WILL ROGERS
Will Rogers, Goldwyn star, now appearing in his second picture, "Jubilo."

San Diego Coast Route—This route is now in excellent condition although it is still necessary to make the detour between Culvers Corner and El Toro. This detour is 9.6 miles long and has recently been scraped and until further rains set in it will be in fair condition. Rain makes this detour very slippery, therefore it is not advisable without chains. With this exception, the entire Coast Road can be classified as excellent. Construction work still under way on the Old Town Road and it is necessary for all travel to use Ocean Beach Route between La Jolla and San Diego.

Inland Route to San Diego—Pavement from Los Angeles via the Valley Boulevard, Pomona, Ontario, Riverside, Perris, Elsinore and Temecula to the San Diego County Line with the exception of the detour on the Valley Boulevard one mile east of its intersection with the San Gabriel Boulevard. This detour is 2.3 miles long and quite rough. Dirt road through the towns of Perris and Elsinore. From the County Line south through Fallbrook and Escondido to San Diego, excellent dirt road.

Valley Boulevard—It is still necessary to make a detour on the Valley Boulevard between its intersection with the San Gabriel Boulevard and El Monte. That detour is encountered at a point one mile east of the San Gabriel Boulevard and is to the north of the main road. Go four-tenths of a mile to the north, one-tenth mile east and eight-tenths of a mile south to the main road. It is getting to be very rough and chucky.

Big Bear—It is possible to reach Big Bear Valley by only one route at this writing—by way of Victorville. This route is entirely open and is giving no trouble despite the fact that snow is encountered between the summit of Cushenbury Grade and the Valley proper. Baldwin Lake is completely frozen over. Big Bear Lake is only partially frozen. Good accommodations at several of the resorts in the Valley. Hesperia cut-off O. K.

Special Report

The present work between Irvine and El Toro is progressing nicely. Shoulders have been put in on each side, and these will be complete the entire distance in about one week more.

With the exception of about 6000 feet, all of this road from Irvine to the El Toro road will now be resurfaced. This will take in the neighborhood of three weeks after work is actually started which will not be before 10 days. Thus this portion of the road will be reopened about the latter part of January.

Commencing in another week, shoulders will be put in on the road between El Toro Road and Galavan. This is a distance of about 6 miles. While this work is in progress, the contractor is planning to keep one side of the highway open, allowing frequent places for meeting vehicles. He will keep this road open just as long as the public co-operates with him and drives carefully. Large signs are prepared making a speed limit of SIX MILES PER HOUR and unless the public will help to maintain order along this road by driving carefully, the road will be closed and the only available route then will be by way of Laguna, as it is impossible to get the old temporary road from El Toro to Galavan that was used when the State Highway was under construction.

"GENTLEMEN" FIRST, AND WHY?

By Virginia Blair.

Why? That is what I should like to know, just why? "Men first" seems to be a Los Angeles law more especially in use around the motion picture studios.

Is it because the good husband must hurry home to get darling wifey and perhaps the dear kiddies their dinner that he gets his pay-check first, while wifey stands and waits, no matter how tired she may be? Ah! sir, I am afraid that is not the reason, but if not, what is the reason, pray?

The other day for the first time in the history of my motion picture experience, I actually had a thrill—an honest to goodness thrill—in fact, the kind that most of you who have thrilis every day in the week know nothing about.

I was standing, as is my habit, a little away from the crowd studying the different faces as has been my wont so long, but thinking more especially of the poor, tired woman who had been talking to me a while before. She had been up all night with a sick child, worked hard all day and was now patiently waiting while the men, I cannot call them gentlemen, were being paid.

(By the way, "Webster" will tell you what the word gentleman means, if any of you care to look it up.)

I glanced over at the woman again and I could see by her expression that her thoughts were at home with the sick child. I tell you it made me hot under the collar and I was about to push may way through the crowd of men and ask the assistant for the woman's check, when a voice at my shoulder said: "Girl, you look tired, can I find you a place to sit down?" Looking tired was nothing new to me; I generally do loo ktired; but something in the man's voice, (for it was a man) made me turn around only to find he was an utter stranger to me. So for lack of something better to say, I stupidly asked him why he was not getting his pay-check like the rest.

"My dear lady," he said (and it was then I got my thrill), "do you think for a moment that I who give myself the title of 'gentleman' could think of being waited upon before all these women? Never!"

But I persisted: "You may not get your check at all."

At that he laughed and said: "It takes a bigger thing than that to worry a 'gentleman;' but how about you?"

"Oh! I am just a woman," I said, and inwardly groaned as I thought of the many times I had waited.

"Oh, yes," you will say, "some thrill that," and you may call the man a fool. But I tell yo uthat is the kind of thrills I like and I even like such fools.

And now I am going to ask the assistant directors, the directors, the general directors, "Why is it always 'men first'?"

If the men that come to you for work are not gentlemen why not help them to become so, you who are at the head? Or will it always be the same, and why?

CASTING DIRECTORY

Copyright Applied For.

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $2.00 per month.

SOCIAL FRICASEE AND CAPER SAUCE

By Mildred Davis

Dugout Notes—The Dugout girls are elated over the success of their Christmas campaign for the poor kiddies of Los Angeles. Through their efforts three hundred children were supplied with Christmas stockings, filled with fruits and candies. At least one hundred good garments were given away, and added to these were the flannel garments which the Dugout girls made. Saturday night another dance was given, the proceeds of which will go to the charity fund. Mrs. Woodward now has a charter and is working in conjunction with the city charitable organizations. She plans to continue this work indefinitely, even after the holidays, and all the Dugout girls are cooperating with enthusiasm.

Home Dinner—Miss Polly Moran spent Christmas day at home, and enjoyed a quiet home dinner with her family.

Returns Home—Mrs. MacDonald, the mother of Katherine MacDonald and Mary MacLaren, returned Tuesday evening from a six weeks' trip East.

Big Barbecue—Last week Tex Marcelle furnished a pleasant day's entertainment for his friends with a large barbecue at Griffith park. Among those who gathered to consume the juicy meat were Edwin Carew, with his wife, baby and daughter Violet; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shulze, Mr. and Mrs. Bbo Curley, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Burns, Miss Peggy O'Dare, Miss Conway, B. Jakouski, Hary Franklin and party, Ernest Smith, Clarke Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sears and Hector Sarno.

Southern Hospitality—So often we hear of it and so seldom we see it. But right here we make note of a delightful display of it made recently by one Master Harry Lee Ward, alias Memphis, when late visitors, who called at Universal City in search of certain information, were received by said "Memphis."

Opat Observes—Recently Camera! mentioned one I. D. Opat in respect to his unique preparations for entering the motion picture game. You will remember that he staged several scenes including bits from Shakespeare and straight and character studies. Of these scenes he had a nine-hundred feet test made. Since making this test Opat has gone deliberately about his plans, no rush or grasping for work, but with a definite idea. He is showing his film to various actors, producers and directors, not with the intention of applying for a job, but to get their opinions in regard to the possibilities of successful production from Opat's point of view—that of an artist, dreamer and student. He has met with great encouragement, so that probably we will hear of more direct action from him in the near future.

Nick Gogley, veteran character actor who played with the original "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company, has signed a contract with Goldwyn.

Doris Pawn is supporting Will Rogers in „The Strange Boarder."

Johnny Jones, aged 12, plays the title role in the Goldwyn "Edgar" series.

Jack Richarson is busy these days. He was just finishing a full dress with Bessie Barriscale, when he was rushed in an automobile to Ben Hastis to play a bad man. At the close of that, he found another machine waiting to whisk him to Vitagraph to play a lead with William Duncan.

Gene Page arrived from New York Christmas evening. He is to be co-starred at Vitagraph with Joe Ryan in the new serial, "The Black Soviet."

Noel Smith, having finished a Big V comedy with Jimmie Aubrey and Babe Hardy, is all ready to start the next one.

William E. Wing has been engaged to write this serial.

HAPPY NEW YEAR'S

CHARACTERS

FRAYEE FILM CO.

Dec. 16. Daily Press, Riverside, Cal.—It was left to Harry and Louise Lamont to "take the show." This pair put on a very clever skit. Louise, is a stunning little woman and perfectly at home on the speaking stage. Her French character was a big hit, and the "disrobing" feature was a very clever thing and prettily staged. She is an artistic dancer and she was dressed like a million dollars. As the boys down front say, 'Louise shakes a mean foot." Harry is a comedian of rare ability. He can sing;. he can dance, and he has the stage ease that develops from years of experience. The skit never dragged, and it pleased. It alone was worth the two bits paid at the door.

PUBLICITY ASSOCIATION

The publicity departments of the various studios are forming an association to further the interests of better publicity. This is certainly a big step in the right direction and we want to congratulate them and give them our hearty endorsement. At a meeting next Tuesday at 309 Mason Opera House, a committee will be formed and officers appointed. These names will be announced in our next issue.

THEATRE TO PICTURES

Several years ago Wallace MacDonald was part owner of three moving picture theatres in Los Angeles. He used to manage the houses, audit the receipts, hand out the programs and sing at the theatres at least once each night.

Now he is playing the lead in support of Anita Stewart in "The Fighting Shepherdess." Among his recent pictures are juvenile roles with Mary MacLaren in "Rogue and Riches;" Bessie Love in "The Little Boss;" Frank Keenan in "Brothers Divided;" Madge Kennedy in "Leave It to Susan," and Marguerite Clark in "A Girl Named Mary."

NEW DRYER

There has been recently installed in the photographic department of the Thomas H. Ince Studios, a rotary dryer, which consists of a large cast iron cylinder, heated by gas, and a canvas bolt conveyer, on this latter the photographs to be dried are placed, and are carried over the heated cylinder.

ROB WAGNER'S HOME ON FIRE

Rob Wagner and Charlie Ray proved themselves to be sure enough heroes, with no carema to take it at all, at a Wagner's home on Isabel street. The fire which partially destroyed Mr. Rays and Wagners were having a delightful evening around the Wagners' fire place when Charlie looked up and saw flames coming out of the wall. The Wagner home contains many valuable pictures and art treasures, and these Charlie commenced carrying out at once, while Mr. Wagner rushed onto the roof and began tearing off the shingles which were blazing. Mrs. Wagner and Mrs. Ray called the fire department and assisted in carrying out the things. Fortunately only three of the many paintings were destroyed.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Wagner and Mr. Ray had been down town posing Charlie, Glacia Swanson and Wallace Reid in the line in front of Grauman's for an illustration for Rob Wagner's latest Saturday Evening Post story on "Audiences." Mr. Wagner's keen Post articles on every angle of the motion picture industry are famous and now he suddenly switches the searchlight onto the audience. The story will appear in about a month.

UNIVERSAL NOTES

By Chas. L. Hertzman

Officials at Universal City have just been given a pre-view of the completed Holubar production, starring Dorothy Phillips, the working title of which was "Ambition," but which will be released under the name of "The Gorgeous Canary."

In Miss Phillips' support are Robert Anderson, Rodolph Valentino, William Ellingford, Margaret Mann, Emily Chichester, Elinor Field, Mary Wise, Dan Crimmins, Rosa Gore, Frank Elliott, Katherine Griffith, Emma Gerdes and many others.

Tod Browning is still at work on "The Beautiful Beggar" production starring Priscilla Dean. Assisting the stars are Wheeler Oakman, Wallace Beery, Edward Burns, E. A. Warren, Clyde Benson, Eugenie Forde, Ethel Ritchie, Yvette Mitchell and others. Th eproduction is based on H. H. Van Loan's story, "The Virgin of Stamboul."

Mary MacLaren is reaching the final stages of her Universal production, "The Forged Bride," under the guidance of Douglas Gerrard, and supported by J. Barney Sherry, Harold Miller, Thomas Jefferson, Dagmar Godowsky and Dorothy Hagen. The photodrama is based on "The Sins of the Father," by J. G. Hawks.

A number of short subjects are being filmed at Universal City. Art Flaven is directing "Runnin' Straight," a two-reel western featuring Hoot Gibson, supported by Virginia Faire. Edward Kull is holding the megaphone on "Kaintuck's Ward," a two-part drama featuring Robert Burns and Peggy O'Dare, and Edward Sowders is about to begin work on another western playlet, "A Sagebrush Gentleman."

Director Phil Rosen is busy on the manuscript of "The Better Half," a starring vehicle for Mary MacLaren, which he will direct. Harry Carey and James J. Corbett will soon begin work on their next production, while Rollin Sturgeon, who has just finished "The Breath of the Gods," is arranging to start on "Jewel," the cast for which has not yet been selected.

Scenario Market

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wisn the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

WILL ROGERS

by Ben Ames Williams
Directed by Clarence Badger

"Tell them that you lied!"

In addition to being a cowpuncher with a punch, a humorist without effort, a wit without malice, an actor without pose, and an artist with bells on —

Will Rogers can also get mad!

As Jubilo he's a hobo, a rough diamond who rubbed up against a job until the sparkle of a man shone through.

Twice he made good!

Once when he beat up the cad who lied about Rose Hardy and next when he tried to take the blame for the big train hold-up that they were trying to hang on her father.

See Will Rogers — see his smile — see his titles — see his acting — he's the biggest photo-comedy find since the motion picture was invented!

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

TO NEW YORK FOR PREMIERE

Tod Browning, director; Priscilla Dean, star, and H. H. Van Loan, author, respectively, of "The Virgin of Stamboul," which is being produced at Universal City, have arranged to go to New York when the special feature production is shown on Broadway for the first time. Other members of the party will be Miss Dean's mother and Mrs. Van Loan. The star, who enacts the role of a Turkish beggar girl in the Van Loan play, will make several public appearances while there, the first of which will be at the premiere production of the big picture.

SIMPSON GETS BIG STORY

Russell Simpson, who some weeks ago delegated the popular scenarioist, Louis Stevens, to write a snow story, is now in receipt of the script. If Simpson decides to produce this picture it will be a big feather in the prolific scribe's cap, not to mention the glory to be aquired by Russell.

Anita Stewart's next picture will be "The Yellow Typhoon," from Harold McGrath's story which ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post. It will be directed by Edward Jose.

The King W. Vidor Company is on location at Sunland this week, where scenes are being taken for Vidor's first picture for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, temporarily titled "The Family Honor." Among the featured players already at work under Mr. Vidor's direction are Florence Vidor, Roscoe Karns, Charles Meredith and Harold Goodwin. Other notable names are to be added.

Mae Allyn has completed her engage with Mary Pickford and is now playing leads with the C. & M. Film Company.

The title of Warren Kerrigan's new picture, in which he will have the cooperation for the sixth time of Fritzie Brunette as his leading lady, is "One Week-end." It is a lively comedy of New York society life from the pen of Wyhan Martyn.

Pending the completion of her permanent arrangements, Elinor Fair, the young Fox star who recently concluded her engagement with that company, has consented to appear in an all-star cast assembled for an important production by the Universal company. Besides Miss Fair the play will include Frank Mayo, Claire Anderson and David Butler.

According to Frank E. Woods, supervising director, the Famous Players-Lasky schedule for 1920 contemplates the most important and ambitious list of plays in the history of the concern. Additional companies are to be installed in the enlarged plant. In carrying out the "fewer and better pictures" program the time limit is to be removed from directors and a generous additional allowance for expense on each picture is to be made.

The film rights of David Belasco's successful play, "Polly With a Past," have been purchased by Metro. It's the story of the rise of a chorus girl.

Charles Ray is about to begin the making of his last picture under his contract with Ince-Paramount. At the end of another month Ray will put behind him the hard grind at the studio and spend a few weeks in and around New York getting a relaxation after a year of the most strenuous effort. In order to hasten the day of his freedom to go into independent productions, this popular actor has worked night and day for months, and a rest after the strain is imperative.

The American Ambition Association, an eastern organization that is fostered by a leading magazine, has appointed Bessie Love "National Patroness" of the society.

BRUNO BECKER EAST

Bruno J. Becker, general manager of the Gale Henry comedy company, writes from New York, where he went to attend an important meeting of the Bulls Eye Film Corporation officials, that New York may have its charms, but he's very anxious to get back to sunny California. The first night in the eastern city, General Manager Becker states, he got caught in a terrible snowstorm, lost his way to the hotel and the next day spent most of his time nursing a pair of frost-bitten ears. On his return to the coast he will visit film exchanges west of Chicago that are handling the Gale Henry comedies. He is expected back to Los Angeles about the middle of February.

TO ARIZONA

During the production of "The Red Terror," the Van Loan story in which Tom Mix is to be starred, the company will spend two weeks in the silver mining region of Arizona for the western scenes, which furnish a number of real thrills in the picture.

HERE FROM NEW YORK

W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, New York, has arrived in Los Angeles to visit producers who release their subjects through his concern. This marks his first trip to the coast, and as he stepped from the train at the depot more than a score of friends were on hand to greet him, including the Hank Mann bathing girls, Hank Mann and Morris R. Schlank, producer of the Mann comedies. During his stay in this city President Shallenberger will be the guest of Morris R. Schlank.

From Rhode Island, where she spent a happy Christmas and New Year's with her childhood playmates, Ruth Clifford has gone to Florida to make several important scenes for the serial in which she is being starred by the Frohman Amusement Corporation. The work on the serial is nearing its final stages and the novelty promised for it has excited no little anticipation in the film world.

MABEL NORMAND
Goldwyn Star

TITLES

Morris R. Schlank, producer of the Hank Mann comedies, announces the titles of the first three two-reel comedies featuring Hank now ready for distribution. They are "Broken Bubbles," "Paper, Paste and Poultry," and "A Roaming Romeo." They will be marketed on the state right basis by Arrow.

Director Henry King, who has just completed "The White Dove" for Jesse D. Hampton, with H. B. Warner as the star, says that the child actress, Virginia Lee Corbin, has a serious role in the play. Heretofore this prodigy, who, by the way, began her career under the tutelage of Mr. King, has always played parts of distinctly humorous nature. Virginia was borrowed from the Fox company for the part.

THE CRITERION CO.

The Criterion Company is a new company just forming. It is headed by Cash Darrell, an old "Coast Defender" and dramatic stock man, with a few years in the pictures to his credit.

The company is to produce two and three reel comedies and comedy-dramas.

They are capitalizing at a hundred thousand dollars, and are offering only enough shares to cover the cost of production of the first picture.

JOINED BRUNTON

Wycliffe A. Hill, author of "Ten Million Photoplay Plots," has joined the staff of the B. B. Hampton Company, at the Brunton Studio. He is adapting several famous novels to the

CALIFORNIA STORY

Charles E. Whittaker is at present busily engaged in making a screen adaptation of the novel, "The Soul of Rafael," by Marah Ellis Ryan, who is now living at Eagle Rock. Clara Kimball Young will star in this production. Mrs. Ryan wrote a great part of her book in the famous Mission of San Juan Capistrano. Into this fascinating story is woven the atmosphere of Old California in the days just after the Golden State was taken into the Union. Before coming to America, Mr. Whittaker, the creator of many successes in the screen drama, was chief of staff of the British War Refugees Committee, and as a result of arduous service in this capacity suffered a complete physical collapse, which brought him to this country to recuperate. Taking up the writing of screen stories first as a recreation, he soon found himself engaged in it as a serious profession.

The final scenes of "Let's Be Fashionable," the fourth Thomas H. Ince production co-starring Douglas MacLean and Doris May, have been completed, and the picture is now in the cutting room, where it is being edited prior to the final showing before Mr. Ince.

The story, by Mildred Considine and picturized by Luther Reed, tells of the happenings of a newly married couple who move into a fashionable New York suburb, where they attempt to break through the so-called upper crust, resulting in a series of complications and situations which make for the kind of comedy made famous by this team in "Twenty-three and a Half Hours' Leave."

The next picture to be made by Douglas MacLean and Doris May is from the pen of Julien Josephson announced under the working title of "Shakespeare Clancy." Casting Director Freddy Fralick is busy selecting the supporting cast, and it is expected that rehearsals will start the latter part of this week.

Tom Wilson has been engaged to play the part of a comedy house detective in Marshall Neilan's latest production, "Never Get Married," now being filmed at the Douglas Fairbanks studios. Wilson plays the part of the negro servant in D. W. Griffith's "The Greatest Question."

The sixth episode of the new Eddie Polo serial thriller, "The Vanishing Dagger," is nearing completion at Universal under the direction of the star. The chapter will be finished within the next ten days.

Work on a new Eric von Strohiem production for Universal has been delayed temporarily pending the company's success in obtaining the screen rights to "McTeague," Frank Norris' famous story of San Francisco. Gibson Gowland is to play the title role.

Frederick Bennett, author of "The Radium Mystery," "The Lost Express" and several comedies, including "The Desert Hero" and "The Banker," featuring Arbuckle, has been engaged by Morris R. Schlank, producer of the Hank Mann comedies, to write two-reel stories for Hank.

Gale Henry this week started work on the twenty-fourth of her series of 26 two-reel comedies for Bulls Eye under the direction of Tom Gibson. The working title is "The Leak of Rations." The supporting cast includes Billy Franey, Hap H. Ward, Phylis Allen, George Jeske and Mavis Humphrey.

"The Woman in Room 13," which Frank Lloyd has just completed for Goldwyn with Pauline Frederick as the star, will reintroduce to the screen Marguerite Snow, who has been absent from the films for a few years. Sidney Ainsworth and Emily Chichester have important parts in this play, which is about ready for release.

MAKING LIGHT

Modern photoplay producing has brought into the foreground new and startling light effects, which add materially to the clearness of the picture and enhance the beauty of the story. This is done by means of several different kinds of lighting equipment, the most used being the Cooper-Hewitt "banks", and spotlight arcs, overhead arcs and several other styles of lamps and globes.

At Goldwyn there is a complete lighting plant, under the management of Louis Kolb, who has an assistant, a night foreman, and 23 expert electricians. Current is brought over high tension wires in sixty thousand volts, and "stepped" down to the required strength for the studio lights. There are three motor-generating plants on the grounds, besides a number of smaller stations, stage switchboards and individual setting boards.

The lighting equipment includes 250 separate lights. An average of fifteen lights is used to one setting, and these require constant attention, shifting, focusing and renewing.

All the back-lights, and the many different styles of flowing light upon settings, subjects and action, are produced with the aid of these electric lights. The days of "diffusers" and sunlight rays are past, for in this day nearly all scenes with the exception of exteriors are made under the lights. Even some outside scenes, especially if made at night, are illuminated by electricity.

The portable lighting plant is used for distant places where high voltage current is not found. It is a massive gasoline motor-driven generator, mounted on a special trailer, and operated with but little noise, and will supply enough current for the largest location ever used. It is a great time and money saving apparatus, and was built by the studio mechanics at a cost of several thousand dollars.

CONCAVE SCREEN

Experiments are being made in New York with a concave screen which is said to eliminate all strain on the eyes and obtain a perfect focus when seen from any angle. The inventor is Professor J. Louis Pech, head of the department of medicine at the University of Montpelier, France, and a scientist of note.

Scenes from "Everywoman" were flashed onto the screen by the projection machine that is used on the flat screen, and at the same rate of speed and with the same lighting effects. The screen has no chemical secrets. It is merely a matter of construction. Prof. Pech says it takes into account the shape of the image of the eye.

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that the concave screen marked a worth-while advance in the motion picture industry.

Because of the curvature every point on the screen is equi distant from the projection machine and therefore distortion is produced.

The curvature principle is the only scientific principle upon which a screen should be built, because of the fact that the image given by the projection machine is not flat, but has a curvature similar to that in the curved screen. Built this way there is correct focus at corners of the screen which is not secured by the flat screen, and there is elimination of curvature distortion.

WHEN IT COST $200 TO MAKE A MOVIE

Arthur Zellner, who is writing continuities for May Allison, relates a story told him by W. A. Howell illustrating the simplicity of motion picture production in the early days. Mr. Howell, who is now Viola Dana's director in "Eliza Comes to Stay," was making Rex pictures for Joseph W. Engel, now treasurer of Metro Pictures Corporation. Here is Mr. Zellner's story:

"'Well, I've got an idea this morning! Girl sitting in a park; fellow comes along and makes love to her,' and so on.

"'Is it all exteriors?'

"'Sure!'

"'How much will it cost?"

"'Oh, about $200.'

"'All right, here's your $200.'

"Then Howell would go forth to engage his cameraman and actors and hasten through the picture which had to be finished that day. Any money left over expenses was his salary. He was his own director and leading man as well as scenarist and producer."

Wm. C. Dowlan's contract with Universal will expire the last of January, at which time he is planning to take a long desired tour in his Locomobile.

Lionel Belmore appears with Will Rogers in the forthcoming Goldwyn picture, "The Strange Boarder."

Emily Chicester is playing with Pauline Frederick in making "The Woman in Room Thirteen."

Elliott Clawson, of the Goldwyn scenario staff, has written more than seventy-five original scenarios.

PUBLIC DOESN'T KNOW WHAT IT WANTS, SAYS DIRECTOR TAYLOR

"We often hear the phrase in connection with our work, 'Give the publice what it wants,'" said William D. Taylor, the Famous Players-Lasky director, whose films are hereafter to be put out by Paramount as special productions, "but no man lives who can say with any approach to certainty, what that is.

"An individual may know what he wants if he is of the kind that is given to analysis of his tastes, or he may be studied by others to learn what sort of pleasures particularly appeal to him. But the public is a composite with a hundred different tastes, the extremes of which are far apart.

"One may be strong for romance, another for adventure, another for costumery, and so on. How to find the common denominator for all these varied likes and dislikes, by the same token, is the constant problem and puzzle of the maker of entertainment whether it be in the form of photoplays or other. This would seem to be impossible and might be if it were not for one thing.

"That thing is the mysterious psychological tie that binds the members of an audience together and puts it in a mood to make concessions and like what the other fellow likes Audiences are sometimes complained of as being cold until melted by what they see; of sitting in a harsh, "show-me" attitude. This is contrary to my observation, and as a director and long-time actor I know it is false.

"Audiences are genial and generous; they warm each other under the influence of their common desire to be pleased, and they know instictively that they can't receive if they don't give. If it were otherwise half our plays of stage and screen would fail.

"Finding what the public wants is as futile as chasing the will o' the wisp. All the public knows is that it wants quality—'class'—in story, in direction, in acting. If you take pains to give it that to the best of your ability your chances are good."

FRANK LLOYD

By Mildred Davis

From Glasgow, Scotland, with his accent and dry wit came Frank Lloyd. The cotton-mills and coal mines of his native city did not appeal to the young Schotchman. No, his ideas for drawing down the necessary where-with-all were quite different. He fain would be an actor. So he stuck to his ideas, showing such perseverance and talent that when he left Scotland, he left as the head of C. P. Walker's repertory company. Throughout Canada Lloyd traveled with this company. He not only managed the company, but he played character parts and heavy leads. Later he appeared in vaudeville in Canada.

Those years of varied experience on the stage furnished the director an invaluable store of knowledge to be used in his present work. Like many other prominent directors Frank Lloyd entered the motion picture profession as an actor. That was about six years ago. In his stage work he drifted to Los Angeles, and out in Hollywood he succumbed to the lures of the motion pictures.

Six years is not a long time, but even that short time ago an actor committed the height of theatrical blunders when he entered the "movies." But Lloyd was a brave recruit, and, besides, the monetary inducements were not to be held lightly. They commanded the rspect of any "light," no matter how devoted he might be to his noble histrionic art. So Lloyd fell, and landed on the Universal payroll. There he played heavies for a while, in meantime deciding that he would stick to the new game as it was not "half bad." He learned the tricks of his new trade so readily that in a short time he organized his own company, and produced one and two-reel pictures. He liked the directing far more than the acting, and his directing showed up well enough for the Paramount people engaged him to direct Pallas productions. He worked, quietly and efficiently, with no startling results until he was engaged to direct William Farnum for Fox. One of his first pictures there was one of the largest and most difficult productions ever put out by Fox. That was Charles Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities," starring William Farnum. Frank Lloyd's direction was unusually excellent—so good that the picture was a great success, and Lloyd was "made." The next big Fox subject, Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," starring Farnum again, was also intrusted to Lloyd's directorial abilities. And again Lloyd came through with flying colors. Since that time a list of his productions shows one success after another. He made "The Riders of the Purple Sage," a Zane Grey story featuring William Farnum, after which he left Fox to direct Goldwyn pictures.

Lloyd handled "The Silver Horde," the Rex Beach special, for Goldwyn. Also made the elaborate Farrar production, "The World and Its Woman," and he has directed Pauline Frederick in several features, including "The Woman in Room 13" and "The Loves of Letty."

With all his wanderings Lloyd is not a devotee to that ancient order, Wunderlust. He is a good-humored, quiet young man, and his idea of a wonderful time is to visit his ranch in the San Fernando valley, and stay as long as he possibly can. He is always interested in his work, and has great ability, which is shown by his unusual successes. He is also a member of the M. P. D. A., but when he retires he intends to go back to the sod and be a rancher.

MOTION PICTURE DIRECTORS' ASSOCIATION

Joseph de Grasse is chairman of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Directors' Association and is already active in making the plans for the fine new club and lodge building to be constructed for that organization in Los Angeles. A prominent site has been purchased at a cost of $10,000 and the building is expected to entail an outlay of $75,000 to $100,000. More than one hundred of the most prominent motion picture directors of the country are members of the association.

When the cartoons, "Bringing Up Father," are turned into movies, the part of Jiggs will be played by Johnny Ray, the well-known vaudeville comedian.

The Goldwyn Company is said to be negotiating with Tom Santschi for his services in a forthcoming picture of major importance. The chief role for which Santschi is desired is said to be one that will give him the best opportunity to display his character abilities since his part in "The Spoilers" some eight years ago, which made him one of the national film celebrities almost over night.

Elinor Fair, the charming little brunette star who recently concluded a contract with William Fox and immediately took advantage of her freedom to visit the eastern seaboard, is back in the land of sunshine. After doing the theatres and shops of New York, Miss Fair has spent the latter part of her vacation with relatives in Leavenworth, Kansas. An important new alliance of Miss Fair with another producing company is said to be on the cards.

The greatest of all stage productions, "The Wayfarer," is to be made into a motion picture on a stupendous scale. At Madison Square Garden in New York, where it is now showing, it has a cast of three thousand.

Hal Roach, producer of the Harold Lloyd comedies, engaged in New York a bevy of girls to appear in the star's productions and now claims that with Mildred Davis at the head of this group, he has a regular beauty trust so far as film comedies are concerned. These hand-picked charmers were selected from scores who answered an advertisement for applications.

"Grumpy," the character play which Cyril Maude has made one of the most celebrated in America and England, has been purchased for film translation by the Robertson- Cole Company.

Eleven weeks were consumed in making the Metro production of "The Walk-offs." This cheerful satire on modern society life will, it is said, display a smart array of gowns and lavish society settings that will make it a feast for the eyes. Among the well-known favorites of the screen who will wear these dazzling garments are May Allison, Claire DuBrey, Kathleen Kerrigan and Yvonne Pavis.

Will Rogers, the cowboy actor, has bounded into immense popularity as a Goldwyn star and the films showing his unique personality and acting methods are in great demand both by exhibitors and the public. Roger's quick success has been due in no small measure to the capable direction of Clarence Badger, who has taken rank among the top-notchers as one of the greatest moulders of comedy-drama in the film world.

Suit has been brought against Theda Bara by Thomas F. MacMahon, a New York attorney, for $10,000 alleged to be due him for services in negotiating one of her contracts.

Max Linder, the leading film cut-up of France, is in this country to make a series of comedies.

Lloyd Ingraham is busy at the Ince-Paramount studio with the direction of young Douglas MacLean and Doris May in another farce-comedy of the type that made their advent as joint stars one of the sensations of the past year. Apropos, someone has called attention to the fact that the initials of these remarkable juveniles are the same.

The stage is about to reclaim Elsie Ferguson, who will return to the footlights in a Charles Frohman play.

The Goldwyn Company will star Raymond Hatton, who was long a character actor in Paramount films.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

MISFORTUNE

A study of the various kinds of misfortune which may beset one is valuable to the student for the reason that it's introduction in the story means the addition of pathos and furnishes a cause for action either for the unfortunate one or for a loved one. The principal value of the list of examples which will be given below is that suggestions are offered for numerous variations which may be used. I believe that I have listed under the four heads, every conceivable misfortune that may beset a human being. The student will bear in mind that, from a dramatic standpoint, the kinsman or the loved one of the victim of a misfortune, is equally unfortunate.

PHYSICAL MISFORTUNE

(A)—To lose any of the five senses by disease, accident or inheritance.

(B)—To be disfigured by birth, disease or accident.

(C)—To have contracted or inherited an incurable disease or weakness.

(D)—To have contracted or inherited a loathsome disease. (Leprocy etc.).

(E) To have contracted or inherited any kind of a painful malady.

(F)—To be injured by any kind of an accident.

(G)—To be injured by an antagonist or enemy.

(H)—To suffer from things necessary to sustain life or health.

(I)—To be imprisoned by enemies or antagonists.

(J)—To be imprisoned by accident.

MENTAL MISFORTUNE

(A)—To have contracted or inherited an unconquerable habit or passion.

(B)—To have contracted or inherited a mental malady.

(C)—To be sorely tempted to commit any crime or offense.

(D)—To suffer remorse for a real or fancied crime or offense.

MATERIAL MISFORTUNE

(A)—To lose a thing of value by force, accident, theft or fraud.

(B)—To lose a thing of value through the contrivance of an enemy.

(C)—The loss of loved ones through the efforts of enemies.

(D)—The loss of loved ones through accident or mishap.

(E)—To lose the love of another through efforts of enemies.

(F)—To lose the love of another through a misunderstanding.

SOCIAL MISFORTUNE

(A)—To be base-born or born out of wedlock.

(B)—To have any stigma attached to ones name.

(C)—To be ostracised, blackballed or ridiculed for any reason.

(D)—To be disfranchised for any reason.

(E)—To be impeached or indicted for any reason.

(F)—To have ones motives impugned for any reason.

(G)—To be oppressed by a greater power.

(H)—To be persecuted or pursued by enemies or rivals.

(I)—To lose or be deprived of position.

(J)—To be unjustly accused of any crime or offense.

SELF SACRIFICE

Self sacrifice is the most noble and noble thing that can be written in the drama. The student should therefore study it diligently with the view of introducing it wherever possible. The things which may be sacrificed are:

Life.
Health.
Physical Comfort.
Mental Comfort.
Spiritual Comfort.
Liberty.
Worldly Goods.
Position.
Honor.
Good Name.
Ones Station In Eternity.
A Loved One.
The Love Of Another.
The Right Of Revenge.

Reginald Parker, who is directing Goldwyn pictures, wrote and directed his first stage play at the age of 16 years

Ambition.

The things for which the sacrifice may be made are:

Health of a Loved One.
Health of an Unfortunate.
Life of a Loved One.
Life of an Unfortunate.
Happiness of an Unfortunate.
Happiness of a Loved One.
Liberty of a Loved One.
Duty to Country.
Duty to God or Religion.
One's Honor.
Ones Word.
The Honor of a Loved One.
The Love of Another.
To Avenge a Loved One.
To Avenge an Unfortunate.
One Who Has a Better Right.
An Heroic Example.
For a Thing of Greater Value.

If the student is sincerely desirous of mastering the art of dramatic plot construction and of cultivating an active imagination, he, or she, will follow the suggestions which are offered below. If not, this chapter will be passed by with a casual reading.

Select each of the subdivisions under the head of misfortune, and write a concrete example, identifying characters, describe the misfortune in detail, what chain of circumstances led to it and one or more dramatic situations which may have resulted.

Now crete an example of self sacrifice in which life is sacrificed for the health of a loved one. This is using the first thing that appears in the list of things which may be sacrificed, in connection with the first thing named in the list of things for which a sacrifice may be made. Give identities to your characters, describe their relations, how the sacrifice was made and in what way it contributed to the health of a loved one. I will create one as a suggestion.

"Jim Hart is a poor halfbreed who is in love with Eunice Abernathy, a white girl. The girl is the victim of a terribel scourge which passed over the country. The girl is with her father in an isolated section and her lover, a white man is a young physician who is powerless to restore the girl to health. There is a powerful herb that grows in the woods, that the halfbreed knows is the only cure for the girl, but the only place where it can be obtained is on the side of a steep precipice which is covered with ice and to attempt to obtain it means a risk of life. He scales the precipice against the wishes of even the girl herself, takes hold of the herb—it pulls loose and his body hurtles down. Clasped in his clenched hand, when his dead body is found is the herb—"

This idea came without effort whatever. Now create another with Life as the thing sacrificed and the sacrifice made for the health of an unfortunate, the second on the list of things for which a sacrifice may be made. When the list of things for which a sacrifice may be made. When the list of things for which a sacrifice may be made is exhausted, take the second thing in the list of sacrifices, which is Health, and follow the same procedure.

These exercises are suggested simply to stimulate imagination. In following them the student may discover some very valuable plot material which can be stored away for future use.

EDITOR'S NOTE—In the next issue of Camera, Mr. Hill will discuss the subject of "Telling the Story," "Suspense and Climax" and "Blind Alleys."

SOCIAL FRICASEE AND CAPER SAUCE

By Mildred Davis

KATHERINE McDONALD HOSTESS

A great many little affairs were planned with Katherine MacDonald as guest of honor during her stay at Del Monte and San Francisco for the holidays, for she is one of the most popular of the social set in both places. However, for two weeks Miss MacDonald was very busy with plans which resulted in a dinner for fifty poor children at Pine Inn, Carmel-by-the-Sea on Christmas day. A big tree hung with surprises from Toyland followed, with practical gifts in the form of clothing under the tree. Miss MacDonald left many happy little hearts when she departed with her company for San Francisco to film the big scenes for her next production, "The Guests of Hercules."

A UNIQUE NEW YEAR'S GIFT

Ernest Shipman, who is in New York, is in receipt of a wire from Santa Monica, Cal., reading as follows:

"Am sending a roll of your kiddie and his schoolmates as a New Year's gift with a Scotchman's compliments." (Signed) Stuart Paton.

The kiddie referred to is Ernest and Nell Shipman's son Barry, who though but seven years of age is the sergeant of the drill brigade at the Westlake Military Academy, Santa Monica.

"Ernie" Shipman is the recipient of many gifts this Yuletide season. His "Back to God's Country," after covering over $200,000 of its prescribed $600,000 journey under First National auspices, opens its New York engagement at the Capital Theatre, New Year's week, and has besides one hundred prints working to capacity audiences in all parts of the country.

The Dominion Film Company, Inc., has elected him on its board of directors, and he will act in an advisory capacity in connection with new productions to be undertaken by that company.

The Curwood-Carver Productions are busy on the second Curwood production, entitled "The Yellowback," and a new Canadian company is being formed to film the Ralph Connor stories in a big way, upon their natural locations, and Ernest Shipman has been placed in charge of production and sales.

PREPARING FOR AFRICAN TRIP

Don Keyes, who is a camera man out at the Goldwyn studio in Culver City, says he has been getting ready for a trip to Africa which he is to make soon, by shooting the scenes of Madge Kennedy's latest picture, "The Blooming Angel." Mr. Keyes is going to the dark continent with a number of big game hunters, to take pictures of their adventures. The preparation which the picture has given him lies in the fact that in it there is an elephant, which figures in a number of scenes. "I feel fairly competent as an elephant photographer," says Mr. Keyes, "but I wish I could practice up a little bit on lions and tigers and 'such like.'"

Johnny Jones, who plays the part of "Edgar" in the new series of screen stories written for the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation of New York, by Booth Tarkington, does not care much for violin music. When they began filming the picture a violinist was stationed in the wings to play lively music. But instead of inspiring the boy actor the music seemed to irritate him. So they sent out and got Tony Fessia, an Italian accordeon player. Fessia played ragtime, waltzes, and grand opera and Johnny was delighted. So Fessia was engaged to come every day and play. The Italian is a cousin of Pietro Diero, the well-known accordeonist who has toured the Orpheum circuit. The two played together at the San Francisco exposition.

Mr. Green was unfortunately taken seriously ill on Saturday, December 27th and on Sunday, the 28th, Mr. Rapf was forced to secure another director. Mr. Rapf secured Mr. Sloman who has been directing Bessie Barriscale. "Blind Youth" will be one of the big productions of the year as it has a tremendous cast which includes Walter McGrail, Colin Kenny, Leatrice Joy, Miss Ora Carew, Clara Horton, Leo White and Joseph Swickard. The balance of the cast will be announced in a day or so.

RUPERT HUGHES' "The Cup of Fury"

AN EMINENT AUTHORS PRODUCTION—MADE BY GOLDWYN

E. J. Zerr, who is assisting Henry Otto in the direction of "Judah," May Allison's new picture, has been awarded a Junior membership in the American Association of Civil Engineers. This is a highly coveted honor and awarded only to those with a high qualifying record.

In the cast supporting Charles Ray in his latest Thomas H. Ince production, "Homer Comes Home," Priscilla Bonner makes her first bow as a leading lady, in the character of Rachel Prouty, the pretty and attractive daughter of Silas Prouty, the biggest man in Mainsville, as played by Otto Hoffman. Mrs. Prouty is played by Mollie McConnell.

Albert W. Hale is in town at the Clark Hotel.

George Irving, director for the Weber Productions, Inc., has arrived here and starts producing Monday, January 5th. Accompanying Mr. Irving was Miss Edith Hallor who will play the star role of "Children of Destiny."

Vincent MacDermott has been made technical director of the Hank Mann comedies.

Jane Novak, the beautiful blonde girl, who won a large following through her screen work with William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Tom Mix and others, has been selected to play "Ann" in the new Goldwyn picture, "Roads of Destiny" starring Pauline Fredericks. As "Ann" she holds the steadfast love of "David" no matter in what environment she is placed while "Rose" played by Miss Frederick, is destined to be the unhappy, storm-tossed soul who can find no peace or happiness. The screen version is from Channing Pollock's adaption of O. Henry's famous story and seeks to show that Fate rules the universe and that man cannot escape his destiny no matter what road he takes. The same characters appear in four widely different settings ranging from Mexico to Alaska.

H. H. Van Loan returned early this week to Glendale from Santa Barbara after a short stay there, during which he started work upon an unique story for Elsie Janis, one of the Selznick stars. The story deals with the daughter of a Southern millionaire and a prince o Europe who travels incog in America.

William C. Dowlan, directing Tsuru Aoki at Universal City, announces that he has shot the final scene of her latest Universal production, "Locked Lips." He is now busy supervising the editing and cutting of the film, which will soon be ready for release.

MAKES NEW TEST

A story published in the Los Angeles Times recently brought to our notice again one I. D. Opat.

Previous to the disclosure of his unfortunate negotiations with Schuleman, the "Million Dollar Crook," Dr. Opat told Camera! of his intention of entering motion pictures. We were favorably impressed with the 900-foot test film Opat had made of himself, and his careful preparation gave us the impression that he was planning to produce his own pictures.

In spite of his great lose he has adopted a phyloscphic attitude, is quietly going ahead with his picture preparation. He does not, however, intend to produce films.

All of his studious observations and his tests are made to assure himself that he can make a successful start in actual work before he begins to take up his time and that of the directors in securing engagements.

"I realize that the actor in respect to the director is as a gland to an organ," Opat tells us, "but in order that the organ shall function properly the glands must be proper. As an actor, I expect to be able to assimilate the ideas of production and character portrayal, and concentrate upon cooperation with the director in every necessary detail. As a final step to assure myself of future possibilities, and before announcing my readiness for an engagement, I will make another test, of perhaps 500 feet of film, using ideas and make-up entirely different from the first test."

EXECUTIVES HERE

Hiram Abrams, active head of the United Artists Corporation, and Ralph Proctor, assistant general manager of the "Big Four," are in Los Angeles visiting the studios of Douglas Fair[illegible] Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin.

The two executives are touring the entire country in the interest of the organization they represent so as to come in closer contact with the exhibitors and exchange men of the nation.

It is the opinion of Mr. Abrams that 1920 will be the motion picture industry's biggest year. Besides this city, the United Artists heads will visit, among the more important centers, San Francisco, Seattle, Denver, Kansas City, Minneapolis and Chicago.

TO MAKE COLORED PICTURES

Director Frederick Thomson, perhaps better known by the sobriquet "Bing" Thomson in New York, has arrived in Los Angeles to direct a series of one-reel pictures for the Prisma Company. As the name "Prisma" suggests, the feature of the pictures will be the colored photography. Children will be used mostly in these pictures, and Mr. Thomson has brought to the Coast with him little Miss Madge Evans, formerly a starred feature of the World Film Corporation, and who will be featured in all of the Thomson make of Prisma pictures. The Prisma pictures will be made in Hollywood.

The Thomson party, including Mrs. Evans and her daughter, Madge Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Thomson and son, John, arrived in town to enter Miss Madge in the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, and Miss Madge was awarded with a second prize.

MOTHER HUBBARD UP-TO-DATE

Lydia Yeamans Titus, who is a member of the Goldwyn repertory players at the Culver City studio, has many accomplishments, and one of them is writing jingles. Her latest, she asserts is pathetic, but people persist in laughing at it. It goes like this:

"Old Mother Hubbard,
Went to the cupboard,
For something to quench her thirst,
When she got there,
The cupboard was bare,
For 'twas after July first."

FLORENCE DESHON PLAYS CHORUS GIRL

Florence Deshon steps forward to say a word for the chorus girl. She says she has known lots of them and it is a good thing she has, because she is now playing the part of a chorus girl in the Goldwyn production, "Two Cents' Worth of Humaneness," by Octavus Roy Cohen, in which Madge Kennedy is the star. Says Miss Deshon, "I think the chorus girl used to be a good deal as the stories always portray her—inclined to lead a gay and careless life with late suppers and flirtations and all the rest of it. But that type is passing. I visited some chorus girls on Broadway last season, and bless you, they were all sitting sedately around the dressing rooms, reading Anatole French or Bernard Shaw, or studying French or Italian. Off stage some of them didn't even use a lip stick or rouge, and as for late suppers—well, the chorus girl of today knows she won't keep her looks unless she takes care of her health.

TOM MOORE IN "TOBY'S BOW"

Tom Moore will make his first appearance on the California Theatre screen beginning Sunday, Jan. 18, when he will be seen in a Goldwyn picturization of John Taintor Foote's quaintly humorous story, "Toby's Bow." The picture was produced under the direction of Harry Beaumont with Doris Pawn heading a supporting cast that includes: Macey Harlam, Arthur Housman, Colin Kenny, Augustus Phillips, Catherine Wallace, Violet Schram, Ruby LaFayette, George K. Kua and Nick Cogley.

MEMBER OF GOLDWYN BOARD

Edward Wise, president of the United Cigar Stores, was recently elected a member of the Board of Directors of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

It is significant that another of America's leading business men has joined forces with the Goldwyn company.

As president of the United Cigar Stores, Mr. Wise has moulded the destiny of one of the largest corporations in the world—a company which has girdled the country with evidence of growth and big business from both retail and manufacturing standpoints.

In the twenty years during which Mr. Wise has been associated with the United Cigar Stores, he has seen the company grow from one small store in Nassau street, New York City, to an organization owning 425 stores from coast to coast and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. Besides these, there are 500 licensed agents who sell the product of the United.

Much of the development of this enormous enterprise is due to Mr. Wise's activity and versatility. He thinks through every problem which presents itself. And now, in the prime of life, he is addressing his enthusiasm and trained business ability to the motion picture industry. His advent is looked upon as a force which will help the Goldwyn organization to realize its aims and ideals with the sureness and certainty that sound business methods and constructive foresight assure.

HARD TO GET

The holidays were spent by Hobart Bosworth and his supporting cast, under the direction of Irvin Willat, at Catalina Island, where they continued their fight against the elements to secure the necessary but difficult scenes of under-water action to be shown in the Thomas H. Ince production, "Below the Surface." On account of the recent storms and the resultant rough water, a great deal of difficulty has been experienced by Mr. Willat and his camera man, J. O. Taylor, in their submarine photography, but in spite of adverse conditions, some remarkable pictures have been obtained by the use of the specially constructed diving bell which rests on the bottom of the sea and houses the director and his camera man during the filming of the scenes.

NON-UNION SCENE-SHIFTERS

Lionel Belmore loves a good story, even when the joke is on himself. He is playing now in "The Stranger Boarder," in support of Will Rogers, and is also telling tales of the things that have happened to him in the years he has been on the stage. Perhaps the best story of all has to do with the time when the company of which he was stage manager, had been commanded to appear at Sandringham before King Edward. Needing extra help in the shifting of some scenes, before the performance began, Belmore called on some men who were watching the proceedings, to help. They worked well and when the shifting had been done, one of them asked Belmore if there was anything else he'd like. "Yes," said Belmore, "I'd like a scotch and soda." A moment later the drink was brought to him. Just then the head carpenter came in and he looked as though the eyes would pop out of his head.

"What's the trouble?" asked Belmore, "Got a fit or something?"

"Those men who shifted the scenery," he managed to gasp out, "were Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Huntley, the Duke of Westminster, and Lord Derby."

King Edward rocked with glee when he heard the story, and 'tis said the four noble gentlemen never left off telling the story.

"Anyway," Belmore always ends the story, "they were mighty good scene-shifters, those earls and dukes and lords, I'd give 'em a job any day."

AN EXPENSIVE HABIT

Octavus Roy Cohen, whose first story for the screen, "Two Cents' Worth of Humaneness," is being made by Goldwyn with Madge Kennedy as the star, says he has a peculiar and terribly expensive habit. It is cashing checks! Well, it would seem if there is anyone who can afford the habit, it would be a young man who appears all the time in the Saturday Evening Post, who has three novels coming out, one play running and two more accepted for New York production and who has a long time contract to write motion pictures. At least he must have plenty of checks to cash.

QUALIFIES AS AN "OLD SALT"

Otto Brautigam, of the Goldwyn staff, at Culver City, thinks he can qualify now when old salts gather of an evening around an open fire, to tell tales of the sea. Of course, strictly speaking, he has never followed the sea. But as a camera man, he knows a lot about what the wild waves say. He filmed the beach scenes taken at Balboa recently for "Duds," the latest Tom Moore picture. To get some close-ups of some thrilling incidents in a launch, a platform was built out from the bow of the boat, the camera fastened securely thereon, and Mr. Brautigam, strapped to a chair, was seated behind the camera. Brautigam was immersed several times and he thought surely he'd lose a finger or two, his hand were so cold, but never once did he stop cranking. The scenes taken are so realistic that even Brautigam has to admit they are worth all the suffering they cost. Nevertheless he'd feel cheated if it weren't for the fact that he now can sit with the old salts and spin yarns of wild seas he has known.

TRIBUTE TO THOMAS H. INCE

As a tribute to the high regard and esteem in which Thomas H. Ince is held by members of his organization, the noted motion picture producer was presented with a Christmas gift in the form of a massive chiseled bronze statue which typifies "The Sower" in thought and deed.

The statue—measuring 28 inches in height and mounted on a 24-inch Italian marble pedestal—bears a solid gold plate, appropriately inscribed.

OTTO BACK ON JOB

After a five day tussle with la grippe Henry Otto returned to the Metro studio yesterday and resumed his direction of May Allison in "Judah." During Mr. Otto's absence Maxwell Karger, Metro director general, has been personally directing Miss Allison.

ANOTHER FALSE RUMOR

Mr. F. J. Godsol, chairman of the executive committee of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation of New York, today emphatically denied that there is any semblance of truth in the recently published rumor that an arrangement has been made by the so-called Big Four to release their pictures through the Goldwyn distributing organization.

Mr. Godsol is at present in Los Angeles conferring with Vice President Abraham Lehr relative to the increased production at the West Coast studio in Culver City.

When the story of the alleged releasing arrangement was called to his attention, he said:

"There is absolutely no truth whatever to the rumor. I am sure nothing has been said on the part of our organization that would justify it, and I doubt not that the Big Four is equally innocent of authorship, as there has certainly been no arrangement of this kind whatever."

INSURING DEMPSEY

Robert Brunton, in conjunction with the Pathe Picture Corporation of New York, has taken out temporary insurance with a Los Angeles firm to the amount of $60,000 for Jack Dempsey, champion heavyweight prizefighter of the world. The policy takes effect Jan. 15 and will hold good for the duration of Dempsey's motion picture contract at the Brunton studios, where he is starring in a fifteen-episode western serial.

Under the terms of the policy Dempsey's person is secured against accident, illness or death during the next three months. The underwriters will pay Robert Brunton $15,000 if the champion loses control of either arm, $20,000 if he cripples a leg, $10,000 if he permanently injures his eyesight, and a flat compensation of $1,000 a week if he is confined to his bed. In case of death the whole sum becomes due.

"The peculiarly dangerous type of work Dempsey is doing, and the immense sum involved in his production made this move necessary," said Mr. Brunton yesterday. "If Jack was to become injured before the completion of his picture the financial loss would be tremendous. Dempsey himself is personally insured for a considerable amount."

A GENUINE FUGITIVE

James Mason, playing in the Goldwyn picture, "The Strange Boarder," of which Will Rogers is the star, had visions of himself languishing in a Mexican jail, when he crossed the border recently and then lost his pass to return. Clarence Badger, who is directing the picture, had taken some of the company to El Paso for a number of scenes. None of them crossed the bridge into Mexico except Mason, who, as a fugitive from justice, made his escape. There was a lot of red tape about getting a pass for him. Finally it was secured and the escape was made, while the camera cranked on. Then everyone stood around and waited for Mason to return. They waited and waited. There was no chance to go over and find out what had happened to him. Director Badger was wondering just what government officials should be appealed to, to free Mason, when he came back. He hadn't been in jail at all. But he says he was in a worse place—one which is not to be mentioned in a family newspaper—when he discovered he had lost his precious pass. It took a lot of talk to persuade the authorities to let him return, and Mason was more eloquent, so he says, than he ever thought he could be. But the next time, he is not going to lose any scrap of paper.

ALICE LAKE BACK

Alice Lake has returned from San Francisco where she and twenty members of her company have been taking scenes for "Shore Acres."

NINE MAKE-UP CHANGES

Harry Van Meter changed his make-up nine times Saturday afternoon for scenes of "Judah," in which he as Tozer, the fake Hindu healer, removes his oriental camouflage before the camera after his return from a successful exploit.

MAXWELL KARGER GOING EAST

Maxwell Karger, director general of Metro, will leave for New York in a few days to take a long deferred vacation. Mr. Karger has worked for four years with practically no cessation, and he is now straightening up his production affairs at the west coast studio in order to take a well-earned rest.

W. E. Atkinson is in Los Angeles in the interests of Metro Pictures Corporation, of which he is general manager. He will probably remain here until Mr. Karger's vacation is over. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson arrived on New Year's day and are staying at the Hollywood Hotel.

During his vacation in New York Mr. Karger expects to combine business with pleasure by formulating plans of several contemplated super-productions. Possibly he may start making them as soon as his vacation is over. It is reported that his first two will be the picturization of Blasco's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," upon the continuity of which June Mathis is now working, and "Polly with a Past," in which Ina Claire will star. It is also reported that one of the Screen Classics stars will go East for a production after the next round of pictures is completed.

Maxwell Karger will not take any members of the Metro staff with him when he goes on his vacation. However, if he remains in New York to produce, he will undoubtedly send for some of the persons who have been connected with him in the western work.

"JUST HAPPENED" TO ACT

Edwin Stevens, playing in the Goldwyn picture, "Duds," in support of Tom Moore, might have been a mine owner instead of an actor, if a crowd of Indians on the warpath had not stepped in and played the part of fate. It was out in Arizona and Mr. Stevens was a mining engineer. He was absorbed in his work. Then one day the Indians went on a rampage and put a torch—or several of them rather—to his property. When the flame died out, there was nothing left except charred ground. Then and there Mr. Stevens gave up mining. He returned to his home city, San Francisco, and "just happened," as he says, to go into comic opera. It proved so successful as well as interesting that he gave up mining definitely for the stage.

HOPPER UNDERSTANDS DIRECTING OF CHILDREN

E. Mason Hopper, director of the "Edgar" stories, written especially for the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation by Booth Tarkington, has already made a reputation for himself, in the motion picture world, as a director of children. Hopper thoroughly understands the child nature. For some years he was an artist and cartoonist, and was often called upon to visit institutions for children to amuse them with his caricatures and funny drawings.

When he is directing he makes himself one of the children, winning their confidence and often taking suggestions from his little stars. With such a portrayer of child life as Tarkington and a director like Hopper, who understands a child's mind, the "Edgar" stories promise some delightful entertainment. There will be a series of the stories. This is the first time Mr. Tarkington has written especially for motion pictures.

COLLEEN MOORE ILL

Colleen Moore has been confined to her home with a severe attack of tonsilitis for the past several days. While the attending physician, Dr. S. A. Lewis, announces that her condition is in no way serious, he visits her daily, and has ordered that she not leave her home for another week at least. Miss Moore expected to start a picture Monday, but of necessity has changed her plans.

Work on "The Penalty," starring Madaline Traverse, has been begun under the direction of Denison Clift. Henry Clifford Colwell is the author.

THE PLAYCRAFTS OF LOS ANGELES

By Alfred Hollingsworth

The Playcrafts will give their next public performance Tuesday, Jan. 13 at the Gamut Club Theatre, at which time four one-act plays will be presented.

On Jan. 9th, Friday afternoon, Mr. Pantages will turn over his theatre to the Playcrafts and they will take charge of the bill, putting on a number of their own sketches, pantomimes and other acts.

This is a monthly arrangement that Mr. Pantages has volunteered to make, to the Playcrafters, who thus are enabled to try out their different plays with the possibility of obtaining booking for them over the Pantages Circuit.

Such an offer is unique and is but one of the evidences of the amount of interest that the Playcrafters is arousing in Los Angeles.

Many moving picture artists are turning out sketches and plays, and now, instead of boring their friends by insisting on reading their efforts to them, are coming down to the weekly meetings of the Playcrafters and finding a willing but not always charitable audience who are not at all backward in expressing their criticisms.

Alfred Hollingsworth, Graham Pettie and Gloria Raye, all well known screen artists, will appear in the next public performance, Jan. 13, at which time Mr. Hollingsworth will present one of his own plays.

WOMEN BEST FITTED TO DIRECT PICTURES, SAYS ONE OF THEM

Women are at last gaining their place in the sun, speaking with relation to the directorial end of motion pictures. Lois Weber and Ide May Park have long held an enviable place —for several years alone as representatives of their sex—among the two hundred or more dircetors of films, and now they are joined by Lillian Gish, who is directing her sister, Dorothy, and Mrs. Sidney Drew, who are to put their experience to use behind the megaphone.

"Why shouldn't a woman engage in this work?" said Miss Park when spoken to about the phenomenon of disproportion. Miss Park, who is the wife of Joseph De Grasse, another able director, has made several of the most successful box attractions during the past year or two. In her opinion a woman is more fitted by nature than her sterner competitor for some of the demands on a director.

"She is more imaginative," said the lady, "more romantic and more spiritual. Woman leads in story writing today, as the magazine pages testify. If she has thus proven her superiority at creating characters and situations, why should it not be so in transcribing them to the screen? If this fitness is conceded and the objections are technical, what are they?

"One thing weighs heavily in our favor," she continued. "Films are made for women; they compose the large majority of the fans and it is proverbial among producers that you must first please their sex in the making of pictures. This being so it follows that a member of the sex is best able to gauge their wants in the form of stories and plays. In staging scenes of romance, for example, who knows as well as a woman what will ring true for her sisters in the theatre?

"So if the picture play is purely a selling proposition, the argument is on the side of my sex. As for the technical considerations, it is true that directing is largely a matter of leadership. On that score I have never had the slightest trouble. Here again the tact of woman comes to her aid and she may get results from her players that male dirceotrs get from severer methods, and so I have found it."

Christmas Night Thieves—While Albert Shelby LeVino and his wife were enjoying a Christmas night movie, a party or parties unknown made themselves a Christmas present of the Metro scenario writer's touring car, a Buick with a dark green body.

NEW RESEARCH DEPARTMENT

A research department is the newest addition to the technical division of the Metro studio. David S. McCann has been placed in charge of the work. Mr. McCann has been attorney for Metro in Los Angeles for two years and will continue in that part. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and a close student of history and law. A library of 1100 reference volumes of travel, history and science will be at Mr. McCann's disposal.

"This department will answer all questions of fact or fiction relating to the setting of Metro productions," stated Mr. Butler, when asked to outline the scope of the research work. "That will include detailed information on customs of peoples; religious and social ceremonies; field of art covered by clothing and architecture; reason and use of special decorations; literary efforts; types of commerce and usual and unusual methods of business; methods of transportation and conveyance; in fact all historical matters that may be of interest."

RAPID PRODUCTION

Will Rogers, whose witty remarks add to the joy of living, arises to ask a question. It is this: "Even if the world was made in six days why try to apply it to pictures?"

PALMER-PHOTOPLAY-CORPORATION

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Instruction in Photoplay Writing

THE richest market in the world today for original story material is the photoplay market. Producers are scouring the country far and wide for story ideas that can be successfully made into moving pictures. Acceptable stories readily command $100 to $2000. One Palmer student sold his first play for $3000. Others have received from $350 to $1000 for their stories. Still others have obtained lucrative staff scenario positions and are now working in Los Angeles studios. The Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing enables the student to master photoplay fundamentals through correspondence instruction without loss of time or present position.

The Advisory Council

Directing the educational policy of the institution is an Advisory Council comprising CECIL B. DeMILLE, Director General of the Famous Players - Lasky Corporation; THOMAS H. INCE, Head of the Ince Studios; LOIS WEBER, Producer, Director and Author, and ROB WAGNER, Special Contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and Screen Authority.

The Sales Service

The Photoplay Sales Department serves as a connecting link between the writer and the buyer of stories. Material accepted for marketing is handled strictly on a commission basis. Writers are invited to investigate the unusual features of this service, which include registration, editing and personal representation at the studios. The department is headed by Kate Corbaley, well-known photoplaywright and author. Affiliated with the bureau are Bess Meredyth and Anne Scott, composing the Bess Meredyth Exchange.

Free Catalog on Request

Our explanatory catalog, "The Secret of Successful Photoplay Writing," with a Special Illustrated Supplement containing statements and endorsements by the leading producers, directors, stars and writers, is yours for the asking.

LOUISE LAMONT

FRAYEE FILM CO.

Dec. 16. Daily Press, Riverside, Cal.—It was left to Harry and Louise Lamont to "take the show." This pair put on a very clever skit. Louise, is a stunning little woman and perfectly at home on the speaking stage. Her French character was a big hit, and the "disrobing" feature was a very clever thing and prettily staged. She is an artistic dancer and she was dressed like a million dollars. As the boys down front say, 'Louise shakes a mean foot." Harry is a comedian of rare ability. He can sing; he can dance, and he has the stage ease that develops from years of experience. The skit never dragged, and it pleased. It alone was worth the two bits paid at the door.

Here's gurgling to the New Year, the nift'est filly that ever planted her south clothespins on the getaway tape for the Twelvemonth Sweepstakes. Old Daddy Time, that peerless jockey, is in the saddle, ready to lash the nag with his chin burr-catchers. It's a lead pipe, boys, that 1920 is going to collar the silks in this race, and I'm laying my whole bundle of buying clutter that she'll shag to the home stretch with her neck doing a spotted giraffe out ahead of that bunch of selling platers, spare-ribs and also-rans! At first Toby wouldn't Bow

A little thing like getting a bow from a dusky servant may mean nothing in the lives of some people but—

As far as James Boynton Blake was concerned the League of Nations and the Prohibition question were petty, insignificant squabbles compared to the problem of getting Toby's Bow.

You see, Toby bowed only to members of the Vardeman family and Blake had fallen in love with the fairest flower on the family tree.

So you can't blame him for throwing a bombshell of vim, vigor, pen and punch into the staid old Vardeman household to get that bow from old Toby.

Says Bryant Washburn in His Latest Broadway Success.

The Cinema Players and Player's Company

Introduces today to every motion picture Director, Assistant and Casting Director, Star and Semi-Star, Actor and Actress, Cameraman—in fact everyone connected with motion picture industry and interested readers of Camera! their absolutely new, honest and up-to-date idea of making the highly necessary acquaintance between producer and staff through the DIRECTORS' GALLERY.

It has long been a matter of fact that Directors have suffered some disappointment in the matter of casting and thousands of dreams have been shattered through the present system in the eyes of talented individuals from lack of acquaintance. So, through our long experience and restless investigations, we believe we have solved the great problem of affording relief to both sides.

As to you, Mr. Casting Dirctor, you will find our Director's Gallery will be of great help to you in many ways. You will also find it to be a simple but up-to-date system, taking but a minute of your valuable time and eliminating the bother of visitors and telephone calls. It will help you do away with many worries as to types and ability for your cases, and avoid disappointments on the lots in the last pressing moments in shooting of scenes.

And as to you, unfortunate dreamers of great ability, both MALE AND FEMALE, no longer shall lack of acquaintance hamper your way to success and fame. If you can deliver the goods, the Directors want you, need you, and need you badly, too. It's up to you to show them. THEY'RE FROM MISSOURI. So, combining the good with the necessary, we want you to take advantage of our new system of registration for work in the movies and help us answer the greatest question—SATISFACTION TO ALL—Directors, Stars, and Players.

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

YOUNGDEER FILM CO.

Youngdeer Film Company this week started shooting a new Comedy Drama which Director General Youngdeer promises will prove as big a sensation as "The Stranger."

"The Stranger," in five reels, was finished by Youngdeer last week, and will be shown at Tally's Broadway Theatre commencing February 2nd. In "The Stranger"D irector Youngdeer has accomplished a wonderful achievement in placing "A Photoplay Without a Known Star" in a First National Exhibitor circuit house. This is an achievement that will be watched with eager interest by the general public.

H. Johnny Wolf has been engaged as director of publicity by the Youngdeer Film Company.

Mr. Wolf is one of the best known publicity experts both in the States and abroad. At one time he was director general of the Unisystem Press Film and Photoplay Service, a world-wide organization.

In "The White Dove," the popular novel by William J. Locke which is being directed at the Jesse D. Hampton studios by Henry King with Henry B. Warner as the star, the leading lady will be Claire Adams. She is a beautiful and gifted young lady, and won her present position by her striking work in the filming of Zane Grey's novel, "Desert Wheat."

Bessie Love's new company, in which she will not only be the sole star but also a large sharholder and member of the board of directors, has been organized during the past week and the work of production wil start without delay. Chicago capitalists are heavily interested with Miss Love in the new organization. The studios will be located in Los Angeles.

GOLDWYN BUSY

The Goldwyn Studio in Culver City is launching production activities that rival any hitherto attempt at this or any other studio in the west. By the end of the week it is expected ten companies will be grinding cameras at full capacity. These will be Basil King's story "Earth Bound," under direction of T. Hays Hunter; Booth Tarkington story "Edgar" featuring Johnny Jones under direction of E. Mason Hopper O. Henry's story "Roads of Destiny," featuring Pauline Frederick in Channing Pollock's stage version under direction of Frank Lloyd; Robert Shanon's story "The Jazz Girl," featuring Mabel Normand under direction of Victor Schertzinger; J. G. Holland's famous story "Seven Oaks," starring Will Rogers under direction of Clarence Badger; Catherine Hewlin Bert's story "The Branding Iron," with an all star cast under the direction of Reginald Barker; Gouverneur Morris' story "Penalty," which will be produced as an all star Eminent Authors Production under direction of Wallace Worsley; Rupert Hughes' story "Scratch My Back," which Harry Beaumont will produce as an all star Eminent Authors Production; Ben Ames Williams' story "The Great Accident," featuring Tom Moore and the O. Henry story "Double Dyed Deceiver," staring Jack Pickford.

The Will Rogers company has gone to Santa Cruz, California, among the big redwoods to make some of the exteriors for "Seven Oaks." Mr. Rogers is supported by the following players: his four year old son Jimmie Rogers, Irene Rich, Lionel Belmore, Raymond Hatton, Bert Sprotte, Nick Cogley and Sydney DeGrey.

ANITA STEWART'S NEW PICTURE

Initial steps have been taken in the production of the new First National attraction, "The Yellow Typhoon," starring Anita Stewart. It is being made by Anita Stewart Productions, Inc., with Edward Jose as the director and Rene Guissart in charge of the photography. The story, by Harold McGrath, created quite a sensation about a year ago, when it ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post.

Miss Stewart has just recently finished in 'The Fighting Shepherdess," which was also directed by Edward Jose, and will soon be released by First National.

COMEDY FINISHED

"A Tough Tenderfoot," the fourth of the Paramont-St. John comedies under St. John's eight-a-year contract, has been completed. It is being cut and subtitled and will be shipped to New York within a few days.

St. John's first three comedies have proven distinctive hits and it is said that "A Tough Tenderfoot" is gy far the best fun provoker yet made by that star.

Frank C. Griffith directed the picture.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS FROM LONDON

Mrs. Ryan, one of the foremost English newspaper writers, is out from England to write articles for the Big Four, chiefly for the Northcliffe Press. She is staying at the Hollywood Hotel.

Mr. G. H. Meuse of the London Daily Mirror has been in Los Angeles taking pictures for his paper and gathering news. He leaves for London on the 17th.

ALAN DWAN INDEPENDENT PRODUCER

Alan Dwan is severing his connection with Mayflower and is going to produce independently under the name of Alan Dwan Productions.

Cecil B. de Mille has another of his polished cinema productions ready for the market. Its title is "Why Change Your Wife "

Channing Pollock prepared the scenario for "Roads of Destiny" in which Frank Lloyd is directing Pauline Frederick at the Goldwyn studios. Mr. Pollock is also author of the stage play from which the picture version is being made, and both are based on a tale written by that brilliant story-teller, O. Henry.

Screen Classics, Inc., will produce "The Marriage of William Ashe," with May Allison as the star, following "Fine Feathers," the drama by Eugene Walter, which Miss Allison will picturize when she completes "The Cheater," her present production.

William D. Taylor has completed the direction of his fourth picture with Mary Miles Minter as the star and has moved over to the Lasky studios. Hereafter his pictures will all be featured by the Famous Players-Lasky company under the title of "William D. Taylor Productions," and will be given the same prominence as the utput of Cecil B. DeMille.

"Polly of the Storm Country," Mildred Harris Chaplin's newest picture, has just been completed and cut at the Louis B. Mayer studios. The story was written especially for Mrs. Chaplin by Grace Miller White and will appear on the book market simultaneously with the release of the screen version.

WHERE TO FIND PEOPLE YOU KNOW

PICK-UPS BY THE STAFF

ON LOCATION AT LONE PINE

Roscoe Arbuckle and his big company are on a three weeks' location trip at Lone Pine, filming scenes for "The Round Up." George Melford is directing, with Harold Schwartz as his assistant. In the company are: Roscoe Arbuckle, Irving Cummings, Edward Sutherland, Jane Acker, Guy Oliver, Jane Wolf, Fred Huntley, Wallace Beery, Lucile Littlefield, Speed Hansen, Jack Hull, Jack Richardson, William Dale, George Kuwa, Elmer Dewey, Tex Driscoll, Otto Brauer, Bud Marshall, Jim Griswold, Leo Nomis, Steve Murphy, Joe Mooney, J. S. Stembridge, Robert Fleming, Fred Lyons, Chris Martin, Milt Brown, Silver Harr, J. Walker, George Champion, Lew Milner, M. J. Thunderface, Jack Byram, Art Manning, A. Walker, Pete Martin, Jim Alamo, Standing Bear, Joe Mills, Charles Boyle, William Boch, Al Gilmore, and Mrs. Weller, Paul Perry and Harry Perry are at the cameras.

Vernon Dent, formerly with a musical comedy company in New York and later in a comedy skit on the Orpheum circuit, is acting as heavy man in a series of two-reel comedies featuring Hank Mann. Dent weighs 190 pounds, is nearly six feet tall and with his experience in comedy work is considered a valuable acquisition to the Hank Mann comedies.

Neal Burns, the National Film Corporation star in the Capitol comedies, will resume work on his current contract the latter part of this week. Burns has been on a holiday.

Capt. Harry M. Rubey, president of the National Film Corporation of America, is in San Francisco closing a deal whereby another comedy unit will soon be added to the National's roster.

Margaret Coe has joined the scenario force at Lasky's.

"Hap" Depew is turning the crank for Director "Bill" Campbell, who is making a series of animal comedies at the Campbell Studios. 'Hap" assures us the thrills he has felt in the last two weeks discount anything he has experienced heretoofre—this in spite of the fact that he has shot some hazardous stuff. What with temperamental lions, leopards, chimps, pumas, etc., "Hap" has had a nervous time of it. He declares it is a sure way to lose weight.

Harry Mann, who has just finished work in the Simple Harry Comedies at Vitagraph, has signed up with an Eastern organization to make a series of comedies.

Kathleen Kerrigan, sister of J. Warren, has an important part in her brother's latest Brunton production, "One Week-End," a lively comedy of New York society life by Wyndham Martyn.

Betty Bouton will have a prominent part in Marshall Neilan's second independent production, work on which has already been started, but the title of which has not as yet been selected.

Colleen Moore started work Monday as leading woman for Sessue Hakawa at the old Griffiith studio. Miss Moore has a dual role in this picture, first as an American girl in Greenwich Village and later as a Hindoo.

Sam Landis, former Griffith camera man, will turn the crank for the lovely figured Annette Kellerman.

Tom Guise has ben engaged by Marshall Neilan for one of the principal parts in his second independent production, which is now in the course of production.

Al McKinnen, studio manager, used to do an excellent tramp character in the Sennett Comedies back in the old Keystone days. He hasn't forsaken the grease paint brigade all together, for he plays an important part in the Campbell Comedies as well as handling the studio.

J. I. Jackson, who has been associated with some of the leading comedy lots about the film city, is technical director and Ray Hunt, fresh from the Sennett forces, is property man for the W. S. Campbell studios.

James Campbell, brother of director W. S. Campbell, is working daily to learn every angle of the game, Joimes used to be in the mining business down in Arizona, and tired of his task, and came here to give the motion picture game the once-over.

F. A. Ritter, trainer of "Buster" has had a barn erected for training purposes for his horse right close to the studios, and is getting better work out of Buster since things are so handy for him.

W. L. Chester, who is the head of the Chester Outing Corp., is in our midst and gave the Campbell-E. and R. Jungle studio the double O the other afternoon. He will see the initial picture produced by W. S. Campbell on the screen before returning to the metropolis, for it is through the Chester Outing Corp., that the Campbell Comedies will be released for2the First National program.

Walter Edwards is progressing favorably with "A Lady in Love," the lady in the case being Ethel Clayton. Harrison Ford is the man in the case, and the plot is complicated and full of emotional as well as scenes in a lighter vein.

Maj. J. M. Campbell is handling the affairs of the Gale Henry comedy company during the absence of General Manager Bruno J. Becker, who is in New York attending to important business relative to the activity of the Gale Henry comedies for the ensuing year.

Lew Harvey, Western leading man, has just signed a 49 picture contract with the Texas Guinan Company. The company is shooting on the Bull's Eye lot.

J. P. Lockney and Willis Marks were added to the cast of King W. Vidor's production, "The Family Honor," this week. Lockney plays the part of Felix, the keeper of a Mississippi River resort, while Marks will be seen in the role of a shyster lawyer. The cast for the Vidor picture now comprises: Florence Vidor, Roscoe Karns, Charles Meredith, Harold Goodwin, Willis Marks, J. P. Lockney and Mattie Taylor.

Francis McDonald, who stepped into stardom through his work with Henry Walthall in "The Confession," and who was a feature "heavy" in "Hearts and Masks"—both National Film Corporatioi production—will be the central figure in the first of the National's "Americe First' series of photoplay features adapted from magazine stories and novelettes. McDonald is now engaged with William A. Seiter in producing "The Kentucky Colonel" for the National, in which he plays the juvenile lead. He will begin on the new series as soon as that production is concluded, which will be about February 20th.

Miss Edna Schley, who is responsible for the signing of the contract with the Chester Outing Corp., for 13 Campbell Comedies to be produced this year, is a busy woman, for she is players', producers' and writers' personal representative.

TO BE A GREAT PICTURE YEAR
By Frank E. Woods

I look for great progress in the art of motion pictures during 1920. There is also developing a closer contact between the public want and the public supply through the exhibitor's more intimate connection with the film industry.

The year just closed has seen by all odds the most solid and steady advance in photoplay making since the product was simply a curiosity known as a motion picture.

For one thing, the director has been elevated to an importance that is rightfully his but has long been denied him. For a long time the stress was all put upon the name of the principal player, called a star, and few people seemed to give a thought to the name of the producer or the men who had a hand in the construction of the photoplay. Within a year it has come about that ticket buyers want to know where the picture emanated from and whose hand guided it from the scenario up.

It means something today to see that a certain film is from the hand of D. W. Griffith, Cecil B. de Mille, William D. Taylor, George Melford, Donald Crisp or any of the other directors whose names have become widely known as those of specialists in certain lines of screen-play making.

The star will always be with us, because dominant personality and talent will never fail to interest large numbers of people. But there is now a better adjustment of the values in a play and a keener discernment on the part of audiences as to the credit deserts.

This is going to greatly stimulate the play writers, supervisors, directors—and stars too, for that matter, because competition will be sharpened all along the line.

I look for considerable development of new writers for the screen in 1920. A great number of ambitious people have been studying the art of writing for the screen and it is inevitable that out of the mass will come a steadily increasing number of talented writers who have by studious application mastered the faults that debarred so many of the novices.

We shall get closer than ever to the public this year through the exhibitor who has his hand constantly on the pulse of the theatre patron. Hitherto the custom was too much to make photoplays without a knowledge of their marketable quality. From now on because of the interlocking interests of exhibitors who are in the film business and film makers who are in the exhibition game, we shall have better movies because they will be made with an accurate knowledge of what the public demands.

Acording to announcement recently made, Mary Miles Minter, the charming Realart star, will in the near future bring her company to the Lasky Studio where she will make several productions.

IRIS-LESS PICTURES

The latest development in motion pictures will be seen in the Thomas H. Ince production, "An Old Fashioned Young Man," in which Charles Ray is starred. The picture, now under course of production will carry off honors as being the first photoplay without an iris.

Wide interest is being aroused over the unusual quality of a picture without the iris in that hitherto producers have affirmed that it was necessary to use the iris, or 'fade", to indicate a turn of events or a transmission of action.

Agnes Christine Johnston, author of "An Old Fashioned Young Man," asserts that this same effect can be gained by the use of contrasting scenes, which would suggest a love scene or quiet bit of human interest after the exciting or intensely dramatic "action" sequences.

The development of a picture without an iris may carry added significance since it will prove definitely that producers need not adhere to the ordinary code of picture-making and that "the picture without sub-titles" may be a thing of the very near future.

ANNETTE KELLERMAN NOT A MERMAID IN THIS ONE

Annette Kellerman, the woman with the world's most "perfect figure," will not appear in her next cinema production as a fantastic daughter of Neptune. In most all of her past photoplays, Miss Kellerman has appeared as a fairy Goddess of the sea, the best known being "Neptune's Daughter" and "The Daughter of The Gods,' productions that were georgeous, fantastic stories of the sea.

Miss Kellerman will give the cinema audience an opportunity to see her attired in wonderful gowns, that are masterpieces moulded by famous modistes' hands. The story, while it deals with the sea, has a background of modern society, permitting Miss Kellerman to display her beautiful figure and gowns, many of which are imported creations.

Mr. Lesser will exploit and distribute the Kellerman picture through a chain of exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, through this same channel George Beban will distribute his latest and greatest production, "One Man In a Million."

LUSK EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE

Hunt Stromberg, who recently joined Mr. Ince as head of the Publicity Department, announces the appointment of Norbert Lusk, one of the industry, best known publicists and special writers, as Eastern Publicity Representative, with headquarters in New York City.

Mr. Lusk asumed his duties this week and has established offices in the Times Building, from which address he will extend a personal and practical publicity service to the newspapers, magazines and exhibitors of Thomas H. Ince productions.

Mr. Lusk was for three years with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation in the capacity of special feature writer and during the past year as Director of Publicity for the Goldwyn West Coast Studios. Prior to his affiliation with Goldwyn, he served as personal representative for several of the screen's prominent stars. He enjoys wide acquaintance among editors of motion picture magazines and columns, and has contributed much to the dignity and integrity of motion picture "copy."

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING TELLING THE STORY

The previous chapters have dealt with the discovery of plot material, which is very important. Just as important, however, is the way the story is told. It makes no difference how good the plot is, if it is not properly presented, it loses interest.

We must establish interest from the very start. Suspense must also be introduced, and held throughout the story. There must be no blind alleys to confuse our audience or spectator. If our plot is well constructed, the questions of logic, dramatic interest and climax, are solved. We must not make the story tiresome in its telling, by dragging it out, neither should we permit our audience to lose interest by "tipping" it to our climaxes.

Suspense and Climax

In every well developed story, we have a number of small climaxes, in addition to the big one which settles the ultimate fate of our characters at the end. The climax of a situation is the highest dramatic point to which it ascends, and breaks. Suspense is the element of profound interest, and uncertainty of the outcome, which follows the development of the story to its climax. The more intense the dramatic situation, the greater the suspense.

Suspense should be established as early in the story as possible. In other words there should be some turn of the plot, some action, or incident, which promises to have an important bearing on the fate of one or more of the principal characters, and the outcome of which is uncertain. There are two distinct threads of suspence which run parallel through the story. The one precedes, and works up to a small climax, breaks and then starts again immediately, as another situation of a dramatic nature begins to develop. The other, or the main thread, is the one which begins as soon as we get acquainted with the principal characters, and continues, unbroken, to the big climax near the end, which decides their fate.

As an example of the introduction of suspense preceding a small climax let us study the following:

Robert Horne is a veteran tobacco user. He has often tried to quit but failed. His wife Janet sympathizes with him and decides to help him. She sees an advertisement of a harmless drug which can be placed in coffee and which will remove the craving for tobacco. She secures some of the drug and prepares to try it on Robert without his knowing it. In the meantime she buys some rat posion and puts it in a similar container on the pantry shelf. Robert somes home tired and she has a cup of coffee ready for him. She has made a mistake and placed the poison in the coffee instead of the harmless drug. She places the coffee on the table and puts her arms about his neck. There is an interruption which prevents his drinking the coffee right away. The audience is kept in terrible suspense for moments that drag by like years while they look on with eyes glued to that cup to see if Robert drinks. The cup is turned over and spills the coffee. Immediately the suspense is broken. The turning over of the cup is a small climax. Suppose however that the chinese cook had planned to murder Robert and it was he that purposely placed the poison where Janet would get it. We have a main thread of suspense, fer we know that the Chink will not stop with one effort, therefore we watch his actions throughout the story until he is disposed of and our hero no longer in danger. The big climax would naturally be when the villian's final and almost successful effort to murder the hero, was defeated and his perfidy discovered.

Thus it will be seen that suspense is introduced mainly by placing one or more of our principal characters in a position of peril, either physically or otherwise, remembering that there are four kinds of misfortune which may befall them, and keeping our audience guesing as to whether or not they will be saved in time.

A very good exercise for the student would be as folows:

Refer back to the chapter on misfortune. Select the first one on the list which is "To lose one of the five senses." Name a character. Place him or her in peril of losing the sense of sight, feeling, hearing, taste or smell. Establish why such a loss would be particularly disastrous. Describe how the misfortune is about to be caused and by whom and what obstacle stands in the way of its immediate accomplishment, and how the calamity is averted. Now do this with each of the other misfortunes on the list and study how to hold suspense, as well as to cap the situation with a big climax.

There is such a thing as attempting to hold suspense too long. I do not know that there is any rule which may be given here. The dramatist must sense when the time comes for the break.

Blind Alleys

To open a blind alley in our story means to establish a false premise. character who for a time occupies the center of the stage, and then just drops out of the story. The reader is led to believe that such character will play an important role, only to be disappointed by his or her disappearance coming as suddenly as he or she was introduced.

Another form of blind alley is to emphasize a bit of action on the part of some character, which leads the reader or audience to expect some importmant development as a result, and which really turns out to be an unnecesary by-play.

Supose for instance, in the case of our example above, in which the Chink tries to poison the husband, that we directed the attention of our audience to the fact that the Chink placed a package of poison on the shelf and that nothing further came of it. We would have a blind alley, unless we also established the fact that some lucky incident prevented Janet from getting hold of it.

EDITORS NOTE: The difference between straight-line stories and those with sub-plots will be illustrated by Mr. Hill in the next issue of Camera.

LEWIS STONE AT LASKY

Lewis Stone, whom all Californians call their own and who is known far and wide as one of the most capable artists on either stage or screen, has been engaged to play the role of Gordon Hayne in "Held By The Enemy," a Paramont Artcraft special to be directed by Donald Crisp. Jack Holt will be Col. Charles Prescott; Clyde Fillmore, recently recruited from the legitimate stage, plays Brig. Surgeon Fielding; Wanda Hawley will appear as Emmy McCreery, Agnes Ayres as Rachael Hayne and Walter Hiers as Tommy Beene. Work on the picture started Monday.

Doris Baker is with Viola Dana in "Eliza Comes to Stay."

FAIRBANKS HOST TO FAMOUS PLAYWRIGHT

Winchell Smith, author and one of the most successful and best known American playwrights, has arrived from New York and with Mrs. Smith is the guest of Douglas Fairbanks at his Beverly Hills estate.

During his sojourn in Southern California the playwright will study the motion picture industry from the production end and although he has not indicated anw intention of invading this field it is believed that it will not be long before his name is linked with the silent drama.

It is known that numerous producers have endeavored to secure the picture rights to nearly all of Smith's stage successes and he has also been approached by some of the biggest stars of the silver sheet for new and original stories.

While in Los Angeles the author has been extended the freedom of the Douglas Fairbanks studios, where he will interest himself in the methods employed by this organization in the productions for the United Artists corporation.

Among the more important plays from the pen of Mr. Smith, which are known the world over, are "Turn to the Right," "The Boomerang," "The Fortune Hunter" and "Three Wise Fools."

SONG FOR MARSHALL NEILAN

Marshall Neilan has received a copy of a new song just off the press, entitled "The River's End" and dedicated to himself on the occasion of his first independent production bearing the same name and which will soon be released through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. A picture of the young producer adorns the cover of the song which was written by Harry Hoch and Arthur Behim and published by Waterson, Berlin and Snyder. The song has a catchy air and promises to be a big hit at the time the picture is released.

COMPLETE HOSPITAL

With nearly six hundred employes on the Goldwyn payroll, and many engaged in mechanical pursuits, it becomes necessary to provide for their attention in case of accident or injury. Therefore the Goldwyn studio maintains a completely equipped hospital, with a trained nurse and an assistant constantly in attendance. Nearly 75 persons are terated here each week. The nurse has an apartment in the second story so she can be available at all times to care for any injured person.

M. C. LEVEE BACK

M. C. Levee, business manager of the Brunton Studios returned recently from an extended motor trip to San Francisco. He was accompanied by Mrs. Levee and Motley H. Flint, Vice-President of the L. A. Trust and Savings Bank. While it was a pleasure trip the prime object was to attend to important business deals.

DR. DORSEY IN NEW YORK

Doctor Rebecca Lee Dorsey, of this city, is visiting in Rye, N. Y., with her nephew, Ralph Kellard, the well-known actor. While in the east Doctor Dorsey attended the Jacksonian dinner, where she was asked to deliver an address.

The National Film Corporation of America will shortly begin making a series of two-reel dramas with a well-known feminine star in the stellar roles.

"The Kentucky Colonel," a seven-part feature, now in production at the studios of the National Film Corporation of America, will be ready for the market about March first, according to I. Bernstein, production manager, who will supervise a preview in New York City for film buyers.

ABOUT THE "EXTRA"

The Cinema Plays & Players Company has opened offices in the Wilcox Building, and will specialize in furnishing high class Extra talent to the various film companies doing business in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Wm. Blankenship, general manager of the new concern, in an interview with one of Camera's staff, said: "One of the principal things we propose to do is inject a little more efficiency into that department of the game which has to do with bits and atmosphere than at present obtains. Some of the types which are now being furnished the studios, I believe, are anything but satisfactory to some of the directors. My personal experience and observation leads me to the conclusion that the most desirbale type of Extra has received little or no encouragement. There are hundreds of men in Los Angeles that are more than eager to extra on the lots who can, on a moment's notice, provide their own evening clothes, English walking suits and smart, snappy business clothes, that, for a lack of proper encouragement, have long since despaired of ever getting any recognition and have relegated to other vocations for which they posses even less aptitude. They have been forced to give way to the "mob" man, who usually has to provide his wardrobe from the rent shops or friends. It is true that the refined polished type of extra is in much less demand than the mob man, but it is also true that the former can fill the place of the latter satisfactorily, while the mob man or rough-neck makes a dismal failure in doing business which calls for the refined or polished type. A short while ago I worked on a set calling for over a hundred men, and if called upon I could write more books than could find place on Dr. Elliott's five foot book shelf about the large number of unsuited types that made up the scene. This applies to both sex.

Audiences both here and abroad are growing more critical every day. The lesser lights are being talked about as well as the big stars. The whole proposition, in my opinion, will eventually resolve itself into the survival of the fittest, and the director who uses the same care and judgment in the selection of extras as in the cast, is the one who is going to stand in the future where Griffith, DeMille and a few others stand today."

Conrad Nagle, Anna Nilsson and Dorothy Davenport, wife of Wallace Reid, will have the leading parts in the filming of Robert W. Chambers' best seller, "The Fighting Chance."

Alson Wheeler, head of the Metro studio photographic department, recently completed an oil painting of Mme. Nazimova which he has placed in his office. Mr. Wheeler is now working upon an oil painting of the Japanese garden which was built on the Metro studio grounds for scenes of "The Willow Tree," Viola Dana's new picture.

Guy Pulley, head Metro carpenter, had the unpleasant experience of falling into San Francisco Bay while on location in the Northern city with Alice Lake and members of the company, who were filming scenes for "Shore Acres." Pulley was standing on a plank on the dock (at midnight) and it slipped, tossing him into the bay. Fellow workers threw him a line and he was rescued without injury.

Britann Laymon has resumed her position in the news department at the Metro studio after a prolonged illness.

Joe Whalen is back at his duties in the Metro casting department after a hurried trip to New York City. Mr. Whalen took the negative film and one print of "The Best of Luck," from the Metro studio to New York.

Screen rights to "The Marriage of William Ashe," the novel by Mrs. Humphry Ward, have been purchased for May Allison, who will play Grace George's role.

Florence Stone, the actress, visited the studio last week and greeted Emma Dunn, Clara Knott, Bert Lytell, Joseph Kilgour and Harry Van Meter, former stage associates.

ART DIRECTORS INSTALL NEW OFFICERS

The newly elected officers of the Motion Picture Art Directors' Association were installed at the regular meeting of the association held last week at the Beaux Art studio. It was decided at the meeting that the entertainment committe should arange for an art directors' ball to be held in the near future.

Alfred W. Alley of the Metro technical department is the new president of the association. R. E. Sibley of the Lois Weber studio is vice-president; Erdras C. Hartley is secretary, and Sidney Ullman of Metro, treasurer. The election was held on December 18, and the installation of officers on January 2. Although the art directors' association is less than six months old it is a thriving organization with close to fifty members.

Other officials of the club are Jack Holden, sergeant-at-arms; Frank S. Brown, publicist; Earl F. Olin, trustee; Milton T. Menasco, chairman of home committee; and Charles I. Odds, chairman of the membership committee.

CASH DARRELL

"Cash" Darrell, the man who has been selected to head the Criterion Co., is well known among a number of the old timers, starting at the Old Selig Co., a number of years ago as an "extra" and shortly being cast in stock.

He is an old dramatic man having been connected with the McRae Stock Co., for two years, as stage manager and asistant director. In 1908 he signed up with the Russell & Drew Stock Co., in the palmy days of Melo-drama at the old Seattle Theatre. Since then he has been prominently affiliated with a number of stock and "Rep" shows from Vancouver to San Francisco. Forsaking the legitimate in 1912, for vaudeville. In 1914 he did his first picture work with Seligs.

David S. McCann, attorney for Metro in Los Angeles, has been appointed research director of the studio. A library of 1100 reference volumes form the nucleus of the research department.

British and Indian troops numbering 900 participate in battle scenes in the Santa Susanna pass this week for "The Hope."

The lobby and mezzanine floor of a metropolitan hotel were built in a Metro stage for "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Bert Lytell's production. The setting was eighty-five feet long and fifty-five feet wide.

Lucretia Haris, a real colored "mammy," has an important part in the new Booth-Tarkington "Edgar" stories, t be filmed by Goldwyn.

Among the material recently purchased for the co-stars Douglas McLean and Doris May, are the stories "Some Honeymoon," by Charles Everhard Hall, and "Mr. and Mrs. Not Married," by Aaron Hoffman. The pair will continue to be directed by Lloyd Ingraham, whose handling of the new favorites since their debut has been highly successful.

Having completed the Billy Fortune story, "Water, Water Everywhere," for Goldwyn, Director Clarence Badger has started work with his star, Will Rogers, on "Seven Oaks." Young people of this generation are not as familiar with "Seven Oaks" as their parents. It was one of the great stories of the seventies and its author, John G. Holland, was considered one of the greatest of America's literary lights. It has a leading character that is said to fit Rogers like a glove.

Many of the scenes of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," the "crook" play being filmed by Metro, were made in the state penitentiary at Florence, Arizona.

Richard Harding Davis' farce-comedy, "Who's Who," in which William Collier was starred, will reach the screen via Vitagraph.

"The Fighting Chance," by Charles Maigne, is well under way at the Lasky Studio. Dorothy Davenport, Ruth Helms, Maude Wayne have the prominent roles. Will M. Ritchey wrote the scenario from the Robert W. Chambers' story.

NEW STAGE FOR BRUNTON

The largest dark stage ever built on any motion picture lot is being erected at the Brunton studios. It will be 300x150 feet and large enough to accommodate the sets of fifteen companies at the same time. Two wells, each 30x45 feet, will be sunk in the flooring for water scenes.

The primary object for building the new structure at this time is to provide winter training quarters for Jack Dempsey, who is in the midst of work on his fifteen-episode western serial. A running track will be marked off on the stage. By making six circuits of the track each morning the champion will complete the mile run which is part of his daily routine.

ENGAGED BY MARSHALL NEILAN

J. Barney Sherry, one of the first legitimate actors ever to appear in films, has been signed by Marshall Neilan to play prominent parts in all the forthcoming Neilan productions. Mr. Sherry was recently engaged for an important part in "The River's End," Neilan's first independent production, and so well did the young producer like Sherry's acting that he immediately signed the popular Barney to a long time contract as soon as the actor was available.

Jack Conway, producer of "Lombardi Ltd." and other screen successes, is now directing for Benjamin B. Hampton, who is filming the novels of a number of famous writers. He recently completed a Zane Grey story, "The Desert of Wheat," and is now filming a Winston Churchill novel with an all star cast, including Claire Adams, King Baggot, Robert McKim, Beulah Booker, Lassie Young, Ogden Crane, Lydia Knott, George Berrell, Aggie Herring and several other noted players.

Director Joseph de Grasse now believes that half the boys of the country are ambitious to get into the movies. In a recent article written by him at the request of a leading magazine he declared that boys with certain qualities would find the motion picture field a very desirable one. The publication of this article has brought to Mr. de Grasse a flood of mail that led him to say the other day: "I didn't mean that all the boys of America should try to get into the movies."

There is a treat in store for the picture fans. William S. Hart has engaged that sterling actor, Tom Santschi, for an important role in his next production. Hart and Santschi are two of the most stalwart artists in the pictures, their combined height being about that of two and one-half ordinary men.

Bessie Barriscale and Kathleen Norris, the novelist, have become fast friends. Miss Norris arrived in California from the east just as Miss Barriscale completed her picture of Miss Norris' story, "Woman and Wife," which has the title in films of "The Luck of Geraldine Laird." Miss Barriscale gave a special preview of the picture in Miss Norris' honor, and the authoress was highly pleased with it. It is said to be one of the best in Bessie's career.

Willard Mack, the playwright, has organized a motion picture company to produce films from stories of his own conception.

If rumor be true, D. W. Griffith has signed up Laurette Taylor, who is regarded by many critics as the best comedienne of the American stage.

Work has begun on the Selznick production of "Blind Youth." This is the play by Lou Tellegen, husband of Geraldine Farrar, and Willard Mack. An all-star cast is headed by Leatrice Joy and Walter McGrail. The latter arrived in California from New York last week to take up his work. Miss Joy is loaned for the picture by George Loane Tucker.

Robert Warwick completed "Thou Art The Man," last week under the direction of Thomas Heffron, and it is announced that he will shortly be starred in "The City of Masks," but no further information concerning this production or the director is as yet forthcoming.

AT THE CAMPBELL STUDIOS

W. S. Campbell, who created the Joe Martin comedies for the Big U, is now producing his own pictures at the E. and R. Jungle studio, and will release them as Campbell Comedies, commencing the middle of this month, when he will have completed his inital production.

Director Campbell has surrounded himself with practicly the same producing unit that he had at the Universal which includes his assistant, Harry Burns, who also plays one of the leading roles in the two-reel comedy, subject now in the making.

Hap Depew, who used to film the funny antics of Chas. Chaplin, is doing the photographing and Dale Fuller, well remembered for her humerous charactizations in some of our funniest comedies, is playing an excellent part in the new productions.

Mr. Guise has the distinction ofhaving appeared in every production of the famous English Grand Opera company in the last thirty years. He also was prominently cast in the stage successes, "The Man of the Hour" and "Madame X."

In the forthcoming Neilan picture Mr. Guise will play the part of an errraratic old Colonel who has won honors in the great war and whose militant and soldier-like manners in civil life form the basis for the numerous comedy situations which the picture is said to possess.

Evelyn Selbie, who was with Universal three and one-half years, has just signed for a character part with Hampton Productions, under the direction of Bob Thornby.

William S. Hart returned Friday from San Francisco.

Peggy Hyland has started a new picture with the Samuelson company.

The King W. Vidor Company will leave shortly for the Sacramento River where locations have been obtained to shoot scenes for Vidor's forthcoming picture, "The Family Honor."

After a week of "personal appearances" at the Strand theatre in San Francisco, Flanagan and Edwards, vaudevillians, known to the screen world as the "Hall Room Boys," have returned to Hollywood to resume making comedy photoplays with the National Film Corporation of America. Harry Edwards will continue to direct.

Gale Henry last week took the final scenes of her 24th two-reeler of fun, thus marking the completion of her year's contract with Bull's Eye, which concern has been handling her releases. Before starting work on a new series of comedies, Miss Henry is taking a much needed rest at her home in Hollywood.

The stages and dressing-rooms at the Gale Henry studio in Hollywood are being remodeled and a new system of lighting is being installed on the enclosed stage. Six additional dressing-rooms are in the process of construction.

Cissy Fitz-Gerald is now on her fifth release doing the "Cissy" comedies at the Horsley Studios. Her leading man, J. Gunnis Davis, and Edwin Middleton, her director, who came with her from the east, are proving their worth in the work they are doing, while Jos. Kerr, her manager, is too well and favorably known to need an introduction.

Grance Darmond has been retained to appear in support of Tom Moore in "The Great Accident."

The cutting of Cecil B. de Mille's special production, "Why Change Your Wife?" is completed.

AT THE LASKY STUDIOS

Following the completion of "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," on which he is now working, Bryant Washburn will begin "The Sins of St. Anthony," a Saturday Evening Post story, for which Elmer Harris is writing the scenario. James Cruze will direct. The scenario for Mrs. Temple's Telegram" was also written by Elmer Harris from the play by Frank Wyatt and William Morris.

Wallace Reid has completed his new picture, "The Dancin' Fool," under Sam Wood's direction, and will very shortly begin work with the same director in the famous farce comedy, "Sick-a-Bed," scenario for which is by Clara G. Kennedy. Bebe Daniels will again appear as leading woman for the star. "Sick-a-Bed" was one of the most popular of the metropolitan plays of a season or two ago and its film form will no doubt offer many amusing situations.

"Held by the Enemy," under the direction of Donald Crisp, will be started next Monday at the Lasky studio. Among those who will appear in the leading parts are Jack Holt, Wanda Hawley, Lewis Stone, Agnes Ayres, Robert Caine and Walter Hiers. Beulah Marie Dix wrote the scenario. It will be remembered that Miss Dix was author of the scenario for "Secret Service," also a William Gillette play, in which Robert Warwick starred for Paramount Artcraft some months ago under the direction of Hugh Ford.

William de Mille is in the midst of his production, "The Prince Chap," with Thomas Meighan and an exceptional cast interpreting the roles. The play is by Edward Peple and the scenario was written by Olga Printzlau, who, being an artist, found herself quite at home in the depiction of scenes dealing with the artists' quarters of Soho, London. Among others in the cast are Lila Lee, Kathlyn Williams, Theodore Kosloff, Ann Forrest, Casson Ferguson, May Giracci and Peaches Jackson.

Thomas Heffron has finished "Thou Art the Man!" with Robert Warwick as the star, and will shortly begin work on another picture, "The City of Masks," scenario for which is by Walter Woods. Lois Wilson, it is understood, will be leading woman for the star in this new story.

Charles Maigne is progressing with "The Fighting Chance," a Robert W. Chambers story, with scenario by Will M. Ritchey.

Walter Edwards is still at work on Ethel Clayton's picture, "A Lady in Love," scenario for which is by Alice Eyton. Upon its completion he will make another picture with Ethel Clayton as the star, entitled "The Ladder," Edith Kennedy being author of the scenario.

Cecil B. de Mille expects to start work in a few days on his newest production, concerning which there are absolutely no facts obtainable.

Mary Miles Minter starts work at the Morosco Studio on January 24th, under the direction of William D. Taylor, on a picture adapted from the book, "Jenny Be Good." The adaptation is by Julia Crawford Ivers.

Will M. Ritchey has been promoted to the position of head of scenario department at the Morosco studio, where he will have entire charge of this branch of activities at the Occidental Boulevard plant. Mr. Ritchey is one of the most capable of scenario writers himself and he has to his credit such famous productions as "Everywoman," directed by George Melford, and "The Fighting Chance," which Charles Maigne is directing for Paramount Artcraft at the present time.

Madge Kennedy who has just completed work in Octavus Roy Cohen's story "Two Cents Worth of Humaneness," under direction of Harry Beaumont has left for New York City where she will make her next picture, 'Trimmed with Red," written by Wallace Irwin.

Eddie Polo, and Edward Kull, who is directing him in "The Vanishing Dagger" serial, are in Tia Juana. They are filming a scene from a bull fight for use in the serial.

Men who have done much to build up the great Southwest and whose individual records are open for examination. They have been very careful in selecting the four leases which this company owns, and assured themselves that they were RIGHT before putting their own money into the project. The last lease purchased—18 2-3 acres adjoining the townsite of Richfield and just 260 feet north of the Richfield-Yorba Well No. 1, which is now in oil and whose stock is going skyward; 2280 feet from the big General Petroleum Gusher; 1800 feet from the Amalgamated Well, all of which are now drilling, placed us in position to advise our friends to buy our stock and to buy quick. We also knww that we POSITIVELY have the LARGEST INDIVIDUAL BODY OF LAND close to production, of any company now offering its stock for sale in the Rickfield District. This does not mean that WE do not consider the stock of other companies in the Richfield Section good—we recommend the purchase of

RICHFIELD-CONSOLIDATED, RICHFIELD-YOBA and
RICHFIELD-UNION PETROLEUM

We are all working toward the same end—the making of the Richfield District the banner producing field in California. The oil is there and we are going to get it. Our stock is selling fast—come into onr office and we will show you. If we cannot convince you there as to the merits of our claim get in your automobile, drive to the Richfield District and anyone there will show you our lease and you will then agree with us that we are in good company. If you are contemplating buying, we advise immediate action, as things are breaking so fast that we may decide to raise the price of our stock at any time without notice. We also reserve the right to return any over-subscriptions. We started our stock at par, $1.00 per share and each and everyone who buys are in on absolutely the same basis. Our stock is not a speculation, it is a conservative investment.

FAME FOR PHOTOGRAPHER

By reason of the notable work he did as cinematographer in the signal corps of the battle fields of France and Belgium and because he has perfected a number of processes for the improvement of motion picture photography, Ira H. Morgan's photograph is to be included in a book shortly to be published which will contain the likeness of each American photographer who has contributed a distinct bit to the advancement of the profession. Morgan is cameraman for King W. Vidor.

PRAISE FROM "WID"

In a personal telegram from Wid Gunning, recognized by motion picture people everywhere as the greatest critic in the film world, Kathleen Clifford is praised for her work in the Douglas Fairbanks film, "When the Clouds Roll By." In praising her work, Mr. Gunning in his message recalls an evening about three years ago when he and Miss Clifford witnessed a pre-view of a Horkheimer picture.

"Kathleen Clifford, care Virginia Hotel, Long Beach, Cal.

"Just saw you in Fairbanks' 'When the Clouds Roll By.' Congratulations! You get over that wonderful personality of yours and really screened beautifully. You fulfill all those prophecies I made that night we sat in the Liberty theatre in Long Beach and looked at that awful Horkheimer thing. Am mighty glad you got your chance. You will surely have plenty of real opportunity now and am sure glad of it. Good luck to you. Hope to get back to sunny California in about two weeks.

(Signed) "WID GUNNING."

AN ERROR CORRECTED

Through an error it was stated in this paper that Mr. Jovan J. Knezevich came to America to escape political troubles in Serbia. Mr. Knezevich is an ardent Serbian patriot and came to this country to escape political troubles in Austria, where he was propaganding for the liberation of Serbs living under Austro-Hungarian rule. At no time did he have any trouble with his own country, on the contrary, he has given himself to the work of freeing his people.

OUT AT UNIVERSAL

Chief among the players who participate in Erich Von Stroheim's "The Devil's Passkey," are Sam de Grasse, Clyde Fillmore, Una Trevelyn, Maude George, Ruth King, Mae Busch and Leo White.

William C. Dowlan is engaged in supervising the cutting of "Locked Lips." Douglas Gerrard is looking after the titling and other finishing touches of his latest production, "The Forged Bride," based on the story by J. G. Hawks, in which Mary MacLaren is starred; Al Santell is almost ready to ship the finished production of his animal comedy feature, "Lower Four and Upper Three,' starring Joe Martin, the amazing ape.

Christy Cabanne is adding another sequence of scenes to "Burnt Wings," featuring Frank Mayo, and taken from the stage success by Bayard Veiller, "The Primrose Path." He expects to finish the picture by the end of the week.

Jack Ford, who has returned from his trip to New York and his home in Maine since finishing the James J. Corbett feature, "The Prince of Avenue A," will soon begin the filming of "The Girl in the Mirror," the popular novel by Elizabeth Jordan. Frank Mayo will play the principal role, supported by two leading women, Elinor Fair and Claire Anderson.

"Held for the Makin's," a western comedy depicting the difficulties which might occur if prohibition is extended to tobacco, is being filmed under Reeves Eason's direction. Hoot Gibson, Mildred Moore, Beatrice Dominguez, George Field, Chas. Newton and Tote DuCrow are the principal players.

Arthur Flaven is directing a two-reel western entitled "When the Cougar Called," using the Sierra Mountains for location. Robert Burns, Magda Lane, Dorothy Hagan, Charles Dorian, Chick Morrison are in the cast.

Eddie Polo's current serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," is now nearing the end of the fourth episode. Hope Loring is the author of this continued melodrama, with the star's support including Thelma Percy, Peggy O'Dare, Ruth Royce, Texas Watts, Ray Ripley and others.

Betty Blythe, one of the most beautiful women on the screen, has been engaged to appear with Frank Mayo in "Burnt Wings."

Rollin Sturgeon is busily occupied with the story of "Jewel," which he will soon begin filming. Lynn Reynolds and Harry Carey are in daily consultation regarding "Luck," the magazine story by John Frederick, which will be their next production. Tod Browning is engaged upon the Herculean task of supervising the cutting of the Priscilla Dean feature, "The Beautiful Beggar," which he has recently completed. Al Santell will start a comedy production within the next few days, a cast for which is now being assembled.

CASTING DIRECTORY

Copyright Applied For.

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $2.00 per month.

STRANGER

I, James Youngdeer, who personally wrote and directed "The Stranger," wish to state that my publicity man advertised the production as a Youngdeer Film Co. picture. It has never been the property of the Youngdeer Film Co., but was the property of the Youngdeer Production Co., which I formed for the purpose of producing said picture. Since that time, I have sold my interest in the Youngdeer Producing Co., and have since formed the Youngdeer Film Co., under which banner all of my future productions will appear.

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

SARDOU'S "THEODORA" GLAUM

Crowning negotiations carried on between J. Parker Read, Jr., the film producer and Thomas R. Hart and A. Lincoln Hart, owners of the rights to the plays by Victorien Sardou, the greatest drama in the Sardou library has been purchased as a starring vehicle for Louise Glaum.

"Theodora" was Sarah Bernhardt's most suitable vehicle, in the opinion of the critics, and in the Divine Sarah's tour with this play Lou-Tellegen enacted the soul of Andreas, Theodora's lover.

Raymond Bartlett, representing J. Parker Read, Jr., already is in London, preparatory to a trip to Italy to gather data, at the instance of the producer and A. Lincoln Hart, who directed the American stage production, in the matter of settings, accurate costuming and details of life in the Justinian period.

CLIFFORD SERIAL

Sixteen weeks have already been consumed in the making of "The Invisible Ray," the serial in which Ruth Clifford is to be starred by the Frohman company, and yet the finish is not in sight by another month.

"The Road to Divorce," Mary MacLaren's latest starring vehicle, is nearing its final scenes at Universal City under the guidance of Philip Rosen. The photodrama is based on J. Grubb Alexander's story, "The Better Half," and Miss MacLaren has the support of a cast including Edward Peil, Bonnie Hill, Eugenie Forde, Helen Davidge, Gloria Holt and Roy Stecker.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are gathering a notable comedy cast to support them in their first Universal feature under their new contract. The vehicle selected is "Everything but the Truth," based on magazine story by Edgar Franklin.

Director Christy Cabanne promises the completion of "Burnt Wings" within the next few days. This feature is based on "The Primrose Path," by Bayard Veiller. Its principal players are Frank Mayo, Josephine Hill, Betty Blythe, Rudolph Christians, Beatrice Burnham and other Universal favorites.

Jack Ford, who directed Harry Carey in his most recent success, "Marked Men," is about to begin filming "The Girl in the Mirror," from the popular novel of the same name by Elizabeth Jordan. A cast of unusual importance will appear in this production, headed by Frank Mayo and including Claire Anderson, Elinor Fair, Harry Hilliard, Ray Ripley, Ruth Royce, Robert Bolder, Arthur Hoyt and Bull Montana.

Eddie Polo, under his own supervision and the direction of Edward Kull, has begun filming the fifth episode of the serial de luxe, "The Vanishing Dagger," by Hope Loring and Jaccard. Prominent in Mr. Polo's support are Thelma Percy, Peggy O'Rare, Ray Ripley, C. Norman Hammond, Ruth Royce and Laura Oakley.

Dudley C. Hendricks is supporting Jack Pickford in "The Litle Shepherd of Kingdom Come." He is a descendant of the Hendrick family which founded the town of Franklin, Indiana and were early founders of Indianapolis, Ind.

William C. Dowlan and Douglas Gerrard, who have been occupied for the past three weeks in the editing and cutting of their respective productions, Tsuru Aoki in "Locked Lips," and Mary MacLaren in "The Forged Bride," are now ready to ship the finished films to Universal's New York offices.

SLOMAN SIGNS TO DIRECT LEWIS

Edward "Ted" Sloman will direct the Jack London stories Metro is producing for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., which owns the screen rights to the late novelist's work. Mr. Sloman signed a contract with C. P. Butler, general superintendent of the Metro studio, Friday. He will begin the first picture, "Burning Daylight," the first week of February.

Harry Franklin is assembling his cast for "Amazing Amelia," a comedy drama starring Edith Roberts, work on which will begin within a few days.

Harry Carey has returned to Universal City after a well deserved rest of six weeks, and is ready to begin on the production of "Luck," by John Frederick, as soon as the cast has been completed. Lynn Reynolds will supervise his next feature.

Erich Von Stroheim is in the cutting room for fourteen hours a day assembling and supervising the editing of his second production, "The Devil's Passkey."

Roy Stecker, the four-year-old son of A. C. Stecker, chief animal trainer at Universal City, was cast for the Sonny in Mary MacLaren's latest feature, "The Road to Divorce."

Ritchey Advanced—Paramount's scenario expert, Will M. Ritchey, has been elevated in rank and placed in complete charge of production at the Morosco studios as supervising director. Mr. Ritchey was formerly a newspaper editor. The esteem in which his ability is held was shown by his selection to prepare the scenarios of "Everywoman" and several other of Paramount's most important productions of the year.

NEW PITTS PICTURE

ZaSu Pitts has commenced work in a new Brentwood production entitled "Bright Skies,'" under Henry Kolker's direction. The scenario from the story by Burke Jenkins, has been written by Sarah Y. Mason, whose close and long friendship with Miss Pitts is offered as a guarantee of rich situations and business of that distinct type of pathetic comedy which Miss Pitts has so effectively made her own.

Included in the cast are KatePrice, Jack Pratt, Tom Gallery, Edward Delevanti and Jack Braughall.

Al Santell, supervising director of comedies at Universal City, has signed a contract with Louis Weiss, vice-president of the Numa Film Company, and general manager of Artclass, under the terms of which, it is said, he will be one of the highest salaried directors in the business.

Santell will complete his contract at Universal City on April 23. He will leave at once for New York City to take up his new duties for Mr. Weiss, among whose noted productions are the Tarzan stories by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Feature pictures from the works of famous authors will be produced under the direction of Santell. Arrangements provide for the "shooting" of the pictures in the east, but if it is necessary Santell will return to California when weather conditions become a factor in retarding the extensive production program that has been mapped out by Mr. Weiss.

Under the terms of the contract Santell will receive a large salary in addition to a percentage of the profits from every picture he makes.

Harmon Weight, film editor and assistant director at several coast studios, has been engaged to assist Henry Kolker in the filming of "Bright Skies."

WHERE TO FIND PEOPLE YOU KNOW

KENNETH CHARLES

By Mildred Davis

Kenneth Charles, the boy on the cover, is the winner of the Camera! Kiddie Contest.

Kenneth was born six years ago in Detroit, Michigan. Since a very early age he has shown a marked ability and inclination to mimic the actions of his worthy friends and relatives. As a result of this natural talent Kenneth was given dramatic lessons, with the ultimate intention of obtaining success in motion picture work.

Kenneth undoubtedly has great ability—and we predict that if this ability is combined with the perseverance shown in the Kiddie Contest, Kenneth Charles will have a successful film career.

A Villain Yet—Frank Campeau will continue to play the villain parts in Douglas Fairbanks' pictures, having signed a new long-term contract with that star.

Ethel Shannon is now playing the lead opposite Charles Ray in his last picture for Thomas H. Ince. During the last nine months Miss Shannon has had a meteoric rise in pictures. She has played with Bert Lytell, William S. Hart, Mr. Sessue Hayawaka and Hoot Gibson.

Emmet King is cast in J. Warren Kerrigan's latest Brunton production, "One Week-End.'

Frank Gereghty, assistant director of the Kerrigan company, is playing an important part in Kerrigan's latest Brunton production, "One Week-End," a lively comedy of New York society life by Wyndham Martyn.

"The Cheaters" is the title chosen for May Allison's picturization of the Henry Arthur Jones drama, "Judah," which Screen Classic, Inc., is producing, directed by Henry Otto. The scenario was prepared by the Zellners.

PICK-UPS BY THE STAFF

Malcolm S. Boylan, assistant publicity director at Universal City, has accepted an executive position with the Samuelson British Film Company, which is making films for English consumption in the vast studios at the world's film capitol. He will be succeeded at Universal City by Garrett Graham, former feature writer on the Los Angeles Herald.

Bull Montana has been engaged for a part in the coming Universal production, "The Girl in the Mirror," in which Frank Mayo is to be the star. Jack Ford is directing the production.

Betty Bouton has an important part in Marshall Neilan's second independent production.

Al Santell is now producing a comedy-feature at Universal City bearing the title of "Vamp a Little Lady." Chris Rub and Lillian Rich are playing the important roles.

Little Leslie, who starred in David Belasco's initial presentation of "The Boomerang," is now playing a "vamp" role in Kerrigan's latest production.

Alfred Regnier is playing the part of a college athlete with Kerrigan in "One Week-End."

Stanhope Wheatcroft will share leading masculine honors with Edith Roberts in her forthcoming Universal photodrama, "Amazing Amelia."

J. Farrell McDonald, Charles LeMoyne and Joe Harris, players who have supported Harry Carey in a number of his biggest successes, will again be seen with this star in his next feature, "Luck," which will be directed by Lynn Reynolds.

Dr. J. William Hoffman, nephew of Robert Lieber, president of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, has arrived in Los Angeles with his wife on a pleasure visit and is being escorted around the studios by Eddie O'Hara of Marshall Neilan Productions.

Eugene Pallette will be Viola Dana's leading man in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," her Screen Classic to follow "Eliza Comes to Stay."

Three Universal City publicity men have been elected members of the Studio Publicist's Association, an organization of studio news writers. The Universal City members are Charles L. Hertzman, director of publicity at the world's film capitol; Garrett Graham, Mr. Hertzman's assistant, and Malcolm S. Boylan, director of publicity for Samuelson Films, Ltd., a British company producing at the big studio.

Film Ambitions—Mrs. Maurice Maeterlinck, wife of the Belgian poet, who is in this country with her husband, is to be tested before the camera in a California studio. She is ambitious to appear as the star in a story written by her husband.

Bara Turns to Stage—Theda Bara has deserted the screen for the stage, having signed a contract to appear in a play by George V. Hobart entitled "The Lost Soul." Miss Bara declined several offers of movie contracts because she refused longer to play vampire roles.

With Pickford—William Moran, who has recently had an important part in a Mitchell Lewis production, and is now filling a leading role with Lottie Pickford's first starring venture, "Into the Light," has shown special ability in character parts.

Louis W. Chaudet has just completed "Common Sense" with Ralph Lewis and Vola Vale as stars. She was born in a dug-out in Kansas.

Miss Ettinger Motors—Margaret Ettinger, Hollywood correspondent for the New York Morning Telegraph, is the proud possessor of a new high powered motor car. In her first solo trip Miss Ettinger was seen climbing the steps of the Hollywood Methodist church. Her intentions may have been O. K. but either the new car or Miss Ettinger had their dates mixed for this happened on Tuesday.

Metro Moulders Move—Victor Andre, head of the Metro studio moulding department, has moved into his new building on the Metro lot across from the studio. Mr. Andre has three large rooms in this new building and here all the moulding for the studio will be done in the future.

The entire cast, which includes, Hedda Nova, Jack Holt and Byron Munson is more than enthusiastic.

Mae Busch is vacationing between pictures at Arrowhead Springs. She will return in about a week.

The Coburn Production Company has just returned from Victorville, after a month spent shooting desert scenes, for a couple of Western stories. Wallace D. Coburn, production manager, states that he expects to get started on five-reelers very shortly. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie O'Shea have returned to Los Angeles after a two weeks' sojourn in San Francisco.

DENOUNCES PRACTICE OF "SELLING BOTH ENDS TO THE MIDDLE"

Marshall Neilan last week issued a "call" to all motion picture producers and directors to attack the practice of injecting advertising in films and collecting at both ends, namely from the exhibitor and the national advertiser. Mr. Neilan in emphatic terms, denounced this method of "cutting down the overhead" on a picture and pointed out that it represented a serious handicap not only to the motion picture entertainment industry but to the individual producers and directors as well.

"The time has come," said Mr. Neilan, "when producers must realize that the practice of injecting advertising in entertainment film is a dangerous proceeding, not only for the industry in general, but for them individually.

"I know of specific cases where pictures have been practically paid for in advance by national advertisers after which rentals were demanded and obtained from exhibitors for the privilege of making good the producer's arrangement with the advertiser. It behooves the individual director to stand firm on this matter, for its continuance means the prostitution of his own best efforts.

"Exhibitors have become 'wise' and the producers who do not realize this are only inviting trouble for themselves. For many months I have been watching this practice of 'cutting down the overhead' on a production on the part of various prominent producers. It was quite evident that this could not continue. These producers became bolder with each succeeding picture and in one particular case, it is generally understood that the cost of production on a well known film was covered by advertisers before the print reached the exhibitor.

"It is gratifying to note that exhibitors everywhere are denouncing this practice. They must do this in order to protect themselves. Advertising on the screen, to a limited extent, is very often good business for the exhibitor. However, it should work out this way and not merely present good business for the producer at the expense of the exhibitor. The exhibitor should be the sole judge as to how much and how little advertising is to appear on his screen. If a local book or music store will give him window display advertising in return for the running of a slide or reciprocative announcement in the house program, this is something of direct benefit to the exhibitor. However, he is the sole judge of this matter and if he sees a direct return for himself, it is good business to co-operate along these lines. But to run a film that purports to be entertainment and at the same time endeavor to put over advertising —the public would sooner or later see through the scheme to the detriment first, of the exhibitor.

"The advertising possibilities of the screen are wonderful. However, this is a distinct field and should not be embodied in motion pictures prepared for entertainment purposes. People read advertisements in the Saturday Evening Post. In fact, many persons look at the advertisements first before reading anything else in the book. However, when they are through reading the advertisements and sit down to enjoy a story, they don't want to read arguments why the hero uses a Stetson hat or Paris garters. Nor do they want to be told in the middle of a tense chapter that the suit the villain wears was made by Moe Levy. And so with motion picture advertising in the theatre; if the exhibitor sees fit to run an advertisement, but he does not want to 'fool the public' by showing a film that is supposed to tell a story but which flashes close-ups of Goodyear tires throughout the course of the presentation.

"Nothing is as unpopular with the American public as the realization that it is being 'fooled.' It is done every day in a hundred different ways, without a doubt, but as soon as the public is acquainted with the fact, resentment follows. This is human nature. The re-action upon the industry as a whole would not be insignificant. The direct result upon the producer responsible, and even the director whose name appears on the film, would be serious."

A New Angle on the Scenario Writer

—Finis Fox, of the Metro scenario staff, whose most recent production, "Should A Woman Tell?" featuring Alice Lake, recently scored a sensational hit at the Capitol in New York City, confidently predicts that the day of the scenario writer will soon be here.

"The time was not so very long ago," says Mr. Fox, "that the star was all important. The exhibitor deliberately ignored the author and director because he said that the people didn't give a whoop who wrote the story or who directed it. In the last year or two, however, he has learned that the public is just as vitally interested in who wrote the story, who scenarioized it and who directed it as he is in who delineate the characters."

Mr. Fox is now engaged in humanizing a Drury Lane melodrama.

Mary MacLaren has concluded her contract with the Universal Company and will henceforth appear under other auspices.

ILLITERATE DIGEST"
By Will Rogers

Hello, everybody! Have you had your Census taken yet?

That's the last thing we got left to take from us—Los Angeles waits 'till winter and takes its Census from the hotel registers.

You know, a Tourist Census counts one just the same as a person who knows enough to stay at home.

I met a fellow up near Frisco taking Los Angeles Census.

A good way to take the Census here would be to count the cars parked on the streets.

If Prohibition and Wood Alcohol keep on I guess this will be about the last Census we will have.

Don't worry about Frisco landing the Democratic Convention. They won't nominate a President.

Those Democratic Conventions are held to give Bryan somewhere to go every four years.

See where President Wilson and Bryan have split—now we know the President is right.

Be a good joke on Frisco if that seal they have shouldn't come out on the rocks that week.

The Republicans are going to hold a Convention as soon as they find a city large enough to hold all their Presidential candidates.

Straightline Stories and Those Carrying Sub-Plots

INSTALLMENT VIII.

We notice that certain producers say that they prefer straightline stories. Let us see just what they mean.

A straightline story deals with a single conflict between two opposing elements. If we introduce another conflict between one of these elements and a third party, w have a sub-plot. Other departures from the straightline stories are: Dream stories and those which contain a story within a story, or the story is told in retrospect.

Straightline stories require smaller casts than do those of the other kind and at the same time the interest of the spectator is not divided between two or more conflicts. If our plot deals with the love of a man for a woman and the obstacle which stands in the way, we are pretty apt to detract interest from our romance if we ring in too many side plots. Only a skilled dramatist should attempt to handle a complex plot. The student wil do well to center his attention of the three angles to the triangle in his story and get all that he can from them.

DRAMATIC AND PHYSICAL ACTION

Dramatic action does not necessarily mean violent physical movement. It may picture an inward struggle that approaches the superhuman and yet there may be very little physical movement.

For example let us study the following:

A halfbreed whose friend has been murdered by a white man swears vengeance on the white race. While he is at the grave of the departed friend, an aeroplane falls near his cabin. In the wreckage he finds a beautiful white girl unconscious. He bends over her and gazes into her beautiful face. He has not seen a woman for a year. He takes her to his cabin and watches over her by day and guards the cabin door at night. As he bends over her, his great chest heaves up and down, his breath comes hard and his nails cut into the flesh as his soul cries out for her. He knows there is an insurmountable barrier between them, however, and he is fighting a great inward battle. This is dramatic action with very little physical movement. The fight which he has later, with a villian who tries to abduct her, is also dramatic action, but of another sort.

SPECTACLE

Spectacle means spectacular events such as a collision between two giant locomotives, a battle between two opposing armies, great mobs of people in a riot, an earthquake, flood, etc.

It is valuable in the story only in as much as it affects the fates of its principal characters. It has been said that "A circus may legitimately have sideshows, but the drama can not." There is danger in substituting spectacle for dramatic action. It may obliterate the finer mechanism of the drama with a realism that satiates and makes everything that follows, insipid. The characters and that audience, as well as the play may be lost in the wreckage. Spectacle merely assaults our nerves while true drama appeals to our hearts.

Romanticism and Idealism may be completely overwhelmed by spectacle, which is ultra-Realism. Romanticism revels in the vagaries of Youth, the intoxication for adventure, and the desire for love, while Idealism speculates in beauty, dreams and perfection, and is delicate. The contributive elements to romance must be romantic and not spectacular. Even melodrama may be spoiled with the introduction of too much spectacle. This is illustrated in such works as "The Hair-Raising Exploits of Dick the Diamond Robber" and some of the serial stories that we see on the screen. In this connection, attention may be called to the fact that we never see spectacle introduced in any of Mary Pickford's plays, which are all based on Romanticism or Idealism. On the other hand we look for it in the screen stories of Pearl White, Ruth Roland, Helen Gibson, or Tom Mix.

THE DRAMATIC SCALE

The scale of dramatic entertainment may be said to run as follows: (1) Romantic or Ideal Drama; (2) Comedy-Drama and Satire; (3) Tragedy and Melodrama; (4) Burlesque, Straight Comedy and Comedy-Melodrama; (5) Farce and Slapstick.

There is a decided difference between pure drama and melodrama, yet the dividing line is invisable. There is an overlapping of one into the other. Pronounced melodrama is pure drama exaggerated. We approach melodrama as soon as the dramatic action in our story assumes a sensational nature. The characterizations of the principals in melodrama, both the good and the bad elements, are somewhat overdrawn. The hero and heroine are shown to be very, very good, while the villain and his followers are equally bold and bad. Murders, abductions, fights, robberies and devilish plots have their place in the melodrama. Here we have a purely physical conflict. In drama of the romantic or Ideal type we have more of a spiritual struggle.

In Comedy-drama, we have a pronounced element of comedy throughout a drama. There are serious, or dramatic moments in comedy-drama, but none in straight comedy. Comedy relief is simply a touch of comedy here and there to contrast the heavy machinery of the drama. Comedy may be injected in melodrama also, making it comedy melodrama. Satire is witty censure, and a form of comedy-drama. Burlesque is an imitation of drama, done in ridicule. It is clownish while Satire is dignified. Slapstick comedy is melodrama exaggerated to the point where it becomes ludricous.

A good example of Satire would be "Don Quixote" or Gullivers Travels. "Bab's Diary," a series of stories which were picturized by Marguerite Clark, were comedy-dramas. So are all of Douglas Fairbanks' stories, and those of Bryant Washburn and Charlie Ray. 'East Lynne" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" are good examples of melodrama in fiction. The picture stories done by Gladys Brockwell, Dorothy Phillips, Norma Talmadge and Mary Maclaren are in the melodramatic class. Burlesque is typified in 'The Geezer of Berlin" a well known picture made by the Universal Film Company and which was a travesty on the Kaiser. "Cinderella" and "Jewel" are two very good illustrations of Romantic and Ideal drama. The picture stories produced by the team of Lyons and Moran, Christie comedies and by Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are straight comedies. Charlie Chaplin produces a combination of Burlesque and slapstick. Mack Sennett's comedies are also a combination of slapstick and Burlesque, with some satire occasionally. I would say that Vitagraph comedies made by Larry Semon are straight slapstick.

Play Crafters Entertain at the Gamut Club

The Play Crafters accomplished a most unusual evening Thursday, Jan. 15, at the Gamut Club. Several of their best recent sketches were put on with artistic finish.

"Renunciation," which was written by Dr. Lottie C. Parks, was generally conceded to be the greatest success of the performance. Miriam Meredith of the Ince studio, handled the lead with ability.

"Pursued," another popular sketch of the evening, was written by Isabella Ingalese, and played by Gloria Ray. Harl McInroy well know picture man, directed the latter.

The Play Crafters have been attracting much attention with their truly professional workk. We are expecting to hear more of them in the future.

SURPRISE FOR MISS NEWMAN

A more than successful surprise party was held at the Studio Club, Friday, Jan. 16, for Miss Nell Newman. The delightful evening was occasioned by Miss Newman's impending return to her home in Kansas City. Informal dancing was the featured attraction of the evening, and the club reports a wonderful time. Those present were, the girls of the house, several of Miss Newman's personal friends, and their escorts.

The Club reports the presence of three new girls at the house. They are: Miss Mary Louise Beaton, Miss Marjorie Manning of New York City, and Miss Eve Montaldo of Cornell University.

The next club dance will be a Valentine Party, held sometime during the first part of February.

Marjorie Daw is now comfortably settled in her beautiful new home on Vista avenue in Hollywood, which she recently purchased.

Marjorie has also added a handsome new touring car to her personal belongings.

Gracebel Taylor, Hughie Mack, Phoebe Basser and other members of the film colony, assisted in a successful benefit vaudeville show at Ocean Park last week.

Montague Glass, famous author of the Potash and Perlmutter stories, who is sojourning in the west for the winter, recently visited the Goldwyn Studios at Culver City, with his wife. They were the guests of Vice-President Abraham Lehr and with him witnessed the detailed operation of the great plant under his management.

They watched with much interest the filming of scenes on several of the big stages, and learned much in a brief time regarding the business of producing screen stories. Perhaps in the near future magazine readers will be regaled with Potash and Perlmutter's impressions of a motion picture studio.

A lot of folks think anybody is a good enough actor to "get by" as a motion picture comedian, says Al St. John, Paramount star who produces his own comedies. Perhaps so, says Al, but can you imagine:

Theda Bara stopping a ripe custard pie with one of her "million dollar" eyes?

Major Robert Warwick being forcibly assisted down a dozen flight of stairs and then swept up and deposited into an ill-smelling wagon by a street sweeper?

Elsie Ferguson as a snappy bathing girl?

Frank Keenan smashing dishes across Pauline Frederick's head?

Geraldine Farrar and Valeska Suratt running up and down Broadway followed by a score of Keystone sops?

TAYLOR SERIES

The first of the series of William D. Taylor productions which are to be put out under that name by Paramount will be a picture adapted from the book, "Jennie Be Good," with Mary Miles Minter as the star. All of Mr. Taylor's output hereafter is to be presented to the public in this manner. At the conclusion of this picture, Mr. Taylor will take up a line of work which has already been mapped out by Paramount to cover the entire current year.

FILM BALZAC'S CLASSIC

Readers of Honors de Balzac's famous classic, "The Magic Skin," will be able to see it on the screen at an early date. A six-reel adaption of the tale, with Warren Kerrigan and Fritzie Brunette in the leading roles has been made.

Mr. T. Hayes Hunter is progressing rapidly with "Earth-Bound," Basil King's famous novel. The building of this screen drama, which reaches into the transcendental, requires the delicate hand of a master. Mr. Hunter is ably supported in his work by Mr. Claude Camp.

William Merrill McCormack is doing another oriental character. This time he is with Metro, having finished two portrayals of like nature for the Vitagraph Company.

Madge B. Orlamond is now with Anita Stewart playing the mother.

NEW CUTTER

Without so much as changing his wardrobe, and with grease paint besmearing his usual spic-and-span cherubic countenance, Sid Chaplin stopped the workin' of a masterpiece just to watch Demonstrator D. J. Dwyer illustrate a new invention which is revolutionizing the "cutting" of films in picture land.

It took little more than five minutes to convince Sid Chaplin that he had found something he wanted.

Of course, at that, Sid Chaplin does not show remarkable originality when he added this new agony in small portable projecting picture machines to the Chaplin Comedy Studio Co.'s equipment, as Nazimova, E. Willet Ince studio, Tally Exchanges and others have already installed them and find they just fill the bill.

The invention does away with the long drawn out old-fashioned process of "cuttin" which producers claims wastes much valuable time.

With the installation of this machine on the Chaplin property and the alacrity with which directors accept the new invention, it is expected that all other producing companies of California filmland will shortly follow suit.

Frances Burnham has just sold a big story, and is at work on another.

Ora Carew is playing the stellar role in "Blind Youth" for Selznick, on the Brunton lot.

"Fashions May Change and Styles May Go, But a Type Remains For Ever."

The writer of this brief digest has traveled the countries of the world, being at one time associated with The Daily Telegraph of London, and New York Herald, which gave many opportunities for observing the customs, mannerisms, and styles of different races, from the Zulu to the highest types of our own race.

She experience proved valuable in more than one instance to those he became associated with, since taking up the motion picture profession.

FOREWORD

The motion picture industry is, undoubtedly the most progressive for its age in this country, employing thousands of people in the different departments, for the production of pictures.

There are from seven to ten thousand individuals at call by the studios of Los Angeles alone, there are still unlimited possibilities for those coming within the catagory of "Extra Talent" and with the ever increasing appreciation from directors, wise in recognising, the correct composition of the picture, depends as much on this class as principals, there are reasonable grounds therefore to expect, they will be more appreciated than hitherto.

Admitting this, it is imperative if the class alluded to are to secure their right standing, in the profession, they must take pains to study details of the art of characterisation, and make up, when appearing before the camera, and it is to those desiring to represent more truly the character portrayed. These observations are made, more in a spirit of friendly suggestion, than criticism.

The comparisons given are being made to bring out a few every day experiences.

Indifferent talent counting the dollars only, will never be stars, success in the art means study and hard work.

MAKE UP

The fundamental principle governing success, in the motion picture profession, lies in attention to details.

The indifferent ones, generally spend their time, in telling the wonderful part, they had in so and so's picture, while the real artist studies his make up.

The difference between these two is that one works with his tongue and the other with his soul. To make this comparison more clearly understood, the following case selected from observations made in one of the dressing rooms of a modern studio, may serve our purpose.

It is uncharacteristic for instance, for a fair person to make up with extremely dark eyebrows as it alters the entire character, and expression of the face.

Nature generally provides what is required, and while delicate treatment or lining may improve, or bring out certain features, it is inadvisable for a blonde type to make up too heavily.

The casting director who knows his business generally takes these seemingly small but important details into consideration when calling for certain types.

When the part calls for pronounced type, such as a man of Latin appearance, pirate or one with heavy features, the eyebrows can be exaggerated, as dark persons generally have heavier eyebrows than fair ones. In many instances, fair men have very bushy eyebrows, but the thickness and color invariably harmonize with the complexion. In these cases, if one is made up too dark it appears grotesque.

A few experiments will convince the most sceptically as to the density re-

FEATURING HYLAND

Peggy Hyland, having terminated her contract with Fox, is being starred in a seven-reel drama, "At the Mercy of Tiberius." This film is being produced by G. B. Samuelson, the London producer, who is now in California with a company brought from London. The director is Fred Le Granville, who for some years has been chief cinematographer of Universal productions. This is his first venture into the field of direction.

NEW WILLIAMS FEATURE

Earle Williams has begun work on "Captain Swift," a screen version of C. Haddom Chambers' play of English society life. Sir Herbert Tree played the role in England that Williams will now essay.

NEW STUDIO FOR HOLLYWOOD

The Clermont Photoplay Corpora, tion, recently incorporated under the laws of the State of California, are in business to produce five-reel comedies. The Corporation has contracts for releases from one of the largest distributors in the world.

Work on the new studio in Hollywood, will be started in the next thirty days.

The president and general manager is H. N. Clermont, who has been financially interested in motion pictures for the past two or three years. John T. Carleton is the first vice-president and production manager. The director general, Lloyd B. Carleton; secretary, C. C. McDaniel.

RAY INDEPENDENT

Charles Ray is hereafter to produce his own pictures, which will be released through the First National Exhibitors' circuit. A new company bearing his name has been organized, with his father, Charles T. Ray, as president and the star as a member of the board of directors. Jerome Storm, who has been Ray's director during the past year, goes with the new organization.

At meeting of Assistant Directors' Association, the following officers were elected for 1920.

President, Geo. Webster; vice-presidents, H. Schenk, Wm. Grinley; treasurer, Scott Beal; secretary, Fred Tyler; sergeant-at-arm, C. H. Mitchell; chairman of board, Wm. Dyer.

The above will be installed at next regular meeting.

WARNER BROS. TAKE OVER HOSLEY'S

The David Horsley studios, 1919 South Main street, have been taken over by the Warner Brothers and henceforth all productions of this company, including the Helen Holmes serials and the Paramount, Al St. John comedies, will be made at this "lot."

Miss Holmes already has started work on "The Danger Trail," her second serial for the Warner Brothers. Gilbert P. Hamilton is the director.

St. John will shortly start "shooting" on his fifth comedy, "The Aero-Nut," his fourth laugh producer has been subtitled and shipped to New York City.

NEW PATHE STAR

The Pathe Company is preparing to present a new comedy star, Beatrice La Plante, for whose beauty and talent big promises are made. She's a native of Paris and has been in this country two years. She was Sessue Hayakawa's leading lady in his recent picture, "The Beggar Prince," of French and Spanish parentage. She is to be featured in a line of eccentric.

Frank Mayo finished the filming of "Burnt Wings" at one o'clock in the morning, and at eight o'clock the same morning he was made up and ready to go on location for his next feature, "The Girl in the Mirror."

....The Universal Scenario Department announces the purchase of the screen rights of "False Colors," a recent magazine story by Edwina Levin, intended as a starring vehicle for Priscilla Dean. In "False Colors" the volatile star will play a dual role.

Colleen Lead—Sessue Hayakawa's leading lady in his next picture, "The Bleeder," wil be Colleen Moore, who has hitherto appeared in comedies.

NEWS FROM THE GOLDWYN LOT

"Milestones," by Arnold Bennett and Edward Enoblock, has just been bought by Goldwyn and will be put on shortly. No idea as to the cast has been advanced by anyone, but it ought to make a corking good picture.

ARRO DISTRIBUTION

The five reel independent production, "Love's Protege," starring Ora Carew, has been shipped to New York for its first presentation on any screen early in February. The picture has been taken over by the Arro Film Company for distribution.

"Officer 666" has been purchased and will be given an elaborate production with—perhaps Tom Moore.

The latest news from the Mabel Normand training quarters up in the administration building is that she is to do "The Slim Princess," by George Ade. Gerald Duffy will do the continuity.

Felix F. Feist, of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, left New York the fifth on a round-country tour of Goldwyn exchanges, to see how the picture business it.

He will be in Los Angeles on February 6, 7 and 8, and will be out at the studios for a visit or two.

The first Edgar story will be released in March.

Another miniature theatre is being added to the four already in operation at the big Goldwyn Studios. The fifth is larger than the others, and will be equipped with two projectors so that a five real production can be run as in a real theatre. It will have weekly shows for studio folks, the feature being the production ready for release that week, as ten companies are now at work, and one film is completed each week. A part of the Goldwyn band will play, and there will be a comedy reel run before the feature.

At each performance heretofore the present exhibition, or last-run, theatre has been too small, hence the arrangement of the new space.

Jack Pickford is due to arrive soon from his Christmas holiday in New York. When he gets back he will start at once upon a new story.

Wallace Worsley and Gouverneur Morris are in San Francisco looking over locations for the latter's story, "The Penalty," which is to start production soon.

Lawrence McCloskey, a veteran writer for the screen, who has created material for many of the motion picture stars, is the latest contributor to the list of coming productions to be made and distributed by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. It was announced this week that Mr. McCloskey's "The Return of Zahzi," an original story, has been purchased by Goldwyn, and will be used as a starring vehicle for Madge Kennedy, who has just completed "The Blooming Angel" at the Culver City Studios. Within the next week the script will be turned over to a continuity writer.

Henry Woodward and Claude Mitchell, who as leading man and director respectively, worked together in the recent Brentwood production, "Seeing It Through," have returned to Los Angeles from a pleasure jaunt in San Francisco.

Francis du Barry, who has been playing the role of a French artist in Lasky's "Prince Chap," will close his engagement this week.

Pauline Hall who held New York fascinated for 800 nights in "Erminie Drops Down, Down, Down, to a Tiny Little Part on Broadway!" Her story is printed and illustrated in next Sunday's Examiner under the title "From Chorus Girl Up the Ladder to Broadway Star and Down Again." Be sure and get Sunday's Examiner!—Adv.

STYLE AND ETIQUETTE

quired when using brown, or black Mascaro.

When the face has to represent types of foreign climes, by using Indian brown, then the eyebrows can be darkened accordingly.

Those with fair complexions, desiring bushy eyebrows, will secure a very good effect with brown Mascara, brushing the hair the wrong way, and applying a little face cream.

FOREIGN OR ORIENTAL TYPES

When making up the eyebrows to represent foreign or oriental characters, great care should be taken to secure the right density and lines of the eyebrows, as men and women of different nations vary considerably in this respect, a reasonable comparison being the thin dark line of the Japanese, with those of the Spanish or Greeks, which are considerably heavier.

It is always advisable to consult some well known work in the libraries of the particular race the character portrays. Excellent illustrations can generally be found which materially assist in giving one the correct lines of the make up.

The writer has dealt at some length on this seemingly unimportant matter, but there is no doubt it is one of those details which has a great deal to do with correct facial expression.

The more advanced art, such as making up for old, or typical characters, requiring beards, call for considerable experience, and patience. The beginner should always seek the advise of the more experienced actor, for in this case as many others, experience is the best teacher. Bearing in mind the make up for the camera is entirely different to that required for the foot lights.

In this connection it may be interesting to record the results of a recent instance of careless make up, on the part of a well known legitimate actor. In waiting for the set, he had spent several days on a yacht, returning to the studio to take a leading part with one of the highest paid stars in America. The writer having something, of common interest to take up with him, strolled into his dressing room, and notwithstanding he had only been there about ten minutes was surprised to find him already made up, and being a little jealous of his quick change, compared with my somewhat slow method, remarked, "Your old legitimates are wonderfully quick in the art of make up" "Oh yes," was the laconic reply, "just a dab of grease, a little line, here and there with a dash of powder, and 'there you are, don't you know.'"

In due course the picture was produced, and after a great deal of cutting, was finally run off in the projecting room. The director was extremely disappointed, for not withstanding he had pointed out certain defects, to my high salaried friend during production, over nine hundred feet of film had to be cut out, and while it was not perhaps entirely due to careless make up, it had a great deal to do with it. In one particular action, he had to take hold of the stars neck, when the scene was projected, his hand looked like that of a lusty blacksmith. There was a retake, but as the set had been struck, is cost more than a few thousand cases of whitening to correct this glaring slip. The picture was shown in Los Angeles and knowing the high reputation of my friend's family in the silent drama, went to see it. To express my own criticism would be impossible, for I could not find words for it, preferring to refrain from even attempting to, on the plea that he was an egotistical friend.

In one particular scene, this rapid grease flinger, had to make an entrance into a room towards the camera, and for all the world he looked like a coal heaver at Port Said. Oh, no, he was not supposed to be anything of the kind, as a matter of fact, he was taking the part of the president of a New York bank.. The lesson to all classes of talent, portraying society, or cultured parts is obvious.

In all parts where soap is considered one of the essentials of the household, always have the hands whitened, for one never knows when the camera may catch you out.

The same reasoning applies with equal force, to those too sparing with the grease and powder, special care being paid to applying same, well below the edge of the collar, back of the neck, and ears. It is only a detail, but just one of those glaring acts of carelessness, an assistant director frequently notices, corrects. It is not always the tender foot who is the culprit either, there are many with far more experience than the writer showing the line or ring, as it is termed in South Africa, where white meets black.

And still many wonder why careful directors keep them as far away as possible from the camera. It's a detail everyone should attend to, as it is hardly to be expected an assistant director can run round with powder and puff, because some budding actor, arrived late and flung the make up on.

Apart from this, it may cause an irritating delay, just when everything is ready for shooting.

In one particular instance, coming under the writer's notice, three men in evening dress, had to be told to powder their necks, of course they had no make up box handy, and as it is highly unprofessional to borrow anothers make up, they had to procure same from their dressing rooms, keeping over one hundred people waiting several minutes.

Many may consider, the delay was unnecessary. In some cases it might have been, but not in this one, as the three men were the chief guests of the host holding a reception in his palatial mansion.

A CORRECTION

On January 17th, an advertisement was inserted in that issue of the Camera, which was totally at variance with the facts and which I had no knodwledge of.

This is to correct any false impressions that may have been furthered by the advertisement of "The Stranger" a five reel photoplay produced by the Youngdeer Production Company of America, owned and controlled by Hugh B. Evans and Hugh B. Evans, Jr., who are releasing the picture through Mr. T. L. Tally at Tally's Broadway Theatre in February.

I personally wrote and directed the picture while a member of that firm, which is in no way connected with the Youngdeer Film Co.

Signed, JAMES YOUNGDEER.

This is to correct an announcement that appeared in the January 17th number of this paper.

The Youngdeer Film Co., does not own and has not in any way been connected with the production of "THE STRANGER"

This five reel photoplay was produced by the Youngdeer Production Company of America which is owned and controlled by Hugh B. Evans and Hugh B. Evans, Jr., who will release this production through Mr. T. L. Tally of Los Angeles at Tally's Broadway Theatre in February.

At the time Mr. Youngdeer was ossociated with the Youndeer Production Company of America, he wrote and directed "The Stranger" but other than that he has no connection with the production.

The Photoplayers' Equity Association, 4518 Hollywood Boulevard, now entering upon its third year with a membership of 700 professional players, is conducting a campaign of education as to its aims. Camera! has been made the official organ of the Association.

This Association, which is a co-operative, non-profit organization, supplies high-class extra talent to a long list of studios. Each and every individual sent out is perfectly capable, so far as past records are concerned, of doing or performing what is required, thereby saving producers' temper and time. Before a player can become a member he must show a complete record of his work and produce written recommendations.

The Association is now prepared even to furnish entire casts of nationally advertised players of exceptional ability, down to the necessary "atmosphere."

To please the producer and co-operate with him in the interest of making better pictures is the Equity's motto.

The question of salaries to be paid is left to the producers.

No commission is charged the player. Service to the studio is free. The Association derives its necessary revenue from small monthly dues paid by members.

The Photoplayers' Equity Association is not affiliated with any movement seeking to monopolize the employment business.

Forty different studios are now making regular use of the Association's placement bureau. Ruby H. Hill, business manager, and her assistant Edward Thomas, report having filled orders for 5000 "atmospheres" bits, parts and leads during the past four months. A large number of players have recently been supplied for great productions featuring Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Ruth Roland and others.

Adelbert Bartlett has been appointed publicity man for the Association.

16 TO THE SECOND
By C. J. BARBER

Cameramen, assistants and laboratory workers are cordially invited to make use of this department. It's your personal part of Camera! All questions will be fully and practically answered. Address questions to C. J. Barber, care Camera, 326½ South Broadway.

W. A. R. asks the use of 40, 50 and 75 M. M. lenses and stops F. 3.5, F. 4. and F. 5.6.

Answer: The longer the focus of a lense the larger the image will be of a given object, from the same viewpoint. Example: A 50 M. M. lense giving an image one-half inch high of an object; the object and distance being the same, a 75 M. M. lense will give an image three-fourths of an inch high. In general the longer the focus of a lense the better the "drawing" or perspective will be of the view. Using the same stop a long focus lense gives less depth of sharp-focus field. The shorter the focus the more spacious a small set will look, and a wider angle of view will be included. The stop used governs the amount of light passing through the lense and the depth of the sharp-focus field. The smaller the stop used the more the far and near objects will be in sharp-focus. Stops numbered F. 3.5, F. 4., F. 5.6, F. 8., F. 11., F. 16, double the exposure for each stop passed from F. 3.5. Example: 1/32 of one second at F. 4. takes 1/16 second at F. 5.6 or 1/64 second at F. 3.5.

Exposure Table

Degree of Shutter Opening	Frames per Second 16	14	12	10	8
45	128	112	96	80	64
50	113	100	86	72	57
55	102	92	78	65	51
60	96	84	72	60	48
65	88	77	66	55	44
70	82	70	61	51	41
75	76	67	57	48	38
80	72	63	54	45	36
85	67	59	50	42	34
90	64	56	48	40	32
95	60	53	45	38	30
100	57	50	43	36	29
105	54	48	41	34	27
110	52	45	39	32	26
115	50	43	37	31	25
120	48	42	36	30	24
130	44	39	33	27	22
140	41	36	30	25	20
150	38	33	28	24	19
160	36	31	27	22	18
170	34	29	25	21	17
180	32	28	24	20	16

Example: Cranking 14 frames per second with 90 degree shutter gives 1/56 second exposure. Example: To get 1/32 exposure cranking 12 frames per second. 1/33 is closest number in 12 frame column which gives 130 degree shutter opening.

This table will answer numerous queries of exposure with various shutter openings and cranking speeds.

NOTE: Accumulated questions will be answered as soon as space permits.

Lillian Rich, who appeared in such features as "The Pointing Finger" and "The Day She Paid," has been engaged to appear in Al Santell's forthcoming comedy feature, work on which will start at Universal City within the next few days.

LESSER TO HANDLE BEBAN'S FEATURE

Announcement comes from Sol Lesser that the first Beban screen production to be filmed by Mr. Beban's own individual producing organization, "One Man in a Million," is going to establish a high water mark in its popular appeal to each and every audience. When George Beban first showed Mr. Lesser his story of "One Man in a Million," which incidentally was written by Mr. Beban, Lesser, who will distribute and exploit the play said:

"In all my years of experience in motion pictures, I never read a story more suitable as a dramatic narrative for the screen than the scenario for "One Man in a Million." It is an exquisite love story with a beautiful theme that at times seems to be really inspiring.

"In all confidence I can say that the women and children are going to love "One Man in a Million." There is a love triangle, but it is founded on ideal love. George Beban, Jr., (Bob White) and his great St. Bernard dog "Snookums," will score heavily with the children. The double romance with Mr. Beban, Helen Perome Eddy and Lloyd Whitlock and Irene Rich, will strike a new note in screen romances."

We Do Not Offer You RICHFIELD-CONSOLIDATED Oil Stock As a "SURE WINNER"—But We DO Recommend It As a Gilt-Edged Speculative INVESTMENT!

The Richfield-Yorba well, 1050-feet from our WESTERN boundry, according to R. J. Scott, president of that company, has drilled into from 100 to 150 feet of rich, live oil sand with some gas pressure at a depth of 2480 feet and the well will be "brought in" immediately. Officials of that company expect the well to be one of the biggest producers in the Richfield District.

The Union Oil Company well, 950-feet from our EASTERN boundary, according to that Company's latest report, is "rotating in shale at 2575 feet." The drilling crew on this well declares two "good" oil showings have been encountered to-date and that they "believe it is going to be a big oil well."

NOW IS THE TIME to buy RICHFIELD CONSOLIDATED stock—while it is selling at $1 a share, par value—as the bringing in of good producing wells on either the Union or Richfield-Yorba properties will result in our stock selling above par.

INVESTIGATE US

This Company invites Prospective purchasers of its stock to satisfy themselves by the most searching and rigid inquiry as to the standing, integrity and sound business judgment of its officers and directors, who are as follows:

ROBERT M. SHEARER, President; Capitalist and prominent business man of Los Angeles.

W. R. DICKINSON, Vice-President; President of the Dickinson Drug Company of Los Angeles, citrus grower and capitalist.

F. W. BLANCHARD, Treasurer; Los Angeles capitalist, and prominent in civic affairs.

J. M. HARLAN, Secretary; Capitalist, retired banker and citrus grower of Pasadena

MAJOR E. J. MARKS, Director; Former member of U. S. Army General Staff in Washington and prominent attorney of Fullerton.

Look them up in Bradstreet or Dun—or through your local banking connections.

CONSIDER THESE FACTS:

1. The RICHFIELD CONSOLIDATED Oil Company's 65.77 Acre Lease is the LARGEST and, we believe the most advantageously located lease held by an "independent" company in the Richfield District.

2. Our lease is about 7000 feet from the big Chapman gusher which has produced $1,500,000 worth of oil since its discovery TEN MONTHS ago, and LESS than 4000 feet from the Petroleum Midway and General Petroleum gushers. Our lease lies between these big gushers and the Standard Oil Company's producing wells.

3. The U. S. Geological Survey includes our lease tn the area which it has characterized as "oil bearing lands."

4. The "big" companies that base their operations on years of experience and expert geological advice, have paid big prices for leases ALL AROUND us and wells are now being put down on ALL FOUR SIDES of us.

5. Our lease today has a conservative valuation of $250,000.

6. The Richfield Gusher District and the Richfield Consolidated Company's lease is only 90 minutes auto ride from Los Angeles where you can investigate it thoroughly. You owe it to yourself to carefully investigate OURS or any other oil company in which you plan to invest.

7. MORE than 75,000 shares of RICHFIELD CONSOLIDATED stock already has been sold to residents of Orange county where our lease is located—to people living near the big Richfield gusher district and who know the splendid possibilities of our lease.

8. OFFICERS and DIRECTORS of our Company have subscribed for 100,000 Shares of Richfield Consolidated Stock. ALL stock is EQUALLY PROFIT-SHARING and there is no "Preferred Stock."

9. Our Capitalization and HALF MILLION DOLLARS in RESERVE, treasury stock permits extensive operations along SOUND business lines.

10. The location for our first well has been chosen, the derrick is now going up, we have contracted for complete drilling equipment and we will start actual drilling without loss of time.

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

HELEN HOLMES SERIAL

Gilbert . Hamilton, assisted by Director Frank E. Montgomery, has started "The Danger Trail," a serial starring Helen Holmes, at the Horsley Studio. Among the supporting cast will be found the following: Jack Mower, Bert Hadley, Jean Burr, DeWitt Crittenden, Omar T. Whitehead, Aoyama, Joe King, Geo. Morrell and J. Maginnis.

The Murrell Film Company has started work on a series of two-reel comedies, at the Balboa Studio. Vernon Hoagland and Maurice Spinak are co-directing. Mr. Hoagland, who is the author of many of the recent Larry Semon Productions, is writing all the stories for the company.

The William Russell Company recently completed the Fox feature, "Shod With Fire." Arthur Jackson, author of "Listen Lester," and "The Scandals of 1919," is now writing a comedy drama for Mr. Russell, work upon which will be commenced in about a week.

LESSER STARTS

Announcement comes from the Sol Lesser organization that Annette Kellerman will start producing her first story, by Bernard McConville, at the Brunton Studio soon.

Chet Franklin will direct her work, with Sam Landis at the camera.

"One Man in a Million," the George Beban production, is ready for the cutting room. Mr. Lesser will exploit and distribute the production.

COMING UP

From two hundred extra people employed at Lasky's during the filming of Everywoman, a young man was chosen to do a small bit. That young man was Byron Munson, and Byron Munson accomplished his first day in pictures. Just arrived from Chicago, full of pep and enthusiasm, the ordinary procedure above stimulated his determination for cinema success. Steady was his advancement. He makes his debut as a juvenile lead in "The Mask," Selig's latest special production.

Progression occasioned this story!

Bruno Becker, general manager of the Model Comedy Company, writes from New York that the Gale Henry comedies will no longer be handled by the Bull's Eye Film Corporation; that a new contract has been signed with one of the foremost distributing concerns for a series of six two-reelers a year. Miss Henry plans to immediately start the erection of a studio of her own, Riverside being mentioned as a probable location.

Maurice Tourneur has left Los Angeles with his company for Balboa, where a week will be spent in making seashore scenes for his forthcoming production of "The Pavilion on the Links," which he is adapting for the screen from the story of the same name by Robert Louis Stevenson.

Accompanying Mr. Tourneur are John C. Gilbert, Janis Wilson, J. Barney Sherry and Weslie Barrey, all of whom are cast in principal roles in his new picture.

The tall redwood forest around Santa Cruz, Calif., formed the setting for the big woods scene in "Jes' Call Me Jim," the new Goldwyn picture, starring Will Rogers. Little Jimmie Rogers, aged four, has a principal part in the picture. The picture is adapted from J. G. Holland's book, "Seven Oaks."

Melville W. Brown, until recently author and director of the Al St. John productions, is directing Montgomery and Rock at Vitagraph.

GLENDALE TO HAVE ART UNIT STUDIOS

Work will commence shortly on the Art Unit Studios, which have been organized for the purpose of supplying an unsatisfied demand on the part of picture producers for space, equipment, properties, etc.

The company holds deeds to, and options on more than forty-seven acres on the old Spencer Robinson lands at Glendale. The studios, which will be completed in less than six months, are to be comprised of ten units, each one a separate, complete studio which includes stages (70 ft. by 60 ft.), projection rooms, dressing rooms, offices and cutting rooms. The property rooms will feed directly into the studios, while a factory for the manufacture of necessary properties is to be one of the novel features.

GEORGE Mc DANIELS

Quits acting to become production manager for new picture Co.

Leon Spinak, the art director, announces that a complete technical force will be provided. He further assures us that the studios' working corps is to be the ablest procurable. Mr. Spinak is himself a graduate of l'Ecole des Beaux Arts de Paris, and a former member of the art staff of Gorer and Sons, London. The past six years he has given concentratedly to picture work, having been associated with both Thomas H. Ince and Robert Brunton.

George McDaniel, who is production manager, is well known both to the screen and stage as an exceptional actor and director.

AT THE U.

Work has begun at Universal City on "The Girl in the Mirror," adapted from Elizabeth Jordan's novel of that name. Jack Ford is directing the production and Frank Mayo is the star. The supporting cast includes Claire Anderson, Elinor Fair, Harry Hilliard, Ray Ripley, Robert Bolder, Arthur Hoyt and Bull Montana.

Harry Franklin is filming the opening scenes of "The Daring Duchess," a comedy-drama written especially for Edith Roberts. The support includes Kathleen Kirkham, Harold Miller, Rudolph Christians, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Leonard Clapham, Leota Lorraine, Virginia Ware, Ogden Crane and Hugh Saxon.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are assembling a cast to support them in their first five-reel comedy under their new contract with Universal. General Manager Tarkington Baker announces that Edgar Franklin's magazine story, "Everything But the Truth," will be their first vehicle. The two leading ladies engaged for this feature are Anne Cornwall and Katherine Lewis.

Seven producing units will commence work at the studios of the National Film Corporation of America in about a week, according to I. Bernstein, production manager.

The stars who will head the various productions are Francis McDonald, Jack Hoxie, Flanagan and Edwards, Neal Burns, Polly Moran, "Smiling Bill" Jones, and Grace Cunard.

The Owen Moore Production Company has started with Wesley Ruggles handling the megaphone. Supporting Mr. Moore in his cast are Gloria Hope, Henry Miller, Jr., Mr. Charles Arling, Arthur Hoyt and Mr. Emmett King.

Mr. Irving, who is directing "Children of Destiny" for the Lawrence Weber Productions, announces the picture near completion. His next production will be "Just Outside the Door."

Wallace Reid's company, with Sam Wood as director, has been working on the interior scenes for "Sick Abed," a new Paramount-Artcraft comedy-drama from the well known play, the scenario for which is by Clara Kennedy. On Sunday the entire company will leave for a point east of San Diego where some exterior shots will be made. Bebe Daniels is Mr. Reid's lead in the picture.

Ethel Clayton begins work next week under the direction of Tom Forman in "The Ladder," scenario for which is by Edith Kennedy. No facts are as yet obtainable as to the nature of the photoplay nor the cast thereof.

"The Round-Up" Company, with Roscoe Arbuckle as the star, returns Saturday from the Sierras and the desert where exterior scenes have been made, and will complete the picture with a number of important interior scenes at the studio. This is a George Melford Production for Paramount-Artcraft, and is Roscoe Arbuckle's entry into the legitimate. The scenario was written by Tom Forman, who also plays the juvenile leau.

Cecil B. de Mille is at work on an important Paramount-Artcraft Special which is to follow "Why Change Your Wife?" The story is as yet untitled.

Bryant Washburn starts work this week on "The Sins of St. Anthony," a Saturday Evening Post story, by Charles Collins. James Cruze is handling the megaphone.

Work has been started on the 13th episode of the new Ben Wilson serial, "The Screaming Shadow," and Mr. Wilson expects to finish the serial in about three weeks.

"The Hall Room Boys' Specials," is to be one of the three units at work under the supervision of Harry Cohen, who, assisted by his brother, Jack, has been producing the Hall Room Boys Comedies. Henry Bergman will be director general for the company, with Al Nathan as studio manager.

LOOKING FORWARD

With the advent of 1920 a general size up of conditions confronting the Motion Picture Industry is in order. Great have been the achievements of the past. In the future they must be infinitely more great.

And now from Hollywood, the center of Filmland's domesticity, comes a more than interesting report. The Board of Trade officially informs us of its hearty co-operation in all matters vital to Picturedom. In fact, rumor ha sit that a representative of the industry is almost certain to be elected to that organization in an attempt to further the desired unity. With the comprehension of the foregoing, there come a realization that this cannot help but accomplish more general satisfaction than has heretofore been possible, both politically and commercially.

Never before has Hollywood been faced with anything like the population problem which is now requiring the constant consideration of all municipal thinkers. As a result, the realty interests have assumed astounding proportions. Banks, office building and private dwellings are being erected with all possible speed, since any sort of rental is in this district today, an impossibility. Right in line with this comes the announcement that work will soon be commenced on three new Hollywood studios, two of which will rank among the largest in the world .

Think what this all means to the local picture man; the business man. The case stated simply is this: taking into consideration the enormous amount of wealth, and the added thousands in population which are no wours, we, the united people of Hollywood, allowing for the proper treatment of conditions, can have in the future what we desire for our community. Let's make it a constructive year. A year which will spell general satisfaction for everyone, as a result cooperative interest.

TITLELESS FILMS?

Report has it that some day in the not too far future, the untitled photoplay will make its debut. Surely and rapidly the education of the public has been achieved.

It has occurred to us that in view of the overdone sub-title effects constantly presented by some well-known production companies, this will not only be a vast relief to the public, but an artistic improvement as well. Consider for a moment the actual harm often done to a picture by the disgusting attempts of "would be" humorists. Having invaded some studio payroll does not grant any such privilege. Moreover, the fans are expressing a growing dissatisfaction as regards this point, and when it comes to a final showdown it is Mr. Fan who counts! Public desires cannot be sacrificed!

So until the picture play has reached a stage of development which makes the institution of titling practically unnecessary, we believe it would be more than advisable for such companies as have overindulged on this score, to subdue the "funny ones" sufficiently to render paralyzed characterizations, and anticipated action, an impossibility.

CLEMENCEAU'S NOVEL "THE STRONGEST"

Fox Film Corporation has secured from Premier Georges Clemenceau, the screen rights to the only novel that the great statesman ever wrote. "The Strongest," as he named the novel, will be released early in the new year. Premier Clemenceau wrote the screen adaption of his novel, which is being made under the direction of R. A. Walsh, who directed "The Honor System," "Evangeline" and "Should a Husband Forgive?" "The Strongest" is in no sense a war story.. It is a story of life today, with strong human appeal and deep emotion.

For a long time Premier Clemenceau would not listen to suggestions that a drama be made from his novel, nor would he consider the sale of the screen rights. When he signed the contract, the great Frenchman insisted that the screen version of "The Strongest" be made by himself. Having signed the agreement the "Tiger of France said:

"The cinema is the simplest method of appealing direct to the hearts of the mases. The cinema carries its message without words. It appeals directly to the imagination, and it is from the imagination that great thoughts, great hopes, great deeds are born."

CECIL HOLLAND'S MAKEUP SECRETS TO BE DISCLOSED

Commencing the February 7th edition, Camera! will publish a series of articles on makeup, by Cecil Holland.

They will be not only suggestions on straight makeup for both men and women, but will cover an explanation of the technique involved in the accomplishment of unusual effects. These last will include the questions of crepe hair, putty, foreign characters, etc. The fourthcoming articles have been fully endorsed by the authorities of the profession, and are for the benefit of the best of us, as well as for amateurs.

Mr. Holland, who is a progressive member of the old school, first drew attention to his remarkable originations in character makeup, while with Selig several years ago. Since then, his achievements have been the talk of the profession. He has spent unlimited time in concentrated experimentation along this line, and his offering will contain condensedly, the results of this effort.

GREEK ART TAUGHT IN PICTURES

By Jerome Lachenbruch

"Open your 'Myers' to page 14," said the high school teacher of History—1 to her class of forty shining-faced boys. A clatter of books and a flusher of turing pages folowed her remark.

"Gee, but this is dead stuff," muttered Bill O'Connor, under his breath, to Benny Davis, "Wish they'd give us somethin' alive once in a while."

"To the left of the page near the top," the instructor's voice broke in, "you will find a picture of the Athenian Acropolis." There followed a long dissertation on Greek life, manners, games and ideals, interesting, perhaps, to the instructor, but unbearably boring to the students. This daily repeated pedagogic stupidity in the public schools of today, with its healthy responce of indifference onthe part of the pupils, is a certain indication that the past, as a thing that is dead, can never be resuscitated by a dead method. True, some students have sucient imagination to overcome ven the best efforts of history instructors to keep buried whatever latent enthusiasm for an appreciation of Greek culture they may possess. But these few develop despite their instructors.

There is hope, however, that the dead past may be revivified through the modern miracle of the motion picture. Heretofore, the masterpieces of literature have been given praphic representation on the screen, but the educational field for the photoplay has been barely scratched. Many of the subject that are now the prey of the text book alone can belifted from their stygian dullness and made to disclose a living application to the problems of a newer generation. History is one of those subjects which, instead of being treated as an inquiry into the facts of the past, has been presented as the opinions of various "historians" built on the prejudices of their predecessors. To such means of instruction, the motion picture offers a corrective. In a tentative way, this has been attempted by the Goldwyn-Bray pictograph through the medum of Mr. Paul Swan, painter, sculptor, student and classic dancer.

To bring both history and art to the children in our public schools, the motion picture has untold possibilities, for ideas of motion and drama fill their fresh imaginations. And so, the influence of the photoplay, when it has a tale of history or of art to unfold, is immeasurable. What spark of fancy it may kindle in the mind of some adolescent youth, what vision of beauty, what understanding of contemporaneous life, we may only conjecture. But we may be sure of the method, for photoplays through which our students may associate the subjects of their curriculum with a living past, enhances its value by investing it with a new meaning.

COLORED PHOTOGRAPHY IN CURRENT PICTOGRAPH

Colored photography will be introduced for the first time in the Goldwyn-Bray Pictograph in the issue to be distributed through the Goldwyn exchanges, January 18. A considerable part of the leading subject, "Behind the Signs on Broadway" is done in colors, the remainder being in black and white and introducing Bray's celebrated animated drawings to explain the technical points of the subject. Other numbers in this issue, are "Pup Portraits" and one of the Bray-International Krazy Kat cartoons, entitled "Krazy Kat in the Great Cheese Robbery."

"Behind the Signs on Broadway," besides having a high entertainment value, will be of particular interest to those who are concerned in the study of ingenious mechanical devices. "Pup Portraits," the second subject in this issue, is a distinct novelty both in conception and execution. Here again, the animated drawings are used to good purpose in carrying out the idea. Dogs of various species were selected to pose for the camera, and after they had been "shot" in different positions, the Bray artist, with a keen sense of character expression, proceeded to show how in many instances they resemble human beings.

"Krazy Kat in the Great Cheese Robbery," is one of the most laughable of the Bray-International cartoons thus far selected for release.

AT THE WOMAN'S CLUB

The Saturday evening dances at the Hollywood Woman's Club under the direction of Jimmie Mitchell, also continue to grow in popularity. Among the photoplayers in attendance lately have been; Florence Gilbert, James Wilson, Frances McDonlad, Jack Olivo, Paco, and Tom Frazier.

The dances, which occur every Saturday evening, are open to the public and are semi-annual in nature.

EXHIBITORS' SERVICE PAGE

CONCERNING CURRENT PRODUCTIONS

Camera! wishes to announce to the exhibitor that it takes upon itself the responsibility of informing him about productions now under way, which are incurring special effort and unusual expense in an effort to accomplish extraordinary results.

On the other hand, Camera! will, in so far as it is able, be equally frank concerning those producing companies who are skimping their production with petty economics which cannot help being obvious in the finished picture.

This is strictly for the benefit of the exhibitor in an attempt to assist him ascertain the actual worth of current productions, through a more reliable channel than that of paid advertising.

A HUNCH ON "THE PRINCE CHAP"

"The Prince Chap," a story of artist life in London, by Edward Peple, is being filmed at the Lasky studio under the direction of William de Mille. Moreover, the picture is being produced with true de Mille regard for detail.

The title role, which is played by Thomas Meighan, is that of a sculptor. The theme of the story is symbolized by four figures; the various works of the artist.

In order to accomplish this important feature of the story, Carleton Gardelle, the well known sculptor, has been engaged to produce the figures necessary. Mr. Gardelle is personally acquainted with studio life abroad. Consequently, he has been of inestimable service as a general authority on details. In fact, the principle studio "set" of the picture is very nearly an exact duplicate of the quarters occupied by him when in Europe a few years ago.

In modeling the figures for the picture, Mr. Gardelle employs his daughter, Miss Yvonne Gardelle, as his subject. Then with due regard for consistency, Miss Gardelle plays the model in the picture. This little lady will be remembered for her work opposite Theodore Kosloff in the prologue of "The Tree of Knowledge," also a William de Mille production.

The Gardelles are carrying on their novel work in the last "old studio" building on the Lasky premises. The combination of the very recent addition to, and the relic of Lasky achievement is more than significant. We congratulate Mr. de Mille!

PROPOSED LEGISLATION AGAINST BANDIT PRODUCTIONS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 29.—A bill has been introduced in Congress by Congressman J. W. Harreld of Oklahoma, which prohibits the running of films featuring the work of former bandits, outlaws, etc. Penalties of $10,000 and five years' imprisonment are provided in the proposed act for the interstate transportation, or the showing of any such pictures.

RAINBOW ISLE SOON TO BE RELEASED

"Rainbow Isle," the picture which was being made by D. W. Griffith when his party was reported having been lost at sea, is to be released sometime in February.

It is Mr. Griffith's second production for the First National Exhibitor's Circuit.

FROM THE HEART OF PRODUCTION

CONCERNING OUR NATIONAL "SERVICE

When a man has devoted a few years to the active work of managing a small town show, and in that work has become intimate with every detail from the exhibitor's angle, and when the same man has had a few years experience working for the various producers, he cannot fail to be impressed with the fact that a great, practical benefit would be rendered the exhibitor were some one to supply him with a service consisting of unbiased and concise "notes on production."

Of course, every mail brings the ordinary exhibitor a flood of publicity matter, but experience has taught him that highly colored and adroitly worded circulars do not necessarily mean a money getting picture. Unprejudiced reports on current productions are to him an unknown quantity. If he were to secure a neutral service that could be relied upon, there is no question but that it would be invaluable.

Such service can be given. What is more, Camera! is prepared to act as agent in this issue!

It is only logical that the foregoing emanate from Los Angeles, the heart of the film production industry, and since Camera! is Los Angeles' representative trade paper its responsibility in this matter is evident.

Camera! will provide the exhibitors of the United States with brief notes and comments on all the producing companies and their current productions. Those who avail themselves of this opportunity will anticipate the usual channels of such knowledge by several weeks. The advantage of such information is obvious. Included in this weekly service there will be the opinions of expert critics, and that most expert critic of all—the local gossip of the studios.

The price of one paid admission to your show, Mr. Exhibitor, procures the above for one month. Can you afford to miss this opportunity?

CONVENTION AT OKLAHOMA CITY

The Theater Owners' and Managers ' Association of Oklahoma will hold their annual convention February 3 and 4 in Oklahoma City. The Lee Huckins Hotel will be the headquarters ot the convention, which is expected to be the largest gathering of its kind ever held in the state.

THE EVIL OF PARTISANSHIP

This is Presidencial year! Campaign managers, in view of the value of cinema propaganda as demonstrated by the war, will naturally turn filmward in their efforts.

We feel that, although it may seem natural for exhibitors to show partisanship, it is vitaly important that any such tendencies be curbed. The motion picture is Everyone's source of entertainment. Consequently, it cannot be anything less general than a free agent if its broad position is to be maintained. Remember, Mr. Exhibitor, if the public becomes impressed with the fact that the motion picture has grown to be a means of furthering political prejudice, and believe us cerdulity is not one of the traits of the present day film fan, the first person hit will be yourself. Let's resist the human impulse to force our opinion upon our neighbor, thereby playing safe for the entire industry!

AL JENNINGS TO FIGHT THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION ON BANDIT PRODUCTIONS

Al Jennings, now filming in the Hollywood hills, one of the episodes of his career as a train bandit, is preparing to go to Washington to fight the efforts of Oklahoma legislators to have Congress enact a law banning "bandit life" movies. Jennings will ask permission to speak before the Senate Committee considering the proposed bills.

POLLYANNA RELEASED JANUARY 18TH

"Pollyanna," Mary Pickford's first production for the "Big Four," opened in the largest cities of the country January 18. The bookings for the picture are extraordinary. This is probably due to the unusual effort expended in an attempt to make Miss Pickford's first release under the new regime, her greatest production. The 100,000 feet of film shot were cut into six reels. Three months were required to accomplish the picture's completion.

AMSTERDAM TO HOLD INTERNATIONAL MOVING PICTURE EXPOSITION

It has been reported that a committee has been formed in Holland, for the purpose of arranging an International Moving Picture Exposition to be held in Amsterdam in the near future.

Mr. Joh. Gildemeyer, well known European picture circles, is the chairman of this committee. The exposition will attempt to cover the moving picture industry in all its phases.

CENSORSHIP DISCUSSION AT ALBANY

The committee of New York State Mayors which will meetin Albany on February 2, will again consider the need of further censorship. This is the second meeting of the committee in regard to this much discussed issue. The general opinion is that the decision will be against further action. The conference will offer suggestions concerning the subject, when it makes its report on the outcome, to the Legislature.

SURPRISE

A very pleasing effect in the story is the introduction of many twists and turns which are totally unexpected by the reader or audience. These must be logical however. Every surprise that appears is a climax in itself. Any story is a failure, in which the end can be foretold before the plot unfolds itself. Following are suggestions for some of the various twists which may be given the story:

(1) In which any character in the story appears in disguise.

(2) In which the identity of a character is mistaken.

(3) Wherein what appears to be misfortune, develops to be the opposite.

(4) Where some character makes an unexpected sacrifice.

(5) Where apparent triumph for the villian turns to disaster..

(6) Where what appears to be a crime turns out to be a misunderstanding.

(7) Where tragic events are shown to be only a dream or the operation of a disordered mind.

(8) Where a long lost loved one appears unexpectedly.

(9) Where the positions of the hero and villian are unexpectedly reversed.

(10) Where a person who has made a sacrifice of himself, for another is unexpectedly delivered.

(11) Discovery of a mistake or misrepresentation in the parentage of a character.

(12) Discovery that a supposedly dead person is alive.

(13) Discovery that a supposedly absent person is present.

(14) Unexpectedly deliverance of a person whose doom apepars to have been sealed.

(15) The appearance of any unexpected obstacle to the consumation of a plan.

(16) Discovery that any situation, character or object is not what it seems.

It would be good practise for the student to select some story he, or she has written and analyze it with this list. See how many twists you have in it—and how many more may be logically added.

SELECTION OF A THEME

A very important factor to be considered before the story is begun, is the selection of a theme. There are some themes that are always good. Some depend for their popularity, on their timeliness, or the existing public frame of mind. There are others that are at all times undesirable, if not absolutely to be avoided.

Self-sacrifice, loyalty, faith, reward of merit and love are at all times desirable. Among those which should be avoided are: The race question, or a story which tends to arouse antagonism between the races; Class hatred, or those which set capital against labor, etc; those which cast any reflection on a religious belief and those dealing with sex problem plays, criminal love and so forth. It is the opinion of the writer that there are entirely too many picture plays being produced now, which feature the gun man, the vampire woman and outlawry in general. In this day and time we send such characters to jail with very little ceremony while at the same time we see them immortalized on the screen and held up as models of heroism for our rising geenration.

The treatment of any theme requires the delicate exercise of good judgment. While remaining impassively impersonal, himself, the author conveys powerful personalities to the characters whom he creates. He should therefore remain always, on the side of justice, decency and good fellowship. Embodied in him should be the figure of justice that shows no mercy to the wrong-doer. His sympathies should always be with that which is pure, noble and good. It is not necessary however, for him, or her, to go to the extreme of being a prude or preacher. His work should inspire better things rather than attempt to teach them.

AN APPROPRIATE TITLE

The public gets it's first impression of the story from the name which has been given it. The title will either arouse interest and excite curiosity, or it will condemn the story.

A title which will give the story away should never be used. Let us give a few bad titles of this kind to well known picture plays, as a means of illustration. Suppose we substituted for Griffith's "Broken Blossoms" the title "The Tragedy of An Oriental Love." Here we have a title that is too long and one which "tips" the story. If the audience knows that the love of the chink for the little ragamuffin girl is going to result in a tragedy, it will lose a certain amount of interest, for the tragedy which they know is to come, will obscure every other feature of the story. Such a title would make a good newspaper headline perhaps.

Titles should suggest just enough of the story to make the public want to know more. They should always be short, too, and of such a nature that the producer can make a play on them in his advertising. After you have selected what you think is a good title, try to visualize it in an illustration on the bill-boards. Now ask yourself these questions? Does it arouse interest and excite curiosity? Does it give too much of the story away? If it is for a drama, does it sound dramatic—or for a comedy, does it suggest something laughable?

"The Code of the Yukon" is a dramatic title because it at once suggests the style of honor among sturdy pioneers in a country where legal technicalities are unknown, where human existance is reduced to it's primitive state and where right is might, because men there judge one another for what they really are: If we knew nothing more about the story, our interest would be aroused because we have been told just enough to make us want to see how the code of the Yukon may have been a factor in the story.

"The Flame of the Desert" is another good one, for it suggests burning sands, suffering and sacrifice and perhaps some kind of a supreme test of human beings which we know must be interesting and dramatic. When we see on the billboards the picture of a beautiful woman, unconscious and being lifted tenderly from the baking waste of sand by a handsome hero in a picturesque garb, along with such a title, our interest is stimulated more than ever. I might say that I have not seen the picture and know nothing whatever about the story.

There are other titles which are oood because they suggest a subject which is vital and fraught with great importance at the time. An example would be "The Slacker," "Exempted," "The Beast of Berlin." They were good during the war, but of no value at this time. I have not seen a story entitled "The Scab" announced yet. During these times of industrial unrest, strikes and soforth, it would seem that it would be a dandy.

offers a great opportunity to those who have ideas. The supply of good stories is not keeping pace with the demand and is to the outside writer that the producers must look for new material. Our treatise "Ten Million Photoplay Plots," written by Wycliffe A. Hill, author of "Scientific Plot Building" in Camera!, offers you complete and detailed instructions in photoplay writing. Read what those who know have to say about it.
"Would be helpful to anyone who wants to learn the technique of writing for the screen," Douglas Fairbanks Studio.
"Probably the best treatise on dramatic plot construction, as applied to the photoplay, that has ever been written."—Federal Photoplays.
"It fills a long-felt want."—Film Fun Magazine.

16 TO THE SECOND

By C. J. BARBER

Cameramen, assistants and laboratory workers are cordially invited to make use of this department. It's your personal part of Camera! All questions will be fully and practically answered. Address questions to C. J. Barber, care Camera, 326½ South Broadway.

L. C. asks for a developer that will keep down stress and abrasion marks on glossy stills.

Answer: Either of the two following developers will remove the fault:

Metal	195 gr.
Hydroquinone	1 oz. 5 dr.
Sodium Sulphite (anh.)	6 oz.
Sodium Carbonate (anh.)	10 oz.
Potassium iodide	260 gr.
Potassium Bromide	10% Q. S.
Water	(1 gal.) 128 oz.

To use: Stock 1 oz., water 1 oz.

Metal	90 gr.
Sulphite Soda	62½ oz.
Hydroquinone	6½ dr.
Carbonate Soda	5 oz.
Potassium Bromide	100 gr.
Red Prussiate Potash	30 gr.
Oxalic Acid	30 gr.
Potassium Iodide	30 gr.

Mix in order given.

To use: Stock 1 oz., water 1 oz.

L. L. asks about the strength and uses of different alkalies in various developers.

The amount of Caustic Soda given the best results with 60 grs. of each of the following developers is:

Pyro	59 gr.
Hydroquinone	44 gr.
Paramiidophenol	17 gr.
Metol	14½ gr.

To use other alkalies multiply by the following factors: Sodium Carbonate (anh.), 16; Potassium Carbonate, 10; Caustic Potash, 1.4.

The Caustics should not be used with Pyro or Metol. See answer to F. 3.5 in November 8th issue.

S. R. says he has considerable trouble with his matts not matching correctly when using different lenses at various F stops on double exposure work.

Answer: There are various ways to avoid this. I would like to hear from some of the boys who have overcome this difficulty. Names will be published with answers if desired. Mail your answer in now.

WITH HAMPTON NOW

Wycliffe Hill, the well-known scenario writer has joined Benjamin B. Hampton's scenario staff, which consists besides himself of W. H. Clifford and Jay Brien Chapman. Mr. Hill, formerly a magazine editor, is the author of "Mother, I Need You," "The Wrath of the Almighty," a number of other photoplays and "Ten Million Photoplay Plots," which is considered one of the best and most modern textbooks on photoplay writing.

Mr. Hampton's scenario staff, engaged in photodramatizing the novels of Zane Grey, Stewart Edward White, Emerson Hough, William Allen White, Harry Leon Wilson and a number of other famous writers, uses an entirely new form of "continuity" or "scene version" in preparing the works for big special pictures. This style, which is said to be peculiarly adapted to the filming of novels, uses long sequences, a continuously rising action and much character drawing, in which the authors themselves aid the continuity writers. Mr. Hampton himself invented and worked out the new method, which was applied with great success to Zane Grey's "Desert Gold" and Stewart Edward White's "The Westerners," pictures which have been enormously popular with the public. Special film-cutting and film-assembling is also required.

A Word to the Wise

CRITERION FEATURE PHOTOPLAY INC

The policy of the Criterion Co., Inc., is based upon the following sound, conservative business principles.

A staff of the most highly efficient technical men available. Only those who have demonstrated their ability, by making a success of the various departments with which they have been associated in other producing companies, are affiliated with us.

We have entered the field, for the purpose of producing only the very best in straight high class comedy and comedy-drama, avoiding the heavy expense of the big or spectacular productions.

Fully appreciating the value of advertising, it is our policy to enter upon a nation wide campaign of publicity upon the commencement of our first production.

We are incorporated under the laws of the State of California Corporate No. 90255. License No. 5809.

Our stock is to be offered at one dollar a share in blocks of one hundred or more.

If you are interested in a first class investment that is bound to be a winner, call on us, and we will be pleased to explain our proposition.

A few dollars wisely invested may mean a fortune, it costs nothing to investigate.

PALMER·PHOTOPLAY·CORPORATION

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Instruction in Photoplay Writing

HE richest market in the world today for original story material is the photoplay market. Producers are scouring the country far and wide for story ideas that can be successfully made into moving pictures. Acceptable stories readily command $100 to $2000. One Palmer student sold his first play for $3000. Others have received from $350 to $1000 for their stories. Still others have obtained lucrative staff scenario positions and are now working in Los Angeles studios. The Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing enables the student to master photoplay fundamentals through correspondence instruction without loss of time or present position.

The Advisory Council

Directing the educational policy of the institution is an Advisory Council comprising CECIL B. DeMILLE, Director General of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp.; THOMAS H. INCE, Head of the Ince Studios; LOIS WEBER, Producer, Director and Author, and ROB WAGNER, Special Contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and Screen Authority.

The Sales Service

The Photoplay Sales Department serves as a connecting link between the writer and the buyers of stories. Material accepted for marketing is handled strictly on a commission basis. Writers are invited to investigate the unusual features of this service, which include registration, editing and personal representation at the studios. This department is headed by Kate Corbaley, well-known photoplaywright, and author. Affiliated with the bureau are Bess Meredyth and Anne Scott, comprising the Bess Meredyth Exchange.

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Will You Help Starving Armenia!

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S QUOTA
IS $1,000,000.00 IN THE

NEAR EAST RELIEF

CAMPAIGN FEBRUARY 1 TO 22

Will YOU Give!

This is What Your Giving Means in Armenia!

There are 150,000 little children dying of starvation, over there, TODAY!

They wander, in a hopeless search for shelter and care, over the deserts of the Near East!

They drop, DYING OF EXHAUSTION, in the gutters of Armenian cities that were once their homes—before the Turks tortured their fathers to death, drove their mothers into the wilderness to starve, and stole their lovely sisters for the harems!

These BABIES DIE BY SCORES EVERY DAY in Armenia and the other countries of the Near East!

All they ask is—bread and a chance!

Will YOU help give these little ones enough bread to keep the breath of life in their emaciated bodies?

Will YOU give enough money to the Near East Relief so that its workers in those faraway lands will be able to bestow care and kindness on these love-starved orphans—and perhaps bring a faint flush of hope and happiness into wan baby faces—perhaps dry the tears of desperate despair in the eyes of children who, by divine right, should never have tasted the ashes of sorrows, should never have known any thing but laughter and happiness and a mother's love!

An Armenian Mother's Song

I was a mother and I weep;
The night is come—the day is sped—
The night of woe profound for, oh,
My little golden son is dead!

The pretty rose that bloomed anon
Upon my mother's breast they stole;
They let the dove I nursed with love
Fly far away—so sped my soul!

I was a mother, and I weep;
I seek the rose where nestleth none—
No more is heard the singing bird—
I have no little golden son!

So fall the shadows over me,
The blighted garden, lonely nest;
Reach down in love, O God above!
And fold my darling to Thy breast."

—Eugene Field.

They are but children—yet they taste the ashes of sorrow and they starve for bread.

To the mother the personal agony of starvation has become nothing—the torture of her soul is the sight of her little ones dying—too slowly dying—from want, while she is too weak even to clutch them to her breast for warmth!

These are but three of MILLIONS who suffer similar fates in the Near East today!

The NEAR EAST RELIEF Campaign Is on NOW!

Don't wait to be asked to give to this campaign upon which depend the lives of millions of people. Give now—and give generously—and then make your friends all give.

Don't forget, when you write your check, that in one hospital alone in Armenia there are several hundred little children whose hands were cut off by the Turks. That's only one item against the Turks who must be crushed by the

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

PHOTOPLAYERS' EQUITY

The regular monthly meeting of the Photoplayers' Equity Association took place Thursday evening, February 5th. Besides the regular business attended to, the association was addressed by the Reverend Neal Dodd, founder of the Motion Picture People's Church.

Later a report very gratifying to the organization was delivered by Manager Bartlett.

TO GO TO CUBA

The Pauline Frederick Company expects to leave in about a week for Havana, Cuba, where scenes will be taken for "Roads of Destiny," the O. H. Henry story now being filmed. A boat has been chartered to carry the company across the Gulf.

VITAGRAPH TO EXTEND HOLDINGS

It has just been announced that the Probate Court has approved the bid of the Vitagraph Company for 10 acres of the Skinner estate immediately adjoining the company's studio on the east. The transfer is to be effected at once. The acquisition of these 10 acres doubles the Vitagraph property in Hollywood.

The purchase will be used as a site for several permanent brick and concrete "sets," the largest of which will be a duplicate of a metropolitan street, one block long. Construction will be started soon.

SNOW SPOILS LOCATIONS AT TRUCKEE

Warm weather around Truckee and Donner Lake has ruined the chance for snow scenes at the present time, and forced the return of producing companies on location there. Among these is Director Smith of the Vitagraph who will film interiors at the studio until the location and property men in charge of equipment in the mountains wire that snow again covers that section.

START NEW METRO STUDIO AT ONCE

Construction of a third stage building will begin Monday at the Metro studio. The stage will be 90 by 150 feet with 20-foot wings on each side, and will duplicate in dimensions the largest of the present structures. Executive offices to house increased forces in every department will also be built.

Six companies, headed by May Allison, Viola Dana, Bert Lytell, Emma Dunn, Alice Lake and an all-star cast are now working at the studio. Nazimova and Mitchell Lewis will start Monday. The additional companies are not announced.

The King W. Vidor Company is working along the Sacramento River this week using one of the steamboats for the taking of scenes in "The Family Honor."

"Children of Destiny" is to be the first of the series of twelve Edith Hallor productions being made by the Weber Productions.

"The Gift Supreme" will soon be released through Republic. It is a C. R. McCauley Photoplays presentation with an all-star cast. O. L. Sellers directed the picture.

The next Mary Roberts Rhinehart story selected for production at the Goldwyn studio is "Empire Builders." Cullen Landis will play the boy's part. The remainder of the cast has not been selected.

Work has commenced at the Brunton studios on Kerrigan's latest production, "The Green Flame." Fritzi Brunette will play opposite the star, and Ernest C. Warde will direct. Jack Cunningham is author of the screen adaptation.

PRODUCERS ARRIVE IN LOS ANGELES

Samuel Goldwyn will arrive in Los Angeles next week. The visit of the President of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to the West Coast studio is bound to set the motion picture world speculating. This is his first journey to the Studio since the Duponts and the Chase banking interests became financially interested in the organization, and since Edward Wise, President of the United Cigar Stores, became a member of the Board of Directors.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

In "Two Weeks" at Tally's Broadway

In addition to Mr. Goldwyn, Los Angeles is at present entertaining Marcus Loew, Carl Laemmle, and David Horsley. Their presence is more than significant! Right in line with this comes the announcement that Oliver Morosco is planning to re-enter the field as a picture maker. Translated, this means the adaptation of many stage successes, and speaking of the story, a few days will see the arrival of Maurice Maeterlinck to do scenarios for Goldwyn. This is the Belgian poet's first direct invasion of the industry, and is symbolical of much more from the standpoint of our great authors.

In fact, the past few weeks' indications point to cyclonic activity at practically every big Los Angeles studio.

NEW ADMINISTRATION BUILDING FOR MAYER

The administration force of the Louis B. Mayer studio is now housed in its new building. Among the visitors who witnessed the opening were Lois Weber and Phillip Smalley.

NEW STUDIOS IN NEW YORK

The Ferndale Film Studios, Inc., have acquared the country estate known as "Ferndale" which is perhaps one of the most beautiful of the many estates on Long Island.

The corporation has an authorized capital of $500,000 of which $300,000 has been fully paid in.

The corporation has contracted to build a modern moving picture studio, being the last word in photo play equipment; construction to be completed on or about May 1, 1920.

A colony of bungalows has already been constructed upon the estate which will provide delightful accommodations for the artists and those connected with the cororation. In addition to the bungalows already completed and fully equipped, is perhaps the largest private swimming tank in America, holding 80,000 gallons of water. There is also on the estate one of the most beautiful private lakes on Long Island, having a shore front of nearly 3000 feet.

The directors of the company are Mr. C. K. F. Andrewes, Miss L. Minnie Kirmmse, and Mr. E. G. W. Deitrich. Miss Kirmmse will have complete charge of the company's future operations.

The Smiles Comedy Company will commence work on its first production within the week. Allen ("Smiles") Williams, formerly with the Kewpie Komedy Kompany, is to be starred.

Albert Russell has completed the final episode of "The Lion Man." The cast includes Kathleen O'Connor, Jack Perrin, Barney Sherry, Gertrude Astor, Henry Barrows, Leonard Clapham and Mack Wright.

Work on the Universal serial, "The Moonriders," will be resumed next week upon the recovery of Art Accord, who has been suffering from a broken leg.

Under the direction of Reeves Eason, Hoot Gibson is appearing in "The Rattler's Hiss," at Universal City. The support consists of Mildred Moore, George Field, Charles Newton and Tote DuCrow.

J. Parker Reed, Jr., is casting his new Louise Glaum picture, which is to treat on another social problem.

Eddie Polo, assisted by Edward Kull, is directing his own serial, "The Vanishing Dagger." Polo is assisted by Thelma Percy, Ruth Royce, Peggy O'Dare and Ray Ripley.

Clarence Brown has started production on "The Great Redeemer," an original story by H. H. Van Loan. House Peters, Marjorie Daw, Frank Whitsen, Arthur Mackley and Frank McComas will be seen in the principal roles.

"The Temple of Dawn," a novel by Miss I. A. R. Wylie, will be Bert Lytell's next picture.

The Frazee Film Company, at Riverside, are making light comedies. Edwin Frazee is directing, assisted by Joe Murphy. Among the players are Dolly Dare, Rube Miller, Harry O'Conner, Howard Millcrest and Lucy Bates. F. Jackman and T. McNally are cameramen. Alec Tierney is property man.

SHOULD WE BECOME POLITICAL?

Never, it seems to us, has there been more general discontent in motion picture circles than there is at this moment. Especially does this apply to the mediocre man of the profession. Complaints from every side insist that rank amateurs are being rushed into pictures by the hundreds, usurping places which rightfully belong to recognized actors.

The direct cause for this grief seems to be provided by certain agents terming themselves "Schools of Photoplay Acting and Make-up" who suddenly abound in these parts. There is little data at hand regarding them, save that they possess mushroom-like qualities, in that they spring up over night and have been known to depart in a like space. They are reported as having rushed their pupils into the field at considerable less salary than can be competed with by professionals. The degree of satisfaction produced by such ready made artists can best be imagined.

Assisting in the general unpopularity thus occasioned themselves, comes another blow! Labor Commissioner H. A. Cable states that due to little indiscretions on the part of said schools as regards the promises given to, and more principally the money taken from their proteges, much agitation has invaded the Commission. "Would be" stars from Kalamazoo, craving to mend their broken hearts, covet the sympathy of Mr. Cable and that very worthy representative of justice is more than informative concerning his disgust for every party to the situation. He considers that the studios are negligent on this score. The "injured ones" he terms "suckers;" the schools—"fakes." His explanation of the fact that the "fakes" continue to thrive under his disapproval, involves legalities which are easily quoted. They have to do with the conservative manner in which our state deals with "educational enterprises."

To make the foregoing situation slightly more complicated, comes a wild clamor from Mr. Cable's "suckers," that the Commission fails in its duty to them, the innocent victims of California's "educational system."

We doubt if there is anyone connected with the entire affair who is in any degree satisfied. Who's business is it to straighten this out? Obviously it is an outrage to permit an invasion of amateurs to the detriment of the industry. Moreover, it is a reflection on the authorities that unsophisticated tourists are relieved of their money and illusions in this high handed manner. It occurs to us repeatedly that something is a little queer when enterprises officially dubbed "fakes," are permitted to proceed without molestation. Since the present Commission is admittedly annoyed with it all, why shouldn't a Motion Picture Labor Commissioner be appointed to care for such situations efficiently? Why don't we as an industry locate our backbone and show this entire district (which has been as surly as possible toward what it has discovered to be a very necessary evil) how easily a great control could be effected, with the profession organized politically? Are we going to do this and come into our own, or do we relish such insults to our mentality?

"VORK"

A Harvard professor recently made the assertion that the Swedes were the most intelligent race in the world. J. Warren Kerrigan maintains that the professor is radically and unreasonably wrong.

While making an interior for his Brunton production, "One Week-End," Kerrigan was approached by a young lady with blonde hair and an Ibsen accent.

"You need a vorker?" she asked.

"What sort of worker?"

"Can you act?"

"Oh, no."

"Then what could you do in pictures?"

"Vork."

"Ever been in pictures?"

"Oh, sure."

"What did you do?"

"I vorked."

"Come now, what is your particular line?"

"Vorking in pictures."

"Haven't you any specialty?"

"Sure, I have."

"What is it?"

"Vork!"

Ten minutes later Kerrigan was crawling through a nearby corn field, hunting for a four-leaf clover.

THE ART OF MAKE-UP

By Cecil Holland

Out of the hundreds in the motion picture industry, how many have really made a study of correct make-up? Like all other arts, it must be studied from the foundation right on up, step by step, to the finished work. An artist painting the human form must be as particular over the feet and fingers as he is with the expression of the eyes. Innumerable motion pictures in the past have been spoiled by the appearance on the screen of a poor make-up. You have all in your time witnessed a wonderful scene, dramatic, and full of heart interest, that has been absolutely ruined by the presence of some person who was wearing a supposed beard, bearing a striking resemblance to a hair mattress. Imagine an artist painting a wonderful picture, a lake, trees, hills and sky to perfection, and then placing in the foreground a wild duck, which looks more like a cross between an ostrich and a penguin. Would not that spoil your admiration for the rest of the picture? It is for such reasons that the character actor today has to give way to the true type, be he or she capable of portraying strong emotion, or gifted with a talent for acting. It has been questioned which is worse, poor acting or poor make-up. Many a scene would be greatly improved by having a recognized actor handling the situation; while on the other hand many a splendid portrayal has been spoiled by a poor make-up. The director seems to consider that he can take a type, whether or not the subject has acting qualities, and by constant rehearsal and almost mechanical process obtain the desired results. Consequently it becomes more than ever necessary for the actor and actress to make a thorough study of make-up. Under any circumstances at all, such a study cannot help being beneficial, for there is nothing more desired by the public than a good piece of acting accompanied by correct details.

You have all heard, I am sure, the observation that two persons using the same number grease paint obtain wholly unlike results. This is the first thing to be fully understood. If you have two boards, one free from paint and the other having been painted red, and you proceed to paint them both white, would the board previously painted red look as white as the one which has not been painted at all? Not likely, unless your white paint is mixed exceptionally thick. The red paint will have a tendency to show through; and so it is with the complexions of different individuals. A person having a ruddy complexion requires a lighter flesh or body paint than the person whose complexion is inclined to be pale. While you may not be able to observe the difference the eye or lense of the camera is far more severe. Should you doubt this, prove it to yourself on a starry night by taking a time exposure of the heavens. Be sure that you get a good conception of the number of stars you see with your eye. The finished picture will present myriads of stars which you have not seen at all. Therefore, just what number of flesh you should use can only be determined positively by screen tests, or in other words, by studying yourself as you appear on the screen. If you find that you look chalky, that the expression of your face is lost to a certain degree, your flesh is too light; on the other hand, if you appear dark, a lighter shade is necessary. Follow this first study carefully, for remember the body is the first essential of correct make-up. There is another important item, while we are on the subject of foundation, that but very few even of the "old timers" know. When being photographed upon the water, seashore, or snow, it is necessary that your grease paint be one or two shades lighter than that usually used. You have without doubt noticed in northern exteriors where snow abounds everywhere, how dark the faces of the actors are, and probably you have wondered why. The reason for this is that snow and water photograph very quickly on account of the glare which they give forth. Consequently the camera man has to "stop down" so as to get in the detail. This naturally under-exposes everything darker than the snow which leaves the face appearing unusually dark. Should the camera man focus correctly the faces of the characters, the snow or water would result in one big white blur unrecognizable and devoid of detail. Therefore, since it is impossible for him to bring out both your looks and the landscape, and since yours are the easier to remedy, lighten up accordingly.

It has been asked many times whether or not cold cream should be used on the face before the application of paint. For those having a naturally oily skin it is better to dispense with the cream, for it only adds a tendency to keep the make-up greasy, necessitating constant powdering. However, if the skin is inclined to be dry a little cold cream will be beneficial. In putting it on take a very little rubbed over the palm of the hand, and proceed as though washing your face. Then wipe it off. Enough will be left in the pores to serve the purpose. In applying the flesh use it freely but not thickly, covering all of the face. Be careful to keep paint from eyebrows, eyelashes, mustache, or beard, for this only tends to collect the powder where it is not needed. Then take the fingers and smooth the paint well over the face, being careful not to leave any excess paint or neglected spots. Also care should be taken to blend the paint well under the chin and jaw bones, fading it away to nothing on the neck. (It is necessary for a man to make up the neck if he is sunburned or tanned.) After this has been done PAT THE FACE LIGHTLY ALL OVER WITH THE FINGERS. This will prevent streakedness.

For ladies wearing evening or low neck gowns, it is necessary to whiten the shoulders, neck, arms and hands with a liquid powder or whitener. Gentlemen playing "dressy parts" should whiten their hands likewise. In buying liquid powder, insist upon getting a brand which will not rub off on clothing, as many brands not only ruin the clothes but are picked up easily by the camera. Rub the whitener well with the hands after the sponge application.

Powder should be one or two numbers lighter than the grease paint used as all dry colors when moistened have a tendency to darken.

Editor's Note—To be continued next week, completing straight make-up.

THEDA BARA MARRIED IN NEW YORK

Not being content rehearsing the leading role in A. H. Wood's stage production "The Blue Flame," Theda Bara has attempted an absolutely new role by announcing her marriage to Tom Badkin, manager of the musical comedy "The Sweet Heart Shop."

Miss Bara and Mr. Badkin met upon her return to New York following the termination of her work here for the Fox company.

REPUBLIC DISTRIBUTING INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

"One difficulty that confronts the exhibitor is to secure enough pictures to supply the needs of his program, i. e., pictures of the right sort. An opportunity is afforded if the man has sufficient ability to produce first class features together with a keen sense of picture value in stories to reap a harvest.

The next year will be the biggest yet, and it behooves every man who is adapted to or trained in the making of feature pictures to bend every effort to turn out first-class merchandise in order to supply a demand that is not being met.."

The foregoing are the statements of Briton N. Busch, president of the Republic Distributing Corporation, in explanation of the Republic's exploitation of many new productions by independent companies.

INCREASE SHOWN IN ADMISSION TAX COLLECTIONS

Admission taxes last October showed an increase of two million dollars over the same collections during October, 1918, according to the Internal Revenue Commissioner.

The exact figures are: October, 1919, $6,500,731.60; October, 1918, $4,452,272.12. Collections of rented and licensed films during the month amounted to $182,412.61; the seating taxes, $101,244.07.

Total collections in that space were $182 929,487.21, an increase of $47,000,000.

SELZNICK PRODUCING AMERICANIZATION PICTURES

Lewis J. Selznick announces that he has arranged with Ralph Ince for the latter's direction of and appearance in the first of a series of two-reelers to be used in the National Americanization Campaign. The series was occasioned by the appeal of Secretary of the Interior Lane, that the screen give all possible assistance in the drive for 100 per cent Americanization of United States citizens.

The first story is the "Land of Opportunity. It was written by Lewis Allen Browne and will be completed in time to prove a Lincoln's Birthday attraction.

FOX NEWS ASSISTS CAMPAIGN

Another company to effect an immediate answer to Franklin K. Lane's request for cinema assistance in the Americanization Campaign was the Fox News.

William Fox backed up the assurance of his co-operation which occurred January 11 in six days, with the appearance of spirited paragraphs on the subject. These paragraphs are to be incorporated in every issue of Fox News while the campaign lasts.

REINCORPORATION OF HAWORTH PICTURES

April will see the termination of Haworth Pictures Corporation. Haworth Studios, Inc., will be the name of the newly-formed organization, which will handle the Sessue Hayakawa pictures. Other stars will also appear under this banner. The company will continue to occupy the Sunset studio, formerly used by D. W. Griffith.

Edith Roberts has moved into her new home, on Gower street, in Hollywood.

THE HEART OF PRODUCTION

OMAR KHAYYAM!

And now comes the most classic of classics! After six months of preparation, the Ferdinand Earle Production Company announces that they expect to commence filming "The Rubaiyat," by Omar Khayyam, in about two months. Considering that this book has been issued in more than 800 editions in every civilized land, and that over thirty-three million copies have been printed, the outcome of such a venture can only be speculated on. However, its attraction will naturally be universal.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

PATHOS AND HEART INTEREST

Pathos excites pity. It is a necessary element of the drama, because it touches one of the tenderest strings of the heart.

It may be introduced with a bobtail puppy which has its leg broken. A rivalry between unequals, the supplication of an unfortunate, or a struggle of any being against overwhelming odds, is pathos, because it excites pity or compassion. It is not necessarily melodramatic however. Let us study a few examples:

A crippled child is run down on the street by an automobile and taken away by an officer, to the hospital. That heartstring which springs into action with pity, is twanged with a million vibrations as we stand and gaze at the little broken crutch, and the cheap little toy which it held in its hand, after the child is taken away.

Two lonely prospectors who have labored for weary months together are separated when a villain comes in, engages one of them in a mortal combat and kills him. After he has buried his only friend, we see the lonely one as he tenderly stores away the pick and other tools of his departed friend. Pathos again.

A devoted little wife is denied the things that make life happy, by a selfish and unthoughtful husband who wastes his money on drink, gambling or other women, while she stints and saves. He shows her the picture of another woman in the newspaper with the criticism. "Why don't you comb your hair like that. Later we see the little wife as she hangs the paper by the side of a cheap little mirror, and all alone, she tries to "look like that." The husband comes in later and she goes to him with a big loving embrace —and the anticipation of the approval which will make her so happy. He does not even notice the result of her efforts to please him. This is pathos. There should be a certain amount of it in every drama. The pathetic effort of the girl to force herself to smile, at the command of the brutal pugilist father, in Griffiths extreme, as was her pleadings with him as he was about to strike the blow that took her life. The great producer even introduced it in the dying effort of the brute pugilist to use his once trusty and mighty fists when he was staggered back by a rain of leaden bullets from the gun of the Chinaman. Just for that fleeting moment we found ourselves pitying even him. It is these subtle touches that has made Griffith world famous. He has mastered the art of playing a medley on the heartstrings—and touches them all.

Heart interest is that responsive chord which is struck by witnessing an object or incident, the beauty and significance of which is brought home to us. A litter of pigs, or puppies, a playful domestic pet, a mother's love for her infant, the portrayal of sweet innocence, or the tender affections of an old couple, are beautiful touches which add heart interest.

In other words it is the purer and nobler things of life, devoid of conflict, or selfish desire, which cause the heartstrings to purr softly and sweetly. The touches may be ever so delicate, yet they are the little highlights which make the picture perfect. A ragged newsboy leading a blind man across a traffic-jammed street will not fail to create a melodious note in the most calloused heart. A study of each front page cover of the Saturday Evening Post will reveal an example of the things which make for heart interest.

Characteriaztion.

To be a successful story writer one must be a student of human nature, as well as of dramatic situations. Each character in the story has his, or her traits. To a large extent these traits shape the actions which lead to dramatic situations. One of the serious mistakes that may be made by the student is to write a character "out of character." If the leading man is supposed to be dignified, he must not be given a bit of business which makes him appear otherwise; or if the villain is brutal, it would be a fatal mistake to have him perform a sympathetic act.

In characterization it is not sufficient to merely say that a man is dignified, faithful, courageous, sympathetic, gallant or gentle. His actions must demonstrate that he is such. Hence it is of the utmost importance that the writer be ready to suggest a concrete example of deportment that will immediately establish character. For example:

Two men are in a hand-to-had struggle on the brink of a precipice. One of them is the hero and the other a villain. The hero overpowers the villain. We establish the fact that the hero is magnanimous and brave as well as honorable when we have him refuse to hurl the other man over the cliff when it is absolutely within his power to do so. If we have him look upward with a prayer for guidance just before he releases his fallen adversary, we establish the fact that he is reverent.

Character may be established by a simple expression. For example, a girl may demonstrate that she is modest, or bashful by a blush which might be described "and her cheeks flushed crimson." She may establish the fact that she is demure by dropping her eyes to the ground. We say a man is dignified when in a serious situation he refuses to smile at a ludricrous incident. We understand that he is polite when he tips his hat to a lady, or stands with bared head while he converses with her.

He may be courteous when he offers his seat to her in a street car, or gallant when he knocks down a bully who is abusing her. If he keeps up an incessantly tapping on the table with his pencil, while he is being harrangued, we knew he is nervous, while if he leans back and blows a ringlet of smoke from his cigar, it is very evident that he is cool or nonchalant. If he refuses employment to a girl whose finger nails are not properly manicured, we say right away that he is discriminating. Should she fall into a fit of weeping and cause him to revoke his decision, we conclude that he is frank. She tells him of her sorrows and we see a tear form in his eye, or the corner of his mouth twitch, which tells us that he is sympathetic. Later when she makes mistakes, and he reassures her, and gives her another chance, he stamps himself as being patient.

All these things and many more, are bits of business which should be studied by the ambitious writer, so that he may be able to delineate character by action, in his stories. It gives the continuity writer something more than just a bare plot on which to build the finished scenario.

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wisn the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

offers a great opportunity to those who have ideas. The supply of good stories is not keeping pace with the demand and is to the outside writer that the producers must look for new material. Read what those who know have to say about it.

16 TO THE SECOND

By C. J. BARBER

Cameramen, assistants and laboratory workers are cordially invited to make use of this department. It's your personal part of Camera! All questions will be fully and practically answered. Address questions to C. J. Barber, care Camera!, 326½ South Broadway.

Correction: In the two formulas given L. C. in last week's issue, the developer should be metol. In the second formula, sulphite soda should read 6 oz., 2½ dr., and the quantity of water should be 128 oz.

B. B. asks for practical information on photographing clouds for title work.

Answer: To get best results, clouds should be divided into two classes: (A) White clouds against a blue sky, when the sun is shining on to clouds. (B) Black clouds against white or blue sky, when the sun is on far side of clouds and not visible. Conditions "A," use panchromatic film with a yellow filter of 2X to 5X. Conditions "B," regular film can be used without a filter, with an exposure of from 1-5 to 1-12 normal. To get best results, clouds must be bold and well defined, a short exposure given, and full development.

C. R.—Answer: We cannot state in this column that one camera is better than all others. Of those you mention, you will not be wrong in buying any one.

D. O. asks for method of determining what distance to focus on to get near and far objects in the same sharp focus.

Answer: Your question is very indefinite, but I think the following will answer it. Table of distances to focus on to get near and far objects equally sharp:

	2	3	4	5	6	8	10	15	20	30	INF
2	2	2½	2¾	3	3	3¼	3¼	3½	3½	3¾	4
3		3	3½	3¾	4	4½	4½	5	5¼	5½	6
4				4	4½	4¾	5¾	6¼	6¾	7	8
5				5	5½	6	6¾	7½	8	8½	10
6					6	7	7½	8½	9¼	10	12
8						8	9	10½	11½	12½	16
10							10	12	13¼	15	20
15								15	17	20	30
20									20	24	40
30										30	60
INF											INF

Example: To get all objects from 8 feet to 30 feet equally sharp, focus on point 12½ feet and stop down.

"BELOW THE SURFACE" COMPLETED

The Thomas H. Ince special production, "Below the Surface," featuring Hobart Bosworth, has been completed and is now in the hands of the editor.

Harry Nuttall, member of the British parliament from Manchester is a daily guest at the G. B. Samuelson Studios at Universal City.

Mary Beaton has signed a contract with the Metro.

Claire DuBrey will play a part with the Jack Kerrigan company in his picture based on Balzac's "The Migic Skin."

Jack Sayres and Harry Wilde are, after the usual studio hibernation, preparing for a most active season at Goldwyn's. The buzzing of the telephone will keep them busy before long and strain their discriminating faculties to the utmost, according to "Next Wednesday" obertson.

Casting Directory

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $1.00 per month.

WHAT NOT TO WRITE

Henry Christeen Warnock, editor of the Capital Film Company, 1025 Lillian Way, Hollywood, and author of scores of screen successes, has written a dozen "don'ts" for beginners that are worth considering. Here is his advice:

Don't write anything that can't be acted and photographed, and don't leave out anything that can be acted.

When you tell what is to be acted, be sure to tell how it is to be acted—and try to make the how something new.

If you have a crime—make the motive for it so strong and plausible that the audience will sympathize with the criminal and forgive him, and the censors will let it get by.

Don't have more than one theme, with one clear story that develops in a straight line, and with fast action.

Don't have big casts, long lapses of time, scattered locations or numerous interiors.

Don't let your story pull away from itself.

Don't leave your star out of any important sequence; don't fail to have a clash of wills in which the man in the right gets the best of those who are wrong; and don't fail to make the star's lead somebody worth fighting for and worth keeping after they are won.

Don't have more than one fight, and don't have more than three big situations that can be divided into a number of small scenes.

Don't take up a theme that isn't tenable and interesting, and don't treat it with a story that hasn't richness and surprise.

Don't start a story without knowing where it is going to end, and how it will end. Stick to three things: a natural beginning, a good ending, and an interesting way to get there.

Never make anything happen on an interior that could be staged outside; but once you have called for an interior, use it for all the action you can get out of it.

Never start two people in an interesting situation and then stop the action by bringing in something else.

When you write a synopsis, paragraph your action, and follow the story just about as you would see it on the screen.

Don't write anything that might not have happened and that could not be believed.

Don't tell the how of anything without also telling the why of it.

Don't use three situations unless the middle link connects the first with the last, sewing it up tight.

STUDIO PUBLICISTS ASSOCIATION

At a meeting recently held, officers were elected for the newly formed Studio Publicists' Association. The organization was formed a few weeks ago, with a temporary executive committee in lieu of formally elected officers, and a constitution was framed with by-laws which were adopted by the organization as a whole.

At the election Monday evening Captain C. Walter Huntington was chosen as president. He is the personal representative of Frank Keenan, Kathleen Kirkham, and Colin Campbell. Other officers elected were: Ham Beall, vice-president; Al Risley, treasurer; Emily Squier, secretary; Ted Taylor, editor.

The meeting was featured by the initial appearance of the official publication of the association, "The Mouth-Organ." Ted Taylor was responsible for its breezy witticisms concerning members of the S. P. A., and it is to be published bi-weekly for distribution at the meetings of the organization. It will contain no publicity, but will concern itself with personalities and news of the publicity profession.

The S. P. A. has declared itself as being organized for the four-fold purpose of establishing publicity as a respected profession and a vital factor in the motion picture world and the community at large; to maintain a mutual understanding among those active in the writing and distribution of motion picture news and publicity, and to meet for exchange of ideas; to improve the standard of publicity writing and to eliminate harmful faking which reacts to the detriment of all affected by it; and to handle propaganda vital to the interests of the organization or the community, by means of a volunteer committee which will donate its services.

Beall, Harry Hammond (General—66010).

Boylan, Malcolm S. (Samuelson Films, Ltd., London).

Boylan, Mike (Universal City—Holly. 2500). 325 S. Reno St.; Wil. 1375.

Russell, W. H. (American Film Co., Inc., Santa Barbara).

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

START "BURNING DAYLIGHT"

Production of "Burning Daylight" was started at the Metro studio Monday. "Ted" Sloman, the director, expects to spend three weeks filming interiors. Then the company will go to some northern location for snow scenes.

OAKLEY WINS

The judgment against the Oakley Production Company for $4100 in favor of Irma Johnson McAllister has been set aside. McAllister will not ask for a new trial.

GOLDWYN BUYING BIG STORIES

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation announces the purchase of the motion picture rights to "The Great Lover," by Leo Dietrichstein and Fred and Fannie Hatton. This is the fourth play which Goldwyn has purchased from Cohan and Harris within the last few weeks. Recently announcement was made of the purchase of "Officer 666," "Stop Thief" and "A Tailor-Made Man." They are all scheduled for early production. Besides "The Great Lover," the Goldwyn company is now preparing to produce "Bunty Pulls the Strings," by Graham Moffatt; "Milestones," by Erward Knoblock and Arnold Bennett; "The Truth," by Clyde Fitch; "Madam X," by Alexandre Bisson; "The Christian," by Hall Caine, and "The Slim Princess," by George Ade and Henry Blossom.

HARVEY THEW WITH LAWRENCE WEBER PRODUCTIONS

Harvey Thew this week commenced work on the continuity of the next picture to be produced by the Lawrence Weber Productions. The picture, a starring vehicle for Edith Hallor, will be the eighteenth continuity Mr. Thew has completed during the last twelve months. They have included scripts produced with Jack Pickford, George Beban, Mae Murray, Tom Moore, Priscilla Dean, Elmo Lincoln, William Desmond, Texas Guinan Bessie Barriscale and House Peters.

The Paramount Artcraft Special, "The Fighting Chance," is already completed, under the directio n of Charles Maigne. It is a story of fashionable life, dealing with the problems of heredity.

Gloria Joy is to appear at the head of her own company, under the direction of Sherwood McDonald. The new company has leased a unit at the new Paul Studios, Inc., 6434 Hollywood boulevard, and will start shooting soon.

"The Temple of Dawn" will be Bert Lytell's next picture following "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Arthur Zellner is writing the script.

A NAMELESS COMPANY

A motion picture company without a name has been formed in Los Angeles, with Norman Manning at its head. Details concerning the organization of this company are not ready for the public, but it is known that new color photography will be utilized in ts productons. The first of these will be "Spotted Heat," by Van Loan.

Henry Kolker is cutting his latest production, "Bright Skies." He will start shooting again in about three weeks.

EAST AND WEST

The following is an extract from an article recently published in the Philadelphia North American:

"The fact that many of the 'movie' studios have packed up and moved to new stamping grounds, generally in the East, is welcome, not only from their standpoint of being close to the distributing center, but also because it will ring a change from old familiar locations."

Naturally our opinion of the above was "not much"; so we decided to say ours for the West. With this in view, we obtained the following from Robert Brunton, representative West Coast producer:

"Los Angeles is the most commercially advantageous spot in the world for the production of motion pictures. Above all other activities, picture making must be kept to schedule. With this in mind, the first consideration is naturally climate. Nowhere else do we find such an evenness of light and weather, combined with reasonabe accessibility to every kind of scenery. Time is the great item saved by these conditions, and time is money in picture production.

CLAIRE DU BREY

Next comes the question of ground space. Land prices in New York, California's only rival, and the impossibility of obtaining it, make it necessary for all studios there to locate in the suburbs. This necessitates more or less dependence on public transportation, the result being again loss of time. In Los Angeles large tracts easy of access may still be had for a fairly reasonable consideration. Again fuel prices in the East hamper production in that they make it impossible to heat and light the huge stages now required."

Seeking the opinion of "a recently from the East" producer, we spoke further on the subject to Harry Rapf, general manager for Selznick. He provided us with one more great advantage in West Coast production. "I have found," said Mr. Rapf, "a much greater supply of real ability among the talent, especially applicants for small parts and bits, here than in New York. True, the California actor demands a higher salary, but in the end his time saving more than makes up the difference. I am delighted with Los Angeles as a production center. New York cannot compare with it."

GASNEIR TO LAUNCH FOUR BIG PRODUCTIONS

L. J. Gasneir is preparing to launch four big productions at his studios in Glendale. The stars will be Lew Cody, Mae Marsh, Dustin Farnum and Ruth Roland.

Metro has leased the sixty-three-acre Rose Hill Park (Schuetzer Target Range) for a term of years, to be used as locations.

At the request of Yoyama Yamaguchi of Yokohama, H. H. Van Loan has sent two new stories across the Pacific for the Japanese motion picture producing company with which Yamaguchi is associated.

Marshall Neilan has arranged with John Jasper, manager of the Hollywood Studios, Inc., for the exlcusive use of one of the stages for a period of six months, pending the completion of the new Nelian studios.

Gale Henry will start work in a few days on the first of her new series of two-reel fun films. An entire new cast and director have been engaged by the company.

Hank Mann took the final scenes to his sixth two-reeler comedy for Arrow last week.

Milburn Moranti has broken connections with Bulls Eye, and reorganized his company with a capital stock of $100,000 under the name of the Moranti Comedies, Inc. Work on his first two-reeler started Monday at the Balboa studios, Long Beach. According to his new contract, twelve two-reel comedies will be produced the first year. Al Moranti, brother of the star, is directing. Helen Williams is leading lady, and Joe Bonner and Albert Huston also appear in support. Eastern as well as local capital is said to be backing the company.

"Shooting" of the new series of Hall Room Boys comedies has started at the Henry Lehrman studios, in Culver City, under the supervision of Harry Cohn, with Al Santell as director.

Brentwood has purchased from Mrs. Ronie H. Jaffa the picture rights to her stage comedy, "In Walked Jimmy."

Director Sidney Olcott has started work on the Rupert Hughes story, "Scratch My Back," taking the first scenes in San Francisco. T. Roy Barnes, Helene Chadwick and Lloyd Whitlock compose the cast so far selected.

Doris Shcroeder has just completed continuities on "Togs," "Jewel" and "Virginia" for Universal.

Robert Anderson, who has just returned from a short visit to Denmark, has signed a contract to direct and act in a series of two-reel comedies for Universal.

Harry S. Northrup has been engaged by Maurice Tourneur to play the heavy in "The Pavilion on the Links."

George Nichols plays the part of Mayor Curran in King W. Vidor's production, "The Family Honor."

Monte Banks has completed "A Rare Bird," his first two-reeler.

Annette Kellerman has started work at the Brunton studio. Chester M. Franklin is directing, and Harry Caulfield is business manager.

UTILIZING THE "PULSE"

Camera! wishes to impress the exhibitor with the importance of "The Pulse of the Studio" in the matter of his local publicity. This feature is kept up to date direct from the companies themselves; consequently it forms an invaluable source of authentic information. Watch it for the current news of the star whose picture you are tonight showing at your theater.

THE "MOUTH ORGAN"

Suddenly there has appeared in our midst a most significant and constructive little instrument called the Mouth Organ. It is a bi-weekly sheet edited by Teddy Taylor of the Studio Publicists Association. Evidently it is published for their and our edification. While perusing it we were struck with the fact that should Teddy and his contemporaries "shoot" us as good stuff as he discovers for himself, we could be duly grateful.

We like the idea of both the Mouth Organ and the organization which it represents, and shall await interesting developments.

WE ARE ON OUR WAY

The next census will show that there are eighteen thousand people in Los Angeles actually engaged in the production of motion pictures. These, in addition to the hundred thousand more who depend indirectly upon the industry for their livelihoods, form quite a little assemblage. In view of such a number and its limitless resources, it does not require much effort to visualize the gigantic political control about to be effected.

In the first place stands the screen, long recognized as the greatest known instrument of propaganda. It will be exercised according to the desires of the industry for the education of the public. Moreover, the public will enjoy the process if we are to judge from precedent.

Another power will arise from the co-operation of several more than constructive motion picture organizations; among these are The Actors' Association, The Motion Picture Directors' Association, The Assistant Directors' Association, The Photo Players' Equity Association, and the American Society of Cinematography. Practically every phase of the picture world is covered in the above list. They have proven to our satisfaction their individual powers of accomplishment. The possibilities resultant of their co-operation may be readily figured. We wonder if the much referred to Mr. Cable will favor us with a pause and a thought upon this matter. We believe that such an attempt would prove of assistance to him in regard to the alteration of his viewpoint; and let us add that in many respects "alteration" as a word is going to be duly significant. It may be hoped that its first effect will be shown in the position accorded the professional man by his "holier than thou" neighbor.

THE ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

Installment Two

In last week's issue we dwelt on the importance of studying one's complexion to determine the number of "flesh" to be used. We will now continue with the straight make-up.

First of all, it is very important to avoid all definite lines. In other words, there should be no sharp edge of any mark upon the face; everything, as nearly as possible, should represent a shadow. The only actual sharp line that can be used is in the case of the pin-line of a wrinkle, but upon this subject we will dwell later.

After applying the "flesh," the next thing to be considered is the treatment of the eyes. When having to line or shade two things alike such as the eyes and eyebrows, always start with the left one first. We all learn in drawing lessons that when working upon a symmetrical design necessitating two like sides, the correct method is to start with the left side first. Should this be reversed, difficulties will arise over the accomplishment of the left side, as the hand and wrist will be in the way; that is, the finished part will be half covered, making the remaining work very difficult. We apply this to the lining of the eyes and eyebrows. Having done the left side first, one has an unobstructed view to copy on the right. Should the person making up be very full or puffy over the eyes, it will be necessary to throw a shadow there to overcome this. You will see many actors and actresses using light blue or green. These are not good colors, for while producing a very nice soft shadow when photographed under a diffused light, they do not have the same effect in the sunshine. They result rather in producing no shadow at all. The very best all round color for this use is brown, but it must be handled with great caution, for it is akin to black, and on a light background will photograph very readily. Therefore when using it, do so sparingly. Remember, it is always better to have a shadow a little too light than to have it too dark. Grease the index finger with a very little cold cream, rub upon the stick of brown until a very little adheres, then rub your finger against your thumb; this will prevent any lumps and serve to mix it well. Then carefully rub finger over the eye, starting from the lid and gradually working the shadow up to the eyebrow, being sure that no distinct line appears on the side of the eye away from the nose. To determine how deep the shadow should be requires considerable study of photography. Dark brown will photograph almost black; by gradually thinning it down it becomes a soft gray. The average person does not realize the study involved in photographing colors. It is a subject to which every actor and actress should devote considerable time, for motion picture photography has been developed to a fine science not alone for and by the cameraman. Should you take several colors such as blue, yellow, pink, green, (in fact, almost any color but black and brown), you will find that by starting them at their full density, and by gradually thining them down and then taking a photograph of them, that they start with a dark gray and eventually fade into nothing. This, of course, is understood to be true if they are placed upon a light background. On the other hand, it is impossible to fade black or brown out to nothing. It is up to each individual to study the dividing line capable of producing the desired shadow. You have probably noticed instances, as in the case of a dope fiend make-up, where shadows thrown in the cheeks produced the effect of two dirty marks. This was because the shading was too dark in the first place, and then the edges were not effectively blended off. The foregoing instructions apply to all shading. Double chins can be modified in the same manner. For a lady, it is advisable to use a dry rouge after powdering, applying it with a puff or rabbit's foot upon the part to be subdued. Keep in mind that it is always better to have too little shading than too much. None of us desires the appearance of a dirty neck or a cut throat, so take heed.

SOUTH AMERICAN RIGHTS PURCHASED BY GLUCKSMAN

Max Glucksman of New York has purchased from C. B. Price Company Inc., the rights for Argentine, Paraguay, Uruguay and Chile for "The Greater Woman," and "The Debt," starring Marjorie Rambeau and "Hedda Gabler," featuring Nance O'Neil.

BRITISH FORT MAKES BIG SETTING

Army barracks in the city of Peshawur, the strongest fort in India, have been reproduced by Metro for the Hope pictures. The "set" is 500 feet long, 150 feet wide, and 50 feet high. Director Herbert Blache will take scenes here next week, showing the return of British soldiers after a victory over Afghanistan troops.

A. GEORGE SMITH APPOINTED EUROPEAN REPRESENTATIVE

A George Smith has been appointed by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation as its General Representative for Europe. Charles Lapworth, formerly on the editorial staff of the London Daily Mail, and more recently associated with Charles Chaplin, will co-operate with Mr. Smith in the handling of Goldwyn advertising and publicity in the European field.

George Behan has completed "One Man in a Million," and begun to cut it from a total footage of 121,000 to the screen version which will comprise about 6500 feet. When ready for release, "One Man in a Million" will be exploited and distributed by Sol Lesser.

A. Lincoln Ehrgott is in charge of the Foreign Department of C. B. Price Company, Inc., of New York.

It is said that D. W. Griffith has paid to William A. Brady $175,000 for the picture rights to "'Way Down East." Since its initial appearance on the stage a quarter of a century back "'Way Down East" has earned $2,000,000 for Brady.

Ben Hur is at last to reach the screen. Klaw & Erlanger, the owners, have been holding out for the sum of $500,000 for the film privileges. A New York corporation has been formed to take them over.

The Walsh bill, now before congress, is designated to prohibit the inter-state shipment of immoral pictures. It is to the credit of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry that it has gotten squarely behind the bill and will do what it can to make it a law.

Under his new four-year contract with Universal, Eddie Polo will travel one season with Barnum and Bailey. The serial star will carry no cast with him. He is to use only circus performers in the pictures. The stories are to be two-reelers.

The Los Angeles branch of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation has just received the first prints of Will Rogers' latest Goldwyn picture, "Water, Water Everywhere" and Pauline Frederick's "The Woman in Room 13." In accordance with a policy inaugurated by branch manager Maurice Wolf, both of these pictures will be previewed by the sales and exploitation departments of the local office.

Both productions will have their Los Angeles premieres at the California Theatre in the near future.

The National's first 1920 feature, "The Kentucky Colonel," is completed. Director W. A. Seiter will finish cutting about Feb. 15th, when the picture will be sent East.

One hundred and ten temporary stage settings are built weekly to be used by the twelve companies now at work at the Culver City Goldwyn Studios.

BILL BEING PREPARED TO AFFECT NEW JERSEY SUNDAY LAW

A bill permitting New Jersey cities to hold referendum votes on the question of Sunday amusements is expected to be introduced in the Legislature soon. The bill has been prepared by Henry C. Whitehead, former Assemblyman of Passaic City, and Counselor George R. Beach of Jersey City, who were deputized by a sub-committee on legislation of the unofficial Citizens' Committee, recently named to suggest a revision of the New Jersey blue laws. Indications point to the passing of the bill. In such an event it will be up to the New Jersey cities to decide whether or not they desire the Sunday motion picture and other amusements.

Strenuous opposition to the bill will undoubtedly be made by the churches.

ASSISTANTS' LEAGUE FORMED FOR CHARITY

Von M. Zimmerman, director of locations for Marshall Neilan Productions, is engaged in the organization of the Assistants' League. The object of the league, of which Mrs. Hancock Banning, the originator, is chairman, is to permit the use of residences for the making of motion pictures, the revenue derived therefrom to be turned over to charity.

It is proposed that an agreement be made between the league and the reputable film producers of Los Angeles, whereby each member of the league will allow her home to be used for an exterior or interior set when suitable to the needs of the producer. In consideration of this courtesy the producers shall agree to pay a stipulated sum based on the value of the location to the production. This revenue will be paid to the league's charitable fund instead of the individual resident owner. At the end of each month one-third of the gross proceeds shall go to the benefit of French orphans, and the balance distributed to other charitable organizations to be designated later.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

Inspiration

Having developed an active imagination, the writer will open his, or her, mind to inspiration. There are various sources from which it may come. Music, poetry, a beautiful painting, a wistful expression, a beautiful maiden, an innocent child, the mute evidence of a struggle, the soft moonlight, a forgotten trinket, the song of a lark, the sighing of the wind through stately pines, and many other things may furnish it.

If our minds are in tune with nature we have only to look about us and study life, to be inspired. The blind beggar on the street, the prisoner before the bar, the clang of an ambulance bell, the tired laborer with knotted and gnarled hands who passes with his dinner pail, or the rippling laughter of a bevy of school girls will arouse the imagination to all kinds of speculations which will pile up story material. One of the most interesting stories I ever wrote came to me in a flash one day from seeing a young girl in an office across a court go over to the window and get on her knees in prayer. No one else was in the room, apparently. Some great burden which she was unable to bear had evidently rested upon her and the picture that I saw when she knelt by the window was inspiration enough for any artist, either of the pen or paint brush. To the dramatist, the poet, artist, sculptor or musician, life is beautiful sublime—even in its sadder phase. I have even gazed upon the calm face of the dead and felt that my soul soared to lofty heights as it sought to fathom the things that might have been.

The charm of poetry, outside of its rhythm, lies principally in its dramatic potentialities. A beautiful or eloquent phrase stirs the imagination of the creative mind into dramatic action. In other words, it inspres. No one appreciates this more than the producers of motion picture drama, who have learned to greatly enhance and tremendously increase the dramatic intensity of situation, b ythe use of eloquent and expressive sub-titles. For example:

Compare "—and counted time by heart-throbs" with "he waited expectantly"; "and made a covenant with Death" with "he took his life in his own hands"; "—a dagger in her smile" with "she smiled wickedly" and so on.

While the study of beautiful phraseology may reasonably be a branch of Language, and not of dramatic plot construction, I want to impress on the mind of my reader, the advantage of attuning his, or her, mind to dramatic inspiration, through a study of beautiful phrases which are rich with expression.

It is a very good plan to make a collection of such phrases as are shown below and store them away for future study. The list may be augmented from time to time, as new ones are observed:

"His red right hand."

"The timely dew of Sleep."

"Words that weep and tears that speak'.'

"Came to scoff, remained to pray."

"A countenance more in sorrow than in anger."

"His eye was dim and cold."

"A rosebud set with wilful little thorns."

"The fairest of Eve's daughters."

"Unwept, unhonored, uninterred."

"In death a hero, as in life a friend."

"Like angels' visits few and far between."

"The bitter bread of banishment."

"By thunders of white silence."

"Into the valley of Death."

"The shining mark of Death."

"Into twilight, soft and dim."

And so on.

The receptive imagination will not only visualize intense dramatic situations, and those of splendid peace and beauty, from these lines, but sublime characterizations. What heart is there that does not throb with sympathy or compassion for the beautiful character in "Sweet Alice—Ben Bolt" about whom the poet says, "she wept with delight at his smile, trembled with fear at his frown"?

Pause for a moment and let the mind's eye look upon he who is suggested by "his eye was dim and cold." Now contrast this with "like angels' visits, few and far between," or the little coquette whom we see in "a rosebud set with wilful little thorns." We smile at "a conquering hero, by dint of hard imagining," "pining with thirst in a sea of waves" and "an unforgiving eye and a damned disinheriting countenance."

The strains of music are a great source of inspiration to the dramatist. "Music hath charm" was well spoken or written. It represents the emotions of the composer as he contemplates a dramtaic situation, a sublime character, a scene of beauty, or an inspiring thought. Music knows no limitations of language, but its expression is universal, even to the soothng of the savage breast. It is the language of the soul.

As the composer of music gains his inspiration from Life, and interprets it in melody, so may the dramatist reinterpret from his work. The theme will probably remain the same, while the composition may develop into innumerable variations. Hence from a single melody the dramatist may gain inspiration for many dramatic plots. Even one plaintive note may touch the imagination into responsive action that executes a perfect tremelo of the emoons.

Editor's Note.—Mr. Hill's next article will explain censorship regulations.

By C. J. BARBER

Cameramen, assistants and laboratory workers are cordially invited to make use of this department. It's your personal part of Camera! Address questions to C. J. Barber, care Camera, 326½ South Broadway.

M. R. asks why discussions of subjects relative to M. P. photography are not permitted in this column.

Answer: You are all cordially invited to make this department of Camera! your own. Send in your criticisms, suggestions, ideas, and let's get together. It's for the betterment of our part of the M. P. work.

W. M. H. Jr. I will answer you by letter at earliest moment, as your questions are not of general interest.

L. C. R. has trouble with picture often being out of focus when using ray-screen.

Answer: The safest method is to focus after the ray-screen is in place, which will probably stop your trouble unless your screens are very poor.

R. M. The exposure table you wish was in the January 24th issue.

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING

offers a great opportunity to those who have ideas. The supply of good stories is not keeping pace with the demand and is to the outside writer that the producers must look for new material. Our treatise "Ten Million Photoplay Plots," written by Wycliffe A. Hill, author of "Scientific Plot Building" in Camera!, offers you complete and detailed instructions in photoplay writing. Read what those who know have to say about it.

"Would be helpful to anyone who wants to learn the technique of writing for the screen," Douglas Fairbanks Studio.

"Probably the best treatise on dramatic plot construction, as applied to the photoplay, that has ever been written."—Federal Photoplays.

"It fills a long-felt want."—Film Fun Magazine.

We will now take up the lining of the eyes. If they are large or have thick eyelashes, it is not necessary to line them at all. The more natural the person looks the better he will photograph. The medium of make-up is only to assist in bringing out good points and subduing defective parts of the physiognomy. When a person has small eyes and thin eyelashes, it is necessary to line them so they will appear larger.

Another point is that from a distance the flesh or body color on the face will photograph almost the same as the white of the eye, which will detract from its shape, leaving the pupils appearing like two burnt holes in a blanket. The shadow is thrown around the eye to give it its natural shape and to produce the necessary contrast between the grease paint and the white of the eye. If the lashes are heavy enough they give the same effect. For this line or shadow, take a shading stump or orange stick, preferably the former. The shading stump (for those who do not know the term) is a little stick formed of rolled paper tapering to a point at one end. It is used in drawing principally to blend shadows of lead pencil and charcoal and serves as an excellent liner in make-up. It is a softer instrument for use around the eye than the orange stick. Roll the point of the shading stump upon your brown paint (should the paint be hard, stick the end of the shading stump in cold cream and then roll on paint as before described). When a good coating of brown is on the liner, draw a very thin line, commencing at the innermost corner of the upper left eyelid, around the eye close to the lashes, ending it a little past the corner of the eye. In lining the lower lid, be sure that you do not commence the line at the extreme innermost corner of the eye, but start it where the lower eyelid commences to turn down. Then as in the case of the upper, follow the eyelashes around until the lines join. Should you start this lower line from the innermost corner of the eye, making it join the upper, it will give a cross-eyed appearance photographically. Then take the clean index finger and rub it lightly over the paint to take away all sharpness and make a shadow rather than a line.

Many screen stars today make it a point to appear as make-upless as possible to the layman. This is necessary for all who would attain success. Even a shoe shiner has to study the best polish to use and the best method in putting it on. There is no trade or profession that can be accomplished without constant study for perfection in its every line. It is the finishing touch placed by the artist on the picture that gives it life. Do not stop because you have done this and done that any say, "Well, that's the way I was told." Never be absolutely satisfied with anything you do, for when you reach that stage you paralyze your capacity for progression. In no line can one stand still; he must either ascend or descend in his art. Knowledge of make-up from every angle is necessary to our progression.

(To be continued next week)

"REEL HOKUM"

A Preventative for "Flu."

A certain studio here in Hollywood is passing out all the waste film as chewing gum to its employees, for the reason that film contains nitrate of silver, which doctors administer to people as a preventative of "flu."

You are instructed to allow a small piece of film to rest on the tongue until the emulsion is softened. Then remove the film, and the taste will remain about one hour. Have you tasted it? I don't blame the "flu" germs for making a quick getaway.

Casting Directory

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $1.00 per month.

The Palmer Course in Photoplay Writing

SCORES of new motion picture writers will be developed this year. Many of these new photoplaywrights will be men and women who have never written a line for publication.

If you have clever story ideas that are picturable, and want to make more money, the richest market in the world today is the photoplay market. Anyone possessing a normal education can become a craftsman in this new field of creative writing. And it is craftsmanship that represents the difference between success and failure in this profitable work.

The Palmer Course teaches the craftsmanship of photoplay writing correctly. This is attested to by the many students who have achieved success under our guidance. It is the one course that is recommended by the leading motion picture studios.

You could sell a hundred good stories this minute at $100 to $1000—if you could get them read by those who buy them.

Palmer service provides an accredited avenue through which the stories of unknown writers receive the consideration of responsible studio heads. The new writer no longer is at a disadvantage, as heretofore.

You can study the Palmer course during your spare time in your own home, without interfering with your present work. In order that imaginative peopde may be encouraged to study screen technique and help supply the insatiable demand for new stories, the tuition has been placed within easy reach of practically every ambitious person.

Advisory Council

Directing the work of the Department of Education is an Advisory Council embracing Cecil B. DeMille, Director-General Famous Players-Lasky Corp.; Thomas H. Ince, head of the Famous Ince Studios; Lois Weber, America's Greatest Woman Producer and Director; Rob Wagner, Noted Screen Authority and Special Writer for the Saturday Evening Post.

Contributors

Assisting in the training of Palmer students is a group of nationally-known directors and writers, who have contributed valuable lessons exclusively to the Course. They are: Frank Lloyd and Clarence Badger, Goldwyn directors; Jeanie MacPherson, premier Lasky scenario writer; Al E. Christie, President Christie Film Co.; Denison Clift, Fox director and former scenario editor; Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, Metro scenario editor; George Beban, eminent actor and producer; Hugh McClung, cinematographic authority; Rob Wagner, Kate Corbaley, Eric Howard and Adeline Alvord.

Send for Free Book

If you are sincerely interested in learning of the wealth of opportunities in this new field of writing, ask for a copy of our 36-page Catalog and Special Booklet, "Proof Positive." This booklet contains an array of gripping experiences of students who have won success through the help we have given them. These valuable books will not be given to boys and girls under 18 years of age, but are otherwise free to all who are seriously seeking information concerning scenario instruction. GLOBE PETROLEUM CORPORATION OWNS PRODUCTION

Oil poduction is a reality on three properties of this corporation. 23 wells are steadily yielding oil in substantial quantities. Income from this source is already considerable. Kern River, Maricopa and Ventura properties are the producers.

Wells have been started on two additional holdings. In the Montebello district drilling has reached a depth of 2,100 feet; on property at Devils Den, well is down 1,025 feet.

Embraced in additonal holdings are tracts which bring the total acreage well over 11,000 acres. In the Newhall, Clay, Chatsworth, Santa Maria, Oklahoma and Richfield districts this corporation has holdings, selected only after careful appraisement by competent geologists, and chosen with a view to consistent production.

Capitalization of the Globe Petroleum Corporation is $1,250,000, with shares of par value of 25c.

The present offering of stock is at par. At option of the corporation, stock may be withdrawn from the market, and application made to list upon the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. We predict an active market for this stock.

Orders may now be filed with any broker.

THE MAN SHE HATED

—the man whose love she had scorned—laughed at because he was poor and she, a daughter of the rich.
Now he had come back, a man of wealth, position and power.
While she—she was the daughter of a thief—her name besmirched—and on the eve of her marriage to another man.
He offered to clear her name—to save her father from prison.

The STREET CALLED STRAIGHT

Directed by
Wallace Worsley
With a distinguished cast including
Naomi Childers & Milton Sills

What ruin, what unhappiness is the inevitable climax to the blind, reckless struggle to "keep up appearances"—to gratify every extravagant whim—to rise to the level of the more fortunate. Olivia learned it—when it was too late. She learned what in her blindness she had never seen.

A vivid, pulsating cross-section of life. The work of a master author, relentlessly shedding the light of truth on a problem vital to every American man and woman. The opulent luxuries of society life—dramatic entertainment that pulses with the passions of life.

AUTHOR'S POPULARITY SUPERCEDING STAR'S AND DIRECTOR'S

Much has been said and more written about the freaks of picture fortune. Perhaps more or less unconsciously we have all recognized in this publicity the fairy agent of our familiar "risen over night to movie fame" stories. We all recall the time not far behind when the star later to become a universal household friend, rested in oblivion, unheralded, unknown. In those days a picture was identified only by the stamp of its producing company. The players were mere instruments in the telling of the story. At this juncture, however, entered the press agent. May he receive deserved credit for smashing all speed records. The bewilderd star soon discovered that he occupied the foremost place in public attention. Be it here said that we have never heard of his resenting the position.

Passed a comparatively short space and with the presentation of one super-production, came the world's introduction to the director. He was an unknown quantity. That the reign of the star had been accomplished with swiftness made it no less supreme.

"What is a director? Does he really count? To what extent is he responsible for our entertainment?" So questioned the 1914 public, and questioning, it learned much. If thereafter the star divided considerable of his prestige with the director—well, certainly he could afford the loss. So a new personality became a recognized factor in the manufacture of the world's amusement. With his introduction of the all-star cast, the director added a definite, if not universal, triumph to his list. The purchase and production of big stories followed. It meant a lot, the advertising of these stories with few persons to divide the honors among. For one year ago it was considered unethical for an author to advertise! The reason for this condition does not interest us; it was true. Thus the director had little to fear from the man whose world renowned story he produced. Briefly, being conservative, the author was "out of the race."

And then came the change! The writer awoke and commenced a campaign which shook Picturedom to its foundation. His name, accomplishments, and intentions, blazoned forth in the usual channels, pleased the public possibly more than all previous attempts. In him it recognized an artist with more to his credit than any of the others —the true provider of the worth while. With his advent the last note of cheapness fell away from the photoplay. He, the renowned author, risked it, was enthusiastic about it. Today he is superceding both the star and the director with the public. Already he has usurped first place in some of our studios. He is learning the technique of picture production, and in many instances supervising the filming of his own stories. He considers the director his assistant, the star his instrument.

"Why," you ask, "the change?" "Why?" we leave you to answer. It means much! Has he occasioned this or have they? If, forgetting his "ethics," he "puts one over," what will be their responsibility in the matter? What is to follow?

Caesar fell, and D'Annunzio holds forth at Fiume.

IN LONDON

Lord Northcliffe of England, who owns half a hundred daily, weekly and monthly periodicals, including several movie magazines, is to become a motion picture producer.

THE ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

InstallmentThree

Before we leave the subject of the eyes, treated in the last issue, there is another point which should be of interest to people with small eyes. To make them appear larger requires much care, for it necessitates the use of paint very near the naked eyeball. Upon a very light flesh, the lightest obtainable, roll a shading stump, as described in the previous issue. However, use no cold cream, as it has a tendency to creep into the eyes and make them smart. After a good coating of paint has been secured, take the fingers of the left hand and pull the lower eyelid down until it is well away from the eyeball; then carefully paint the eyelid above the lashes upon the little line of flesh that is between them and the eye. The result, photographically, will be the same as the white of the eye, making the ball appear larger. Do not do the upper lid, as the eyelashes hanging down will serve to cover it and produce no result. It is not necessary to touch this with the finger, but it should be gotten as smooth as possible with the shading stump. The finished line should commence at the outside edge of the tear-duct and be brought around to the outside corner of the eye.

Some people use a small red dot upon the tear duct. This is unnecessary and often bad photographically.

A sleepy effect may be produced for comedy by the use of a very light flesh in place of the black lining the eyes. This light shading around the eye is also very good in producing a drunken effect. Two small dark shadows placed upon the upper and lower eyelids, about the width of the pupil, will also give an odd appearance, not unlike that obtained by the circus clown, who uses a vertical black line upon the eyelids above and below the pupil.

Sould a person have slight hollow or indentation which he wishes to bring out to the fullness of the rest of the face, a flesh or body color two shades lighter than that used upon the rest of the face, placed upon those spots, will assist in bringing them out normal. But the edges must be well blended one into the other.

In the case of the nose, a great many alterations can be accomplished by light and shadow. A crooked nose can be straightened to a great degree if the following instructions are carried out. Looking at yourself in the mirror, we will say that your nose curves to the right. First take a very little brown or red upon the index finger and throw a shadow along the left side of the subject undergoing alteration, at the point where the curve is the greatest. Then on the right side at the tip throw another light shadow. Now, using a flesh one shade lighter than that on the rest of the face, draw a high light down the center of the nose, curving it slightly to the left. This high light, the shadows and the flesh on the rest of the face should be carefully blended. By reversing this you would accentuate the crookedness (a good point to remember in character study). A slightly turned-up nose can be altered to a certain extent by running a line of light colored flesh from the bridge to the tip. A hooked nose can eliminate its prominence somewhat by running a light shadow of red from the bridge to the tip. People with broad noses can improve their looks by throwing shadows on either side, and high lighting it down the center of the top. This high light should not be too broad. Persons with large lobes to the nose can modify this considerably with shadows of red. Nostrils that are inclined to be white inside can be improved by inserting a little lip rouge. Should one be troubled with a broad bridge, carry the shading of the eyes a little over the edge of the nose. If the nostrils are too large, high light them with light flesh around the edges. This will produce the same effect as when used around the eyes—i. e., it will have a tendency to close them. If this is done with care, corrections should not be noctieable photographically.

Powder should next be used very freely. Always pat it upon the face with the puff; never rub it or wipe it. This must be done well, so as to take up all grease. Next brush the face off lightly with a soft baby brush to remove superfluous powder.

In treating the eyebrows, start, of course, with the left one first. See first that the brows are well clear of all powder; then take a shading stump and rub upon your liner (a dark person requires black, a blonde brown). Run a medium line, beginning just inside the hair at the point nearest the nose, through the center of the eyebrow, making a graceful curve, continuing it well on out past the corner of the eye (graduating it thinner and thinner), slightly curving the end upward, terminating it in a fine point. This little curve at the end will give a pleasing, smiling expression (all lines curving upward tend to make the face smile, while all lines curving downward give a sullen appearance). Eyebrows shoud not be drawn too close together. After

SAN FRANCISCO EXHIBITORS FORM ALLIANCE

The following is a resolution adopted by the Exhibitors' Protective League recently formed in San Francisco and vicinity:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that each exhibitor should have the right to purchase his own accessories and advertising matter at any place or in any manner which is most profitable to him. That the action of the Republic Film Corporation, through its local General Manager, to compel the exhibitors to purchase their accessories and advertising matter from its film exchange under the threat to cancel all contracts unless such is done, is antagonistic to the best interests of he exhibitors.

"Be it further resolved, that a committiee be appointed to call upon the San Francisco general manager of said Republic Film Corporation, and to notify him that the exhibitors here assembled resent such action on part of the Republic Film Corporation to compel them to buy their accessories from said exchange, and that we, the undersigned, hereby agree not to enter into any contract imposing upon us such obligations, as an interference with our rights and against all customs heretofore existing, with said Republic Film Corporation."

EXHIBITORS' DATE BOOK

An investigation has been made by several citizens' associations in Washington of the motion picture situation there.

The object is to obtain a censorship board for the District of Columbia.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN TO KEEP THEATRES OPEN

A special committee has been appointed by President Wm. A. Brady of the National Association of the motion picture industry to launch a nation wide publicity campaign designed to acquaint the general public and city officials with the importance of the open theatre during the prevalence of influenza.

Literature on this subject has been scattered broadcast throughout the country. Among this has been featured a letter to the National Association by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, in which he commends the motion picture industry for its assistance during last year's epidemic, and explains why he considers the decision then made to keep the theatres open a wise one.

"My principal purpose in keeping open the theatres in New York City," Dr. Copeland wrote, "was to prevent the spread of panic and hysteria, and thus to protect the public from a condition of mind which would predispose it to physical."

Five hundred copies of Dr. Copeland's letter were sent to each of the distributing companies for distribution through their exchange managers.

The committee in charge of the campaign consists of John C. Flinn of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation,, John M. Quinn of Vitagraph, Incorporated, and Frederick H. Elliott of the National Association.

The Republic Distributing Corporation has purchased from J. G. Pictures, Inc., "The Convert of Revenge," starring Grace Davison and Montague Love.

Emer R. Pearson has been named by Paul Brunet to succeed F. C. Quinby as director of Pathe Exchanges.

The American Film Co. has brought suit against Margarita Fisher claiming $52,000 damages for alleged breach of contract.

I. Bernstein, studio manager for the National Film Corporation of America, has left to attend the convention of short-reel distributors, to be held in Chicago February 23rd to the 27th inclusive.

Send $1.00 for six months subscription.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING—CENSORSHIP REGULATIONS

It is imprtant for those writers who would submit their work to the studios to know what limitations are placed about the producer by the National Board of Review, formally called the National Board of Censorship. This body must officially place its approval on a picture before it may be shown in every state in the Union. There are some states that do not require the production to meet with the requirements of the National Board, but producers are not keen about having to make a fight in order to have one of their pictures shown. This being the case, your story may be rejected because it will not pass the censorship board when produced.

Briefly stated, the requirements of the board are as follows:

No holding up to ridicule any religious beliefs or racial characteristics.

Avoid portraying the antics of a degenerate.

Avoid treating violation of marriage relations suggestively.

Avoid emphasizing loose marriage relations, free love, etc.

No interpretations of the serious relations of life in a vulgar and suggestive manner.

No attacks on existing customs, beliefs and manners which will offend the moral sense.

Avoid portraying trickery, wanton cruelty and violence in shocking details.

Avoid showing rough handling of women and children, the aged and infirm and cruelty to prisoners.

Eliminate the so-called "frontier justice" to obtain results in opposition to the law.

Handle with discretion stories which show the miscarriage of justice. The majesty of the law must be upheld.

There must always be shown a motive for the commission of a crime. The boards will not excuse the apparent approval of any motive that prompts a crime.

No story which casts a reflection on the United States army or navy will be passed. It is a violation of the law.

On account of its menacing suggestion, arson is very difficult to be shown. No minute detail must be shown. It should never be pictured as a laudable deed, or seldom used to cover up crime.

Any picture in which the leading character is a maniac will not be passed. Neither should the violence of one be depicted.

Stories in which a suicide is shown merely in order to get rid of a character will not pass. In no case will extended and gruesome details be permitted.

The showing of murder should be handled briefly. No labels on poison bottles or the use of knockout drops should be shown.

Pictures which cast a glamor around notorious characters, criminals, etc., will not be passed.

The showing in detail of the violently insane is discouraged.

Portrayal of the use of drugs which has a tendency to excite curiosity and experimentation will not be permitted.

Sacrilege against sacred things, such as the Bible, places of religious worship, priests, nuns, ministers, sisters, etc., will not be approved.

PICTURES IN THE FAR EAST

"Motion pictures are taking the far east by storm," according to Harry Corson Clarke, recently returned to Los Angeles from a tour including Australia, China, Java and other Oriental points.

"American films are leading the list, but producers here must be careful when they reproduce far eastern scenes to do so with fidelity. I saw a mob wreck a picture theatre in India because they were insulted by the fact that a Hindu woman of high caste had been played by some American character woman, much the same as she might have portrayed a southern negro mammy."

Clarke declares that William S. Hart is regarded as the ideal of Americanism by the natives of the far east. Blanche Sweet and Bessie Barriscale are the favorites in Port Moresby, on the Island of Papua, Macassar, in the Celebes, Surabaya, Batavia in Java, Sabang in Sumatra, Penang in The Straits.

William Desmond is tremendously popular in Australia. He is remembered for the work he did in that country as leading man with the J. C. Williams studios. Hundreds of girls asked for his address when they knew Clarke's company was from America.

Charlie Chaplin is of course a universal favorite, while J. Warren Kerrigan and Eddie Polo were found to be the idols of the Chinese.

CLYDE BENSON TO LEAVE SCREEN FOR PORCH CLIMBING

Clyde Benson, who has an important part with Jack Dempsey in "The Mystery Man," had to fall out of a second story window on the set three times last week. Clyde says it was so easy that he is going to adopt porch climbing as a profession, as it is lucrative and there is no danger of getting caught in Los Angeles.

THE ART OF MAKE-UP

the lines are completed, take a small toothbrush or mascaro brush and use to broaden the lines. This will also serve to make the hair of the eyebrow blend in, and remove any accumulated lumps.

We next will consider mascaroing the eyelashes. Moisten a small brush and rub upon the mascaro until you have a thin deposit (too thick a deposit will leave lumps upon the lashes, which are very undesirable in "close-ups"). In applying this, place the brush close to the lashes and, instead of brushing it on, blink the lashes onto the brush. This will prevent mascaro from getting on the eyelids, a mistake which should be very carefully avoided, as mascaro is most difficult to get off. It will be necessary to brush the lower lashes. Should the lashes stick together after mascaroing, take a pin and drawn it between them. People with heavy lashes do not need to mascaro at all; only wet the index finger and thumb and draw lashes between them to remove all grease and powder. Mascaro is injurious to lashes, as it causes them to break off; it is also very painful when it gets in the eye, and in a weeping scene it will invariably run down the cheeks. Some people use cosmetic, which is very good behind the footlights, but most unsatisfactory for picture work. It cannot be put on fine enough not to show up lumpy in "close-ups."

Care must be taken to note the order in which these things are done. Never mascaro the lashes, line the eyebrows, or rouge the lips, until after powdering.

EDDY POLO

Alias Eddie Polo ("ie" out, "y" in). It happened last week; just changed the way of spelling his name.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

H. Thompson Rich

H. Thompson Rich was once editor-in-chief of the Forum Magazine in New York City. In fact, in those days he was a magazine specialist, having for some time been a contributor to the American, the Smart Set, Leslie's Weekly, Munsey's, and Smith's.

Therefore it was a source of great surprise to his friends when, upon returning from the army, Mr. Rich chose to enter pictures, a to him altogether unknown field. He had made his decision, however, after characteristic deliberation, and the following quotation tells how he figured:

"Every true writer welcomes the widest audience, for audiences are the rason d'etre of the writer. Compare then the limited audience of even the most popular magazines and novels with the host which sits before the silver sheet. It was a matter of scope. Having received a vision of the coming supremacy of the photoplay, with its universal appeal, my goal became motion pictures."

For one year Mr. Rich did scenarios for Vitagraph, and then he joined forces with Metro, where he is at present picturizing big features. His latest accomplishment is the adapatation of "Fine Feathers," by Eugene Walter.

ART IS AGAIN AMONG US

A. S. Keszthelyi, the Hungarian portrait painter, has been added to the art staff of the Jesse D. Hampton productions. He will create decorative paintings for the interior sets of future Hampton productions, and will also illumine sub-titles. The artist studied in the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna, and at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Munich. At the International Exhibition at Budapest in 1903, his portrait won the Harkanyi prize, also the Rothschild's prize in Vienna the same year. Mr. Keszthelyi was formerly a member of the faculty of the Carnegie Technical Schools, Pittsburg. Among the prominent men and women whose portraits he has painted are the late Queen Elizabeth of Hungary, former Vice-President Fairbanks, his wife, and E. P. Clark, Los Angeles capitalist.

Al Davis an India Chief—Al Davis, who is assisting Herbert Blanche in the direction of "The Hope," is playing the Afghanistan chief in the production.

Visit Tia Juana—George McGuire, Fred Booth, Tom Storey, Joe Whalen and William Swagert of the Metro studio were visitors at Tia Juana Sunday. They took in the races and other attractions.

Jack Hoxie will resume his work with the National Film Corporation of America about the middle of March. He has been resting since the "Lightning Bryce" serial, in which he was starred. The new production will be a western feature.

Russell Simpson is playing one of his typical roles in Reggie Barker's Goldwyn production, "The Branding Iron." After this picture he will sign with Edgar Lewis.

Herbert Grimswood is at Metro with Herbert Blache in "The Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Simpson at their Hollywood home. Mr. Jones has recently come from the New York stage.

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wisn the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING

offers a great opportunity to those who have ideas. The supply of good stories is not keeping pace with the demand and is to the outside writer that the producers must look for new material. Our treatise "Ten Million Photoplay Plots," written by Wycliffe A. Hill, author of "Scientific Plot Building" in Camera!, offers you complete and detailed instructions in photoplay writing. Read what those who know have to say about it.

"Would be helpful to anyone who wants to learn the technique of writing for the screen," Douglas Fairbanks Studio.

"Probably the best treatise on dramatic plot construction, as applied to the photoplay, that has ever been written."—Federal Photoplays.

"It fills a long-felt want."—Film Fun Magazine.

WALLACE REID TO APPEAR AT REOPENING OF THE LITTLE THEATRE

A new producing playhouse where the latest plays will be presented from time to time featuring visiting stars of the stage and screen is announced for this city. The Little Theatre is to be re-opened Monday, February 23rd, under the direction of Frank Egan, for a season of dramatic successes.

Arrangements have been completed with Harry Corson Clarke to stop his round-the-world tour long enough to produce "The Rotters," an English play by H. K. Maltby, as the first attraction. Mr. Clarke will share stellar honors with Wallace Reid, who has been loaned from the screen as a special added attraction.

"The Rotters" ran for more than a year at the Garrick Theatre in London, and is still playing in England. It is a satire of the George Bernard Shaw type. The American rights were purchased by Harry Corson Clarke while in London, and this will be the first time it has been played in the West.

Egan has concluded negotiations with Oliver Morocco for the Los Angeles rights to a number of his best known successes now playing in New York. "Please Get Married" will be the second play produced at the Little Theatre, which hereafter will be known as Egan's Little Theatre.

Egan plans to make his playhouse a society center. The foyer is being entirely redecorated, and receptions will be held there at the close of the second act.

PICTURE STARS TO MAKE FOREIGN TOURS

It was learned recently that three film stars are to depart in April for their respective native lands.

Sessue Hayakawa and his wife, Tsuri Aoki, are leaving for Japan. Anna Q. Nilsson goes to Sweden. All are to take pleasure trips, and expect to be gone from two to four months.

Southern California is again asked to help share the burden placed upon us by suffering humanity in Europe.

This time it is our Jewish friends in Europe for which a National campaign has been under way for the past few months in eastern and western states. The campaign organization is known as the American Jewish Relief Committee, and the dates for the Southern California campaign have been definitely set for the week of March 14th. The National campaign is for a fund of thirty-five million dollars to relieve the present day and future day suffering of over eleven million Jewish children and adults who have been trampled under over and over again by the war armies in Europe.

In Poland and other countries devastated by the war, it is stated that the lives of eight hundred thousand children are entirely dependent upon the success of this campaign. Only a few weeks ago two ships left New York harbor with cargoes totaling two millions of food and clothing supplies for these people. This is only a small part of the necessary help that must be given and was made possible by the splendid response to the campaigns that have been held in the eastern and middle west states.

The campaign director for Southern California will be H. M. Haldeman, who so ably directed Red Cross campaigns during the war periods. Mr. Haldeman has appointed as campaign chairman Walter L. Newton, who is appointing county chairmen in each of the nine counties comprising Southern California. These appointments will be announced later.

The quota for Southern California has been set at five hundred thousand dollars, and the county quotas as decided upon by the general committee will be announced in a few days. It is announced by the chairman that this campaign is appealing to Jews and non-Jews alike. If left to the Jews alone, it could not be accomplished.

Casting Directory

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

Charge for listing, including change each week, is $1.00 per month.

THE yield of securities held in California is vitally affected by taxation. Both bonds and stocks are personal property. Some are entirely subject to California taxation, some are tax exempt and others are taxable in part. There are severe penalties for non-declaration of property subject to taxation. These problems are fully explained in this booklet shown in accompanying illustration.

The Federal Income Tax affects the yield of all corporation securities in proportion to the individual's income. Tables are given showing the exact tax for various incomes, the percentage of income paid in taxes, and the resulting reduction in yield of bonds and stocks. The investor will find that these tables with full explanation of their workings of great value in investment problems.

PRODUCTION NOTES AMONG STUDIOS

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

MORANTI COMEDIES, INC., START PRODUCTION

The Moranti Comedies, Inc., announce that they have leased one-half of the Balboa studios at Long Beach for the production of their series of 12 two-reel comedies. "Barbershop Gossip" was started this week, the initial scenes of which were taken at Catalina Island. Al Moranti, brother of Milburn Moranti the star, is directing. Clark Bond, formerly with Hampton Productions, has been engaged as cameraman. Richard Currier is business manager and "Shorty" Everett is assistant director.

Sada Cowan, author and playwright, and for the past year scenario writer for C. B. and W. C. DeMille, has resigned her position at Lusky's and opened offices in the Markham Building, Hollywood, as a freelance scenarioist, paying especial attention to titling. Miss Cowan received her first commission from Brentwood, and is putting into scenario form an original story shortly to be produced at that studio, featuring ZaSu Pitts under Henry Kolker's direction.

MAYFLOWER STARTING AGAIN

The script of "Athalie" by Robt. W. Chambers has just been finished for Mr. Sydney Franklin. Miss Sylvia Breamer will play the lead with Conrad Nagel playing opposite. Miss Breamer will reach here Monday from New York.

Mr. Franklin and cameraman are leaving for San Francisco to take boat scenes for "Athalie."

Mr. Larkin and Mr. Dwan left New York for Los Angeles on Thursday. They will start production soon at the Brunton Studio.

METRO TO BUILD LONG ISLAND STUDIO

Metro Pictures Corporation will break ground within six weeks for a new Long Island studio, according to an announcement from West Coast officials. The exact site will be given out in a few days.

B. L. FOX PRODUCTIONS TO START

The B. L. Fox Productions are to start this week at the Francis Ford Studio. The first picture will be "The Blind Musician," a sixreel feature. B. L. Fox is the director.

The production of another ZaSu Pitts picture for Brentwod is scheduled for commencement this week under Henry Kolker's direction. The story is an original by Sarah Mason, tentatively titled "The Heart of Twenty," and the supporting cast so far announced includes Jack Pratt, Percy Challenger, Aileen Manning, Pearl Lindner, Tom Gallery and Hugh Saxon.

Paul Hurst has filed suit in the Superior Court against the National Film Company for $20,100 damages. Hurst alleges that the company broke its contract with him.

Mr. W. T. McCulley has been engaged as assistant production manager at Universal. He was formerly director for National Film Cmpany before he was called to the war.

The titles for "The Family Honor," the latest King W. Vidor production which was completed this week for the First National Exhibitors Circuit, are to be produced in art settings photographed from oil paintings by Homer Hobson. Florence Vidor played the leading role. Ben Alexander is also in the cast.

The first scenes to Hank Mann's latest comedy were taken this week at the Glendale city jail. Herman C. Raymaker is directing.

CAMEO PRODUCTIONS INCORPORATE

Robert H. Kelly, director, and Henry A. McCarty, author and scenario writer, have just organized and incorporated an independent producing company, to be known as "Cameo Productions," for $50,000.00.

Mr. Kelly has had a long and varied experience in picture production, first with the Selig Polyscope Company in both their Chicago and Los Angeles Studios and with the Panama Expedition making the Rex Beach "Ne'er Do Well;" then as assistant to Reginald Barker at the old Thos. Ince Studio, in the making of "War's Women," "The Bugle Call," etc. He was later associated with Leonce Perret at the Biograph Studios, New York, and then was Manager of Productions for the Empire All Star Corporation and the Edna Goodrich Mutual Productions at Glendale, L. I., New York. He has since been associated with Colin Campbell in the production of the 'Corsican Brothers' and other features.

Mr. McCarty is a writer of ability and is well known in the local picture world. He has transferred to the company all his rights in a number of original screen stories.

Cameo Productions includes on its executive staff Frank G. Fanning and Robert E. Murray. Studio arrangements and the date of actual production will be announced shortly. The organization is legally represented by Lynden Bowring and will make its headquarters in the Title Insurance Building.

The Director of "The Woman in Room 13," now at the California Theatre.

TWO WEBER PRODUCTION COMPANIES

We would like to call our readers' and the trade's attention to the fact that there are two L. Weber Production companies, the Lois Weber and the Lawrence Weber Productions. They receive each other's mail, and this causes an unnecessary delay to all parties.

"JUST OUTSIDE THE DOOR" STARTED

The following cast has started work on "Just Outside the Door" for the Lawrence Weber Productions: Edith Haller, Betty Blythe, Ida Lewis, J Barney Sherry, Arnold Gregg and Bert Apling. The story is from the stage production of the same name from the pen of Jules Eckhard Goodman. George Irving is directing, assisted by Nick Grinde. Max Schneider turns the crank.

WILLIAM D. TAYLOR PRODUCTIONS

William D. Taylor is preparing to take up work on the all-star pictures to be featured by Paramount as William D. Taylor Productions. The first one of these is to be a screen version of the stage play, "Young America." Lewis Sargent, who played "Huckleberry Finn," will have the principal role in the picture.

GOLDWYN TO DISTRIBUTE BOSWORTH FILM

The first Hobart Bosworth Production to be filmed by J. Parker Read, Jr., is to be issued by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. Work has commenced on it under the direction of Irvin Willat at the Ince Studio.

Mr. Bosworth will appear in five special productions within the next year.

RAY TO FILM "45 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY

CAST FOR "WHO"

The Pacific Producing Company announce the following cast for their new picture, "Who": Babe Sedgewick, Joe Moore, R. Kortman, Jenks Harris and George Wililams. It is a Northwestern story, written by Francis Powers, directed by W. J. Craft, photographed by Joe Mayer.

PICTURIZING "PARLOR, BEDROOM AND BATH

A. P. Younger, Metro scenarioist, has started the script of 'Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the farce by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan that will be Viola Dana's picture following "Eliza Comes to Stay."

NEW COMPANY ORGANIZING

Los Angeles is soon to have a new film company, backed by New York, Cleveland and Kansas City capitalists, headed by Conrad H. Mann, according to reports.

Mr. Mann, who is general manager and treasurer of the Food Products Co. of Kansas City, was formerly president of the Chamber of Commerce there. He is now in Los Angeles interviewing stars with a view to obtaining their signatures to contracts.

Eddie Polo, directed by Edward Kull, has gone to Catalina Island to film scenes for the tenth episode of the Universal serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," by Hope Loring.

Word received from Henry McRae, directing Marie Walcamp in "The Dragon's Net" gives the information that work is progressing rapidly. Scenes have been taken in Japan, China, Formosa, in the South Seas, in the Philippines, and a stop will be made at Hawaii before the company returns to Universal City in May.

Metro has purchased the screen rights to "The Kiss Burglar."

The Goldwyn Company has purchased "Madame X," by Alexander Brisson, and turned it over to Lloyd to direct. Pauline Frederick will play the title role.

Joseph Henaberry will direct Robert Warwick in "The Man From Blankley's," at the Lasky Studio, with Bebe Daniels as leading woman.

William de Mille returns next week from New York prepared to begin work on "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," by Leonard Merrick. So far no cast has been selected for this big picture.

The Marshall Neilan company has moved to the new Jasper studios in Hollywood, where work on a new production will soon begin.

Youngdeer Productions have taken over the Rollins Studio. Mr. Youngdeer is preparing for his super seven reel production, "Watuska."

"AUTHOR'S POPULARITY SUPERSEDING STARS' AND DIRECTORS"

Below we submit a few answers to the "Author, Star and Director" editorial of Feb. 21st. The attention being received by this question proves that the film world is awakening to existing conditions. What will be the outcome?

FROM ONE OF OUR PIONEER DIRECTORS

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 24, 1920.

Editor Camera!:

I have read with great interest your article comparing authors, directors and stars in the picture world, and feel that perhaps the viewpoint of the director would be of interest.

It is true beyond doubt that the author is one of the prime factors in making motion pictures what they are today, but with the writing of a story the work is but begun. The scenario writer, in collaboration with the director, has a task that is really colossal. A story that reads well, is interesting, has a punch, is of course absolutely necessary, but it has to be fitted to the requirements of the screen, and that means that it has to be visualized, pictured in all its phases and settings; in other words, the director has to play it in his mind from beginning to end before any work on it is attempted. Much that the author deemed essential is eliminated, other features are introduced, and in this work the experience of the director is essential.

Then comes the selection of the cast, the characters best suited, the instruction of them as to the way in which they must play their parts, the entire ensemble of "sets" and locations to be supervised and corrected. All this falls upon the shoulders of the director, and unless he understands his business the picture fails, no matter how good the story, no matter how accomplished the actor.

The author means much, the actors mean much, and last but not least, the proper direction of a picture means success or failure.

(Signed) COLIN CAMPBELL.

METRO SCENARIST SAYS AUTHOR SUPREME

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 23, 1920.

Editor Camera!:

There is no longer any doubt about it. The time has come when the author is pre-eminent. Witness what is going on at Metro, Famous Players, Goldwyn and elsewhere. The greatest writers of the day are being hurtled into pictures at salaries they can not resist. And it is going to be the wisest move pictures have ever made.

Once the star was high and mighty. Then came the day of the director. Now it is the cry, "Author! Author!" that resounds through Studioland. And successful and talented writers are getting salaries that would make most stars and directors green with envy.

There is only one class of writer who has not yet come into his own—and that is the scenario writer. But his day is coming, too—and coming soon—for he performs a service so vital and valuable that it can scarcely be overestimated. It is he who makes or breaks the story. The work of the greatest author can fall completely flat on the screen, unless the continuity writer who adapts it for the screen knows his game and brings to it sympathy, talent and a very highly developed and intricate technique.

The continuity writer is an important man in the studio today—but his importance is growing by leaps and bounds. Already most studios refuse to let a director make alterations in a script after the continuity writer has finished it. The significance of this is simple. The continuity writer is the real director. He it is who, detail by detail, traces the way the story is to be filmed. The director, following the finished script, becomes at best no more than his good assistant. And this is as it should be. For the pictures are big enough to give every department what is due it.

If I were to classify the various chief ingredients of a motion picture, in the order of their importance, I would rank them as follows: Author, first; scenario writer, second; director, third; star, fourth.

These are my honest opinions, written particularly for Camera!, in answer to the editorial of February 21st.

(Signed) H. THOMPSON RICH.

FROM A "YOU GOTTA SHOW ME"—

THE LITTLE GEM THEATRE

Wagon Turn, Mo., Feb. 23, 1920.

To the Editor of Camera!:

I seen your article about authors being more important than stars and directors.

I don't know nothing about directors, but suppose they represent capital, same as the directors in our bank here, but I want to ask you what crazy fool notions you'll get next saying, "Authors are more important than stars."

Authors ain't never been heard of in our town, and no one ever knew pictures had authors.

There is only two things the people who come to my show care about, and that is the price of admission and the stars.

The first thing they want to know after they find out whether it's a five or ten-cent night is if I got Charlie, Mary or Doug—any one of the three stars gets me money.

I think there ought to be more'n three stars, as that fool exchange man keeps trying to put ordinary pictures over on me

The best house I have had this year was last Saturday—the exchange man sent me Charlie's latest picture, "The Face on the Bar Room Floor." I noticed that Essany was the author, but I'm the only man in town who even noticed the name of the author, and that's because I'm in the picture business and watch for them things.

The exchange man has promised me Mary's latest picture. I asked hi mwhat it was and he said he would send me "Tess of the Storm Country," unless Mary released something newer between now and that show date, but he's such a liar I never know what I'll git till I git it.

If you want to know who is the most important man in pictures next to stars, it's the exchange man. If you knew what us exhibitors had to put up with them crooks, you'd try to find an honest one some time.

What we git is what they take a notion to send—C. O. D.—so we got to pay the express company in order to show, as no exhibitor who knows his business ever wants a dark house, unless he had an exchange man inside it and a big club handy to go after him.

Producers waste their money advertising a picture to exhibitors, as we got a fat chance of ever getting it. What's needed is an addition to hell and a calamity on "Exchange Row."

Authors—there ain't no such thing—all there is to pictures is the Three Stars and the Damned Exchange Men!

Yours respectively,

JOHN CASE.

THE ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

Installment Four

We will now proceed with the lips. This study which is a vital one applies possibly more to ladies than to gentlemen. A lady with too thick or too thin lips can by careful manipulation improve them greatly. Since the eyes and the mouth are the two most expressive features in motion picture photography it is necessary to give them unlimited attention. Should the mouth be large it will be necessary to reduce it. A person who has thick lips should when applying the body or flesh paint carry it well down over the lips covering the sides rather heavily. Always be sure that your lip rouge is not too dark. A medium or even lighter rouge is preferable. If a stick is used you can apply it that way. If rouge in a jar is used the little finger is the best medium for application. Rub the little finger upon the rouge until you have a fair amount of color deposited. Then start at the left center drawing toward the mouth as you apply never sideways. The most beautiful mouth is the Cupid's bow. To describe this more fully we present a sketch showing how a large mouth can be reduced and also the correct shape the lips should be painted. If one's lips are exceptionally large it is best not to try to make them very small for in "close-ups" the camera will show the deception. One may always steal or add a little as the case may require, however. The corners of the lips should terminate in a point both upper and lower. Never allow them to be thick at the corners, for this produces an unsatisfactory effect. Should the lips be thin make up the Cupid's bow a little above the actual line. By rolling a shading stump upon the lip rouge and placing a small faint line inside the upper lip, as shown in the diagram, one produces a smiling expression. This, however, is merely a matter of choice.

EXHIBITORS' SERVICE PAGE

SUIT AGAINST "THE TONG MAN" A FAILURE

The Chinese Six Companies has failed in its effort to get a court injunction against Sessue Hayakawa's picture, "The Tong Man." The court denied the application, although Chinese leaders in this country express the belief that the picture was made under official encouragement to create a sentiment against the Chinese in America.

Peter B. Kyne, short story writer and novelist, recently signed an agreement with C. E. Shurtloff, Inc., whereby the latter is given exclusive screen rights to all of the short stories and novels written by Mr. Kyne for the next three years. The deal also includes the entire output of the author up to date.

EXCHANGE MAN GOES TO STUDIO

Arthur Lamb, manager of the Metro Exchange in Los Angeles for the past year and a half, has taken up new duties on the executive staff of the coast studios. Harry Listig, Metro district representative, is now in charge at the exchange.

HELD UP BY RAIN

Delayed in filming scenes near Santa Barbara by the recent rains, May Allison and the company filming "The Cheater" will not return to the studio until the first of next week.

Grace Cunard has finished her first two-reeler, "The Gasoline Buckaroo," under the Marion H. Kohn productions banner. Miss Cunard is supported chiefly by Cole Hebert. Her second production will be "The Man-Hater."

CHARLIE OUT?

The Brazilian has a great aversion to violence. He never engages in a fist fight, and dislikes even to be touched. As a result our rough and tumble comedy fails with him as a mirth producer. His is said to be the one country which refuses to smile either with or at Charlie Chaplin.

The State Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York will be held at the Utica Hotel, city of Utica, March 9th and 10th.

Mr. Ichihiko Omita, of Tokyo, has secured the Japanese rights on two pictures, "Back to God's Country" and "The Blue Bird."

"The Prince of Avenue A," featuring James J. Corbett, is announced by Universal as its special attraction for release during the week of February 23d. The cast consists of Mary Warren, Harry Northrup, Cora Drew, Richard Cummings and Frederick Vroom.

Seven thousand miles of film are handled yearly in the Goldwyn laboratories at the Culver City Studio. If placed end to end, would reach from the studio in California to the head office in New York City and back again.

J. H. Mayer, who has been acting as Eastern District Publicity Manager for Universal, has been appointed Director of Publicity, succeeding Harry Rice, who returns to Chicago as District Publicity Manager for the Middle West. Mr. Mayer has been with the New York Publicity Department of Universal since last summer, coming here from Cincinnati, where he was in charge of publicity for the local exchange.

A wire received at the Universal New York offices from Harry Rise states that he is comfortably settled in his new quarters at Chicago. He will immediately put into effect plans which he has made for reorganizing the publicity service in the Chicago territory, which embraces parts of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Kentucky.

CHICAGO LOCKOUT THREAT

Special to Camera!

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Motion picture theater owners today began a fight against union leaders which may result in a lockout closing all "movie" houses in Chicago.

The owners declare that they are tired of alleged dictatorial demands made by the Moving Picture Operators' heads. As a result they notified all operators belonging to the union that they would be discharged next Sunday if the union heads are not dismissed.

The heads replied that through New York union headquarters, the operators would boycott all film companies sympathizing with the theater owners.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS OFFERED FOR DOG STAR!

Ten thousand dollars for a dog! This is an authentic offer and was made yesterday by C. E. Shurtleff, president of C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., to J. H. Scott, noted wolf dog owner. According to the agreement, the animal in question is to be educated and trained and ready for delivery in the course of twelve months; also, he must pass a rigid examination before any money changes hands. The educated canine is to play the stellar role in an adaption of Jack London's gripping novel, "The Call of the Wild."

C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., owns the exclusive screen production rights to all of the stories of the late Jack London. Production is now going on at the Metro Studio, where the main offices have been established.

The complete interior of a substantial farmhouse, both up and downstairs, has been erected at the Hollywood Studios for David Butler's first starring production, "Sitting on the World." It is a replica of the farmhouse in which Sophie Kerr laid many of the principal scenes of her story from which the picture was adapted.

"THE LITTLE SHEPHERD OF KINGDOM COME"

"The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," John Fox, Jr.'s, immortal tale of old Kentucky, is by far the most satisfactory vehicle yet provided for Jack Pickford. He is very appealing as the little orphan and has an opportunity for much variation in the role of Chad. His characterization of the soldier is more convincing than that of the mountain boy, however.

Pauline Stark does "Melissy" perfectly. More footage should have been allowed her.

Clara Horton is quite satisfactory as Margaret, the pretty pampered little rebel.

Edythe Chapman as Mrs. Dean and James Neill as Major Buford add one more success to their already full calendar.

Other members of the cast are J. Park Jones, Clark Marshall, R. D. McLean, Dwight Crittenden, Aileen Manning, Dudley Hendrick, Aggie Herring, Tod Burns, Lee Phelps, Milton Brown, George Dromgold, John Foster, H. Milton Ross and Nick Cogley.

The picture strays somewhat from the original story, but Director Wallace Worsley has made of it a very convincing photoplay.

The performance given at the California Theater, Los Angeles, is made doubly effective by the orchestra's sympathetic presentation of the old Southern airs and an artistic prologue.

"The Little Shepherd" is going to please the entire country.

ENGLAND OBJECTS

According to Joseph W. Grigg, staff correspondent of The World (New York), England is fast becoming bored with the patriotism displayed in American made pictures presented for her entertainment. The British audience, ever a trifle sarcastic in regard to our "war brewed,' offerings, is complaining openly at the enforced acceptance of them now. As yet American pictures are recognized as much superior to British productions, but the disgust that is spreading will undoubtedly result in injuring our distribution in England, is the claim. We are entreated to "can the flag waving," and are asked how we would enjoy watching European patriotic outbursts night after night in our entertainment palaces.

An added grief to our "overseas" cousins is the treatment of prohibition (they relentlessly brand it "insidious propaganda") in our current photoplays. If they do not relish our "horn blowing," they refuse to digest this last condition, which is looked upon as a menace to their personal liberty.

We submit the above without comment.

WHERE TO FIND THE PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Wesley Barry is now under contract with Maurice Tourneur.

Harry Finkenstein, assistant director and continuity man for Scott Dunlap on his last eight pictures, is now at the Thos. H. Ince studio.

Yukio Aoyama is playing the Chinese lead in "Danger Trail," opposite Helen Holms in her latest serial.

BECOMING POLITICAL

The Hoover-for-President boom has penetrated moving picture circles.

At a recent meeting of the Hollywood chapter of the Actor's League of America, held at the home of J. Warren Kerrigan and attended by a number of the most prominent players and directors in the screen industry, final plans were formulated for the establishing of a Hoover-for-President club. An election of officers was held and Kerrigan was made president; Edwin Carewe, vice-president; and Owen Moore, secretary. Warde, Clyde Benson, Roy Stewart, Norman Kerry and Thomas Guise.

Permanent headquarters for the club will be opened shortly in the Markham building, Hollywood. As a feature of the forthcoming campaign, Kerrigan, Nowell and Ward intend to make personal appearances in various motion picture houses throughout Southern California.

SCIENTIFIC PLOT BUILDING

Installment 13 of Scientific Plot Build-

"Box office possibilities" is one of the main factors to be considered by the producer when the expenditure of a large amount of money is to be made on a production. In other words, the question is whether or not the picture will have a popular appeal—and draw the nickels and dimes of the public through the little ticket window. That is why they pay big prices for the works of well-known magazine writers and novelists.

Once in a while a photo playwright conceives a theme on which to base a story which will have a popular appeal, in which case he may demand a good price for it. These opportunities are sometimes presented on account of the timeliness of the subject selected. Perhaps millions of dollars worth of advertising has been given the subject by the newspapers, and the public is all worked up to the point of being interested in the picture when it is completed. That is why good war stories were a paying proposition during the war. They are out of the question now. The public is interested in other things.

There are some themes which are always calculated to stir up public discussion. Cecil de Mille knew this when he produced his series of picture plays dealing with the question of divorce. Henry Christeen Warnack, who is now the production manager of the Capitol Film Company, hit the nail on the head when he wrote "The Honor System." Griffith did the same thing when he produced "The Birth of a Nation." One of the latest "knockouts" is the "Miracle Man," produced by George Loan Tucker. You see the public is just now interested in the subject of the power of right thinking. Allan Holubar realized the value of a story which dealt with the great industrial unrest when he wrote and produced "The Right to Happiness." There is one subject which is always before the public mind and which has not been handled by the producers yet and which should be a big drawing card. It is the question of dress reform among the fair ladies who insist on trying each year to see how much more of their loveliness they can show. I have a story based on the subject, but so far the producers have been afraid to make the break.

Such sensational pictures as "Damaged Goods," "Purity," "Hypocrites," "Where Are My Children?" "Hell Morgan's Girl" and "Traffic in Souls" made big money in their time, but would not be a success now. Public taste has changed—for the present, anyway.

The Cost of Production

Now, right here is where we get right close to the producer. This subject concerns him vitally, hence, it also concerns the outside writer. Too many beginners in the business of scenario writing do not stop to consider, when their stories are submitted, whether they are going to cost one thousand dollars or a hundred thousand, to produce.

Large interior sets, such as ballrooms, large cafes, courtrooms, department store interiors, street sets showing ancient architecture or that of a foreign land, big mobs or crowds in evening dress, battle scenes, blowing up buildings, railroad wrecks, snow storms, big fires, sinking ships, earthquakes, and so forth,, demand the expenditure of large sums of money, and a story must be big enough commercially to justify the same.

Every man, woman and child that is seen in a mob represents the expenditure of from $3 to $5 per day, and it is sometimes necessary for them to be used several days. People in evening dress in cafes, ballrooms, etc., cost from $5 to $15 per day each. Every maid, butler, friend, juror, or other "bit" in a picture, means an additional salary of from $7 to $15 dollars per day.

Sets are of three kinds: Full stage interiors, street sets and corners. The interior of a large cafe, drawing-room, courtroom, church, theater or studio would require a full stage set. There should not be more than three to five in the average five-reel picture. Three is enough. The number of corners does not matter much, except that about 50 per cent of the story should be played on exteriors—for the sake of diversity. A bedroom, business office, prison cell, hospital ward, kitchen and such sets are "corners."

Some locations, or exterior views, are expensive to secure. If snow scenes, river shipping, Louisiana swamps, turpentine forests and such other settings as are not within easy reach of Los Angeles are called for in the story it may be rejected for that reason.

(Editor's Note.—In the next of Mr. Hill's articles he wil outline the twelve principal reasons why stories are rejected at the studios. This will be interesting to everyone who ever tried to sell a scenario. Do not miss it.

How to Judge the Safety of Securities

"The great danger in depending too much on recommendation of "friends" cannot be too strongly emphasized. The great mass of investors do not rely upon their judgment of the real value of securities, and do not even care to know facts."
Magazine of Wall Street, Nov. 29, 1919.

THE value of securities can only be determined by expert analysis. If you cannot or will not make such an investigation yourself, you must depend upon a reliable investment house to do so for you.
If you will ask your banker you will find that this firm has a reputation which is second to none for integrity and for giving honest, dependable service to investors.
We do not pretend to be able to give "tips" on how to get rich quickly. We can help you to invest your funds in amounts of $100 or more so that your money will be safe and you can obtain a reasonable income. Write, call or telephone for our latest list of investment securities.

SILVER STANDARD MINING & EXTRACTION CO. OF NEVADA

SILVER IS NOW IN THE RANKS OF THE FIRST KNOWN!

Are you aware of the enormous possibilities awaiting careful investment in a strong silver producing enterprise
Just as the copper mines made millions of dollars for investors during the period of the war, Silver will return millions of dollars to investors for years to come. The present prduction and that of several years previous has been inadequate to meet the demand of art and industry, to say nothing of coinage.

SILVER PRODUCTION IS PRESAGE TO NEW PRODUCTION—NEW WEALTH—INDEPENDENCE!

—There is a silver mining organization in Nevada that bears strong promise of disclosing important and sensational silver ore bodies!

—From this development large and consistent dividends can be expected for years hence. The operations of the SILVER STANDARD MINING & ETRACTING COMPANY OF NEVADA assure the investor an opportunity for remarkable market profits. The sane and conservative management augurs well for the stability of THIS SUPERIOR SILVER INVESTMENT.

THE SILVER STANDARD MINING AND EXTRACTION COMPANY OF NEVADA!

Owns and operates extensive silver bearing properties in the heart of the famous Eldorado mining district of Nevada.

This district vies with the richest district ever discovered in America and has the identical geological environment as that of the famous Comstock Lode. For a sturdy and substantial investment, we believe that the discriminating purchaser will find this offering second to none. The issue is deserving of serious consideration.

SINCE THE DAYS OF THE COMSTOCK MINE—OVER FIFTY YEARS AGO!

—The public has been awaiting an opportunity to participate financially in another silver mine with even chances for a new Comstock.

Statements made by authoritative and recognized mining counsel confirm that the same geological features that enriched the Comstock Mine are also embraced in the properties of the SILVER STANDARD. The Comstock Mine has a production record of over $1,000,000,000. At the same stage of development as the Silver Standard at present, it has been said that chances appear greater than did the famous Comstock Mine.

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

is an essential item. To get it when one needs it is another, especially when one is in a hurry or when quick action demands it to supply one's sudden wants, though he or she may have any amount of money but can't get hold of it at the moment when most desired. In such a case you will find that at A. B. Cohn Bros.' upstairs loan offices, conveniently and centrally located at 228 Mercantile place, will loan you any amount on such articles as diamonds, jewelry, silverware, etc., for any length of time. Private office and courteous treatment and quick action. Yourself is the only reference required; no other indorsers necessary. The magnitude of our business and being established over 49 years is of extreme importance. Our references, any Los Angeles bank, Duns' or Bradstreets.

The possession of a diamond means more than mere adornment, as it constantly increases in value, so do not sell them when you can get a liberal loan from us on same.

PHOTOPLAY WRITING
offers a great opportunity to those who have ideas. The supply of good stories is not keeping pace with the demand and is to the outside writer that the producers must look for new material. Our treatise "Ten Million Photoplay Plots," written by Wycliffe A. Hill, author of "Scientific Plot Building" in Camera!, offers you complete and detailed instructions in photoplay writing. Read what those who know have to say about it.

"Would be helpful to anyone who wants to learn the technique of writing for the screen," Douglas Fairbanks Studio.

"Probably the best treatise on dramatic plot construction, as applied to the photoplay, that has ever been written."—Federal Photoplays.

"It fills a long-felt want."—Film Fun Magazine.

THE ART OF MAKE-UP

The teeth come next. Gold fillings in the front photograph very badly and they must be given serious consideration. A little white tooth enamel placed over the gold will eliminate this defect.

Character Make-Up

We have now completed the straight make-up, and will proceed to the character study. Here is an opportunity for everyone to bring his initiative into play. Before commencing a character part, the scenario should always be read carefully to note the character's traits, peculiarities, temperament, health, etc., and consider the effect of these last upon his facial expression. In olden days legitimate stage villains were usually portrayed by evil looking persons with very dark drooping mustaches. The Vaudeville comedian was always attired in a very large checked burlesque suit, and presented an extremely ridiculous face. In other words, when he made his appearance he almost as much as said, "I am here to make you laugh." Today much more subtility is employed. Demonstrated mirth and sorrow are very much akin, in the respect that they are things which strike the brain unexpectedly. To produce the greatest effect the audience must not be aware of their coming. When you go to a theater, it is with the expectation of being entertained; consequently it is harder to make you laugh or cry there than it would be if you experienced the actual occurrence in everyday life. For instance a comedy situation screened may be very amusing, but the same actual unexpected experience would be much more so. I am dwelling on this subject to prevent over-exaggeration in make-up and dress. In portraying an old character that is to receive a lot of sympathy from the audience, do not make him up haggard and sorrowful. Have him rather a kindly old man, for in the former case trouble is foreshadowed, making any grief which may come to the character less effective upon the audience.

The dress or costuming of the character is the first thing to be considered. Go into every detail in this respect, for it is the artist's finishing touches which give his picture life. In treating back periods, brooches, pins, watch-chains, etc., should be carefully selected, for they all help in the general make-up. The old saying, "Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves" is a good adage to use in this respect. Take care of the details and the big things will take care of themselves. If an extra button will help your costume put it on. Have the finished effect right. Today even the extra people are carefully surveyed by the superintendent to see that their clothes are correct. True, the audience hardly ever notices any particular person in the background, but the addition of some little characteristic touch to a costume produces harmony and completes the scene. Maybe your shoes should be shined; maybe not. Do it or not as the case demands. And see that when you punch, you punch hard. A little slap does not "go over." Whether you be a lead or an extra, study detail carefully and you will find it a great help in boosting you up the ladder of success.

INTERESTING PRODUCTION IMPROVEMENTS

For some time there have been rumors afloat indicating the replacement of studio painted drops and backings, with photographic enlargements. J. S. Shipman, of the Shipman Process, after several years experimentation along this line, announces that he has successfully demonstrated that the larger his reproductions the sharper and stronger they become, a value which has hitherto been sadly lacking in reproductions.

Should this be the case, we see a large field for the Shipman Process work, as it is quite evident that such a service will save the companies large sums of money and considerable time in the elimination of "location" trips for the securing of picture atmosphere. It will also enable the producers to give many touches of beauty to pictures now denied them either by distance or prohibitive cost. Scenes from other lands could be brought home by this medium; snow scenes in summer in the studio; sunset and moonlight effects; bird's-eye views of cities (ostensibly taken from an airplane, but in reality the simple "panning" of the camera focused on a large reproduction of the scene desired); and a hundred and one other instances.

It is a big idea and when successfully carried out will become a boon to producers in this day of heavy "overhead" and the increasing demand of an educated public for realism in details.

By C. J. Barber

Cameramen, assistants and laboratory workers are cordially invited to make use of this department. It's your personal part of Camera! Address questions to C. J. Barber, care Camera, 326½ South Broadway.

M. M. asks how to be sure prints will not stick to ferrotype tins.

Ans.—Scrub thoroughly the tins with Fels Naptha soap and hot water, using a good brush. Dry. Disolve white wax in gasoline, rub on tins and polish with soft cloth. Success depends on keeping the tins clean. Wax between each set of prints. Scrub every five or six sets. A little extra work on your ferrotype tins will save many disappointments.

C. R. asks what make of lenses give greatest depth of focus.

Ans.—All anastigmat lenses of the same focal length and same aperture have the same depth of focus. Optical laws govern this quality in lenses and no maker can change it.

A. A. A. asks if there is any way to get good prints from flat negatives.

Ans.—Try this method: Fully expose prints and over-develop them, fix and wash thoroughly. Put into the following iodine bath until the whites are strongly blue, then fix for five minutes, wash, etc.

Potass. Iodide	30 gr.
Iodine	3 gr.
Water	10 oz.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS GUEST OF HONOR

Gouverneur Morris, who is in Los Angeles to assist in the filming of his book, "The Penalty," at the Goldwyn studios, was an honored guest and speaker at the annual informal dinner of the Yale Club of Southern California, at the University Club, Los Angeles, recently.

Old man Cupid has been quite busy around Universal City of late. Hal Hoadley, continuity writer, slipped away to San Diego and married Violet Shannon, who has been touring the Lyceum circuit with the Royal Italian Sextette. A day or two later Arthur Fresneda, Universal City cashier, announced his marriage to Catherine Finer, formerly a nurse at the St. Catherine Hospital, Santa Monica. During the same week Peggy O'Dare playing with Eddie Polo in his Universal serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," announced her engagement to A. G. Pegg, a San Francisco oil operator.

Vernon Dent, of the Hank Mann comedy company, this week fell heir to a large sum of money and a beautiful residence at Cape Cod, just outside of Boston, according to terms as set forth in the will of his late uncle, George Howard Dent, former inspector of public buildings for the City of Boston. Dent has been granted a month's leave of absence from the studio and plans to go east in a few days to settle affairs. He states he will continue work in pictures upon his return.

Local No. 33, I. A. T. S. E., will give its annual ball March 19th at the Goldberg Bosley academy, Sixteenth and Flower. The public is invited at $1.10 per couple.

WEEK BEGINNING TODAY

THE HISTORICAL FILM CORPORATION STARTING

One company of The Historical Film Company of America will start "shooting" Monday, March 8th. It will produce a series of six two-reel Bible stories compared with parallel cases in present times. The first of these stories is to be "The Prodigal Son." Upon the completion of this special series the plan is to commence with the Garden of Eden and screen the entire Bible in like manner.

A little later a second company will produce one hundred thou- reel pictures depicting incidents in the lives of the men and women who have done the most to build the United States Government and country from colonial times up to date.

Continuing this educational plan, scientific features of various kinds will be made.

Dr. Gilbert Ellis Bailey, Professor of Geology at the University of Southern California, has been engaged as staff scientist.

It is with great sorrow that we announce the passing of Elmer M. Robbins, Tuesday, March 2d, at his home in Laguna Beach. He is survived by his wife, Lola Robbins, and one child.

Funeral services were held Friday, March 5th, at Santa Ana.

MOVING PICTURE EFFICIENCY

By Howard Scott

In introducing this subject, "Moving Picture Efficiency," we immediately recognize that thousands of dollars are wasted in moving pictures through inefficiency, and of course there must obviously be a reason for this wanton waste. The lack of efficiency is not always to be found in the offices of managerial departments, nor can the fault be traced always to the directors of companies in the employ of large producing firms, but that an enormous amount of money and a world of precious time is lost through this source is an undeniable fact.

There was a time when the impression existed in the minds of many that "Movies" was a fad; a diversion ror the fickle public—and that it would exist for the time being only. This erroneous belief has now been thoroughly dissipated, and it is today an acknowledged fact that the moving picture world has come into its own, and resolved itself into a permanent Art. In other words, it has taken its place side by side with classical and other recognized educational and instructive institutions.

Notwithstanding, what I have just said does not in any degree palliate the subject I intended to give stress to in this short article: the gargoyle over the gates of many "picture lots" is inscribed in glaring color with the word Inefficiency!

The days of exceedingly pretty young women with curls introduced by a famous star, or the well-groomed stripling with a seal-like pompadour who so easily passed the "test" of many feet of film and who had little else save face-value to offer, I am happy to say are gradually becoming prehistoric. The wonderful "type" man, or woman, of the early days of camera activities is also losing ground, and with the releasing of our latest Big Features we see more actors: more men and women who think for themselves and who are not guided entirely by the tired voice from behind an overworked megaphone.

And so each year a new angle brings better results in the world of picaures; and each year brings a greater waste of money and time in this newly-developed profession.

Where there is a fault there should always be a remedy. The technical director is often found upon investigation to be either an architect or an interior decorator; technical direction should cover a greater ground and embrace a more complete knowledge. An assistant cameraman graduated to such a position, unless he possesses universal knowledge, often costs his

And still the answers come in, presenting still different viewpoints. At least the industry is alive to the situation!

SAYS NO INDIVIDUAL MOST IMPORTANT

Editor Camera!:

March First, Nineteen Twenty.

In reference to the present discussion on your editorial page as to which individual is the most important in the making of a successful photoplay, I wish to express my viewpoint from the angle of an independent producer.

The great mistake of the past in picture production, which still seems to color the ideas of some of the best minds in the studios today and which has caused endless conflict of interests and a great deal of injustice, is the emphasis laid on the necessity of someone being of supreme importance—director—author—scenarist—actor.

Not one of these can function effectively except through intelligent teamwork with each of the others, and only through the closest co-ordination of interests can they eventually succeed in producing pictures that will be pre-eminent for screen artistry.

As in every other great business today, systematic co-operation is the keynote of success. This involves an ideal technical staff—one in which the author is an active member and is himself a screen technician and can collaborate with the director and his assistants in preparing the picturization of a story. Independent producers, at least, will eventually perfect the organization of such staffs, for they are in a position to utilize the necessary cement—the proper distribution of reward.

There are other indispensable elements in the making of such a technical staff, and principal of these is the cameraman, whom none of your correspondents has seen fit to mention. Photoplays are not made with a kodak.

Very truly yours,
ROBERT H. KELLY.
Director, Cameo Productions.

ACCORDING TO "JIMMIE," THE STAR STILL HEADS THE LIST

Los Angeles, March 1, 1920.

Editor Camera!:

"Which is the mightier—the author or the actor?" is being discussed considerably today in the Rialto, and it recalls to mind the much-mooted question: "Which is the mightier—the sword or the pen?" The same may be said of the author-actor debate.

To date, I have written and produced several hundred photo-plays. Yet not for an instant do I doubt that had I been able to have used some well-known and recognized star, I would have doubled and tripled the profits.

But truth is truth; and as the work of some of the old stars that is being exhibited to the public today is one the wane, new talent will surely take their places. Good stories or bad stories never will hold them; but, as far as stars are concerned, THEY ALWAYS WILL BE IN THE FOREMOST RANKS AND ARE FULLY AS IMPORTANT AS ANY STORY IN WHICH THEY MAY TAKE PART.

(Signed) JAMES YOUNGDEER.

ANSWERS MR. CASE

WESTERN TRIANGLE DIST. CORP.
Los Angeles, Cal., March 3, 1920.

Editor Camera!:

Dear Sir: I herein wish to take exception to the statements of one, Mr. Case of Wagon Hoop, Mo. Mr. Case is all that his name implies, only he omitted his full name—his first name being Hard.

Said Case might have gone further into the matter and explained how and why he was so familiar with banking methods and bank directors —Case, by the way, is the sole support of the Grange Bank, Hoop Center. Some slicker that feller was; happened to see his deposit slip the day following his playing "Tess of the Storm Country," Pollyanna's latest picture. The president of Hoop Center's financial institution was forced to call in Snide Porter, the manager of the Hoop Center Emporium, to assist him in checking up cash deposited by said Case.

Moreover, I am going to get real personal with this Case fellow and bare to the public some of his methods and treatment of the downtrodden exchange managers. It happened thus: It is often necessary for the writer, like many of his brother exchange managers, to seek the quiet seclusion of his office after working hours, to enable him to figure at least a small profit on expense accounts. On such a night, while deeply engrossed in said occupation, the office phone broke the stillness of the peaceful office air. Answering the phone, I find said Case calling from Hoop Center. "Hello." "Yes—Yes—Hello, Case, what's the trouble?" Case briefly states that the Bunk Exchange had failed to send his picture for tonight's showing. He further states your office the only one I could raise. "Help me out, will yer? Send me any old thing. It's 6:30 now, and you gotta make it by 7:30 or 8. I'll hold the crowd. Now, don't fail to help me out." Answer: "All right, Case, I'll do my best. G'by." Five seconds later I make a mad rush to film vault, select best available feature, pack and label same, call taxi, rush to depot, held up by traffic cop exceeding speed limit, but make train leaving for Hoop Center with three minutes to spare. Bribe express messenger to deliver film to Hoop Center agent. TAPS. Exchange manager seeks rest at end of perfect day.

Day following: Imagine surprise following morning when collect wire was delivered to office from the Hoop Center express agent, stating shipment of night before addressed to Case had been refused. Imagine managers wrath—this shipment had been sent open account at that. Imagine express charges both ways—my personal grief and difficulties making rush delivery—a collect wire and another telegram to Hoop Center, agent to return this shipment to office—great gobs of grief and cusswords. Madly rush to phone, got connection with Hard Case at Hoop Center, and conversed thusly: "Hello! Hello! This you, Case?" "Yes!" "Well, please explain the big idea of you giving me the rush act for an emergency program last night and then refusing to accept same." Answer: "Well, that damn manager of the Bunk Exchange failed to notify me that he had sent my show by parcel post—and I come to find out later that my boy Eph called to the postoffice early in the day and took the show out. Yes, it was Charlie's latest production, 'The Face on the Bar Room Floor'—and say, I cleaned up on that show last night—and I want to thank you, old man, for your help in getting off to me the substitute from your office that I did not use." Business of Case Stalling one-third of a minute. He continues: "Oh, yes! By the way, when are you going to refund me the money on those posters that I sent back to your exchange two months ago? You recollect I paid for them, but could not use the feature. I think I should have a credit coming. Come through, will ye?" Patience of exchange man exhausted. Bam! Up goes the receiver.

This, fellow exchange managers and others interested in the fifth largest industry, is a fair example of "The Valley Center"—Hick Corners —Hoop Center type of customer. This, friends, is what is slowly but surely driving the downtrodden exchange managers to seek safer and saner occupation in the few remaining ammunition factories throughout the country.

C. J. MARLEY—One of Them.

P. S.—You tell 'em the rest, Hard Case; I stutter.

THE ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

Installment Five

Having satisfied yourself as to the character you are to play, the costumes required, etc., it is time to proceed to the facial makeup. In straight makeup we commence with the flesh or body paint. In a character we must first discover whether it will be necessary to use putty in altering the shape of the nose, cheek bones, or any part of the face. This medium should be used before applying anything else, as any grease will prevent it from sticking. A great many wonderful changes can be made when a person becomes skilled in the handling of nose putty. Putty should be kneaded until it is quite soft and free from lumps, then rolled between the palms until a roll about a half an inch thick and a little longer than the nose has been obtained. Place this roll directly on top and down the center of the nose; then commence to press and model the edges at the sides down onto the sides of the nose, gradually shaping the putty to the effect desired. Should it stick to the fingers, apply a little cold cream. This will also help to smooth it. In blending the edges, care should be taken, for putty should be left alone unless it is handled with

EXHIBITORS' SERVICE PAGE

IN REGARD TO BADINT FILM LEGISLATION

At the annual convention of the Theatre Managers' and Owners' Association of Oklahoma, the members pledged themselves to a voluntary censorship against the much agitated "bandit films" featuring the careers of ex-convicts. At the same time Senator T. P. Morey and Congressman Harrell, who introduced the bill on the subject to Congress, were requested to withdraw the same for fear it might affect the freedom of the screen. The Exhibitors promised to carry out the measures of the bill in Oklahoma.

MR. LAEMMLE SPEAKS

Many and devious are the methods employed by our modern publicists. Some of them are tragic; others merely funny. Under the last classification comes a recent attempt by Mr. Carl Laemmle, published in a well-known weekly. Only seven hundred and fifty-three words were necessary to clothe a simple advertisement of the two Stroheim pictures in a red hot wrapper meant to resemble a moral lecture. At that, the leniency of the post office in passing a phrase or two in said lecture has been remarked.

Mr. Laemmle took this opportunity to challenge the many "crooked producers" who continually harass him in an effort to kidnap his stars, to try it again. This anxiety in regard to his employees is, we feel, unnecessary. He accuses the criminals and their supporting exhibitors of committing that worst of all crimes, "raising the price of production" by bribing stars away from the U. with dazzling salaries. This of course is serious.

Finally in his righteous indignation he adds one more, the fatal mistake, to his offering. What a dreadful misstep to tell the National Associations that they aren't worth a "tinker's damn"! "Blind Hsbands" and "The Devil's Passkey" will sell without resorting to such methods, Mr. Universal.

"THE MASK"

The first of Col. W. N. Seligs' new specials is completed and soon will be seen in private pre-view in Los Angeles.

It is a six-reel production of "The Mask," from the book of that name by Arthur Hornblow, writer of "The Lion and the Mouse."

Jack Holt, Hedda Nova, William Crawford, Fred M. Malatesta and Byron Munson are members of the all-star cast. Bertram Bracken directed the feature.

Marshall Neilan has been requested by the Department of the Interior to make a special Americanization picture with Marjorie Daw in the leading role. As soon as a suitable story is obtained, Mr. Neilan will comply with the government's request.

The Republic Distributing Corporation has purchased "The Great Shadow" from the Adanac Production Company. It will be released at an early date.

The Paramount Company will run the O. K. of the National Board of Review on all of its pictures hereafter.

The Republic releases scheduled for March are "Mothers of Men," "Girl of the Sea," "The Gift Supreme," "The Adventuress," "The Great Shadow," and "Man's Plaything."

ANNA FAY TO ENTER PICTURES

Anna Eva Fay, spiritualist, of vaudeville fame, is said to be seeking a location near Los Angeles, to film a spiritualistic picture.

Ralph Bradford, former manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation and who later became associted with the S. A. Lynch enterprises at Atlanta, Ga., has become manager of the Chicago office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

From the Heart of Production

HOLLYWOOD AS LOCATION OPPORTUNITY

It seems that a wonderful location for a new picture theatre goes unnoticed.

Hollywood, Southern California's ideal home place, still provides great opportunity as a location for exhibitors.

Considering these times, locations are quite reasonably available. Based on the present competition, service would be comparatively inexpensive.

Hollywood has grown by leaps, and crowds are being turned away from the shows now running, shows where long series of "advertising slides" interrupt the entertainment.

Counted by actual net earnings, a Hollywood show would compare favorably with many "Down Town, High Rent, Elaborate Service" locations.

Anyone considering the opening of a show would do well at least to investigate "Hollywood."

"Ten Million Photoplay Plots" and various feature photoplays

Following this, the last installment of "Scientific Plot Building," by Wycliffe Hill, Camera! will publish each week a scenario chosen from a number sent in by its subscribers, and Mr. Hill's criticism of the same. Scenarios must be in our office by Tuesday of each week for the following Saturday's edition. All subscribers are welcome to send in their efforts. We guarantee that each scenario will be read by Mr. Hill and his choice published, with or without the author's name, as is preferred. This is a great chance to continue the study of scenario construction under Mr. Hill's able direction! If you haven't those original ideas of yours on paper, get them there.

Installment Fourteen

REASONS FOR NON-SALES OF STORIES

It has been estimated that there are at least ten million people in the United States who believe that they can write scenarios. Certainly there are several hundred thousand who have tried their hand at it and given it up as a bad job because their first story was not accepted. Still the producers continue to cry for good stories.

Bogus scenario schools and mail order concerns have hammered on the idea that all the producer wanted was just an "idea." The result has been that thousands of people have been led to believe that all they had to do in order to get a fat check was to simply color some experience of their own lives a bit and rush it madly to the first motion picture producer whose name appeared to them.

This is all wrong. Producers do want stories, but they want dramatic plots. If such can be properly designated as an "idea," then I would say that the fakirs are right. I have heard dozens of deluded would-be scenario writers rave about a story of theirs just because it was based on "something that really happened." To be perfectly plain and brutal, producers don't give a tinker's dam whether "it really happened or not," just so long as it makes a good and interesting story and could happen, or is true to life.

I am going to enumerate twelve very good reasons why stories might be rejected at the studios. I think one or more of these reasons will fit every story that is returned.

(1) The story may lack plot. In other words, it may be a simple narrative or a series of incidents, strung loosely together and which do not lead up to a fitting dramatic climax.

(2) It may lack original plot. In other words, it may be composed of a series of hackneyed situations which have been used time and time again. The old situation of the lost will, or the mortgage on the home of the heroine or her father, and others that have become jokes.

(3) It may be far-fetched, and untrue to life—illogical, in other words. I wrote one myself once, in which I had an illiterate ranch foreman portrayed as a clever counterfeiter. Did I sell it? Yes, I did —NOT.

(4) It may be submitted in such form that the producer cannot grasp its salient features without wading through a mass of uninteresting matter. Producers want stories read in their scenario departments, but remember that they are busy people and the story must be given to them in comprehensive form—synopsis only, AND NOT WRITTEN IN LONG HAND. I have had several stories submitted to me which were accompanied with dozens of newspaper illustrations which had been clipped and pasted in. I remember another wihch was written in long hand on a long roll of wrapping paper, which looked like a music roll for a player piano.

Any of these four reasons would prevent the story from passing the reader. Therefore the scenario editor never sese it.

(5) Most studios have certain stars under contract and are bound to feature them. A story might have every other qualification and still not be suitable for any star on the lot. I had a perfectly

Can You Afford to Speculate?

"It is useless attempting to get rich quick in Wall Street. It cannot be done, and must not be attempted, either by the experienced or inexperienced. The most one can expect is a balance of profits over losses where the operation is speculative."

Magazine of Wall Street, January 24, 1920

DURING the past few years business has expanded so rapidly that earnings have increased by leaps and bounds. As a result large dividends were paid on speculative stocks. As is always the case under such circumstances, the speculative fever spread to all classes of people. Widows, retired business men, professional men, and others threw caution to the winds and bought oil stocks, motor stocks, mining stocks, industrial stocks, and other securities where earnings were abnormally large.

Legitimate investment houses and conservative brokers advised their clients to forget speculation and choose only high grade investment securities. The speculators, however, were intoxicated with their success, and refused to listen to reason.

Those who had the least experience, as usual, were the ones who took the greatest chances, and they are now taking the greatest losses.

Never speculate with money you cannot afford to lose. Every person owes it to himself to invest only in high grade securities of established value until he has an assured income from his investments sufficient to guarantee himself and those dependent upon him a decent living.

If you want to speculate and attempt to foretell the future of the stock market, we cannot afford to give you advice. If we or any other group of men could accurately foretell the ups and downs of securities, we would soon have all the money in circulation.

We can tell you how to invest your money safely where it will return you a steady income and where your principal will be safe.

If interested in safe investments, yielding from 5% to 7%, write, call or telephone for our latest investment lists.

good story rejected because it required the star, a girl, to wear pants —and she refused to do it.

(6) The story may be of such a nature that when produced it will not pass the National Board of Review.

(7) Contracts which producers have with stars provide that the said stars shall be featured. Hence if you send in a perfectly good story which gives the player who works opposite the star a chance to walk away with the story, or to appear in the majority of scenes, it will be rejected on that account.

(8) While there are almost every kind of a location available around Los Angeles that you will find under the sun, still there are some that cannot be had without sending a whole company off on a long trip—which costs too much. The story may require scenery of this kind and be rejected on that acount.

(9) The story may be a perfectly good one and yet its main features may be too similar to one that has just been recently produced with the star for whom it is submitted. I had one rejected because it opened with a preacher being chased out of a Western rouchneck town. They said my story was good, but that the star had appeared in one which had the same opening about three months previous.

(10) As explained in a previous chapter on "Cost of Production," many good stories are rejected because the writer has taken no account whatever of the amount of money that would be required to produce it—and consequently has written in "business" that would cost a fortune.

(11) The theme handled in the story may be one that is not ripe for discussion at the time the story is submitted. For example, war stories are on the waiting list at the present time. During the war you could not have sold one which dealt with industrial unrest in the United States, or with the Mexican situation.

(12) Producers sometimes make a change in the policy of their productions, and a good story may be rejected for the reason that it conflicts with the new policy adopted. For example, Thos. H. Ince confined the pictures in which Louise Glaum was featured to those which portrayed her as a vampire, for a long time. He has changed his policy now, and a vampire story would not interest him, no matter how good it was.

If you live in Los Angeles, or come here, do not make the mistake of taking your story out to the studo and insisting that the scenario editor lay down everything else while he listens to you read it. Send it in by mail, and if it is a good one it will sell much quicker, and you will be called on for more.

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wisn the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

THE ART OF MAKE-UP

ability. Using the tips of the fingers, keep smoothing the edges away from the putty until it gets thinner and thinner, eventually wiping away to nothing.

Putty can also be used for such things as blotting out eye-brows, cheek bones and lumps over the eyes; however, it should not be used on any part of the face that is subject to movement, as under such condition it will crack. In places where its use is impractical, cotton wool makes an excellent substitute, and with care can be made very effective. In placing bags underneath the eyes, where putty would not do, simply cut a moon-shaped piece of cotton a little thicker than you actually want, and taper the edges; then paint under the eye with spirit gum and apply the bag. It will be necessary to make a backing upon which to apply the paint, so cover the outside of the cotton with a liberal coating of spirit gum and allow to dry. Wrinkles and thick lips are very effective and practical when made with cotton. Lips made of cotton will be very light and comfortable and will not fall off or crack. One very important item should be impressed upon the mind in regard to putty and cotton. After covering them with the flesh or body paint, a fair coating of red should be applied and blended, for there is no blood in these materials; consequently, a substitute must be applied to prevent the putty or cotton from photographing lighter than the rest of the face. Cover the cotton with cold cream before applying the paint. In the alteration of the features a three-sided mirror should be used, in order to see from all sides.

Should it be necessary to broaden the nose, as is the case of a prizefighter or negro, instead of using putty, cut about three-eighths of an inch off the large end of two rubber cigar holders; then place these on the end of the little finger and insert into the nostrils. This method broadens the nose, and at the same time allows one to breathe freely.

Another thing which should be done before any paint is placed on the face is the making of scars. The best scar effect is obtained by the use of collodium, but be sure when purchasing it to get common collodium, not the flexible. Take a small, soft brush and apply this to the place where the scar is to show, putting it on rather thick and with one or two strokes, as too much brushing takes the life out of collodium. When this dries, you will notice that it draws the skin, making as nearly perfect a scar as it is possible to obtain. If possible, make your scar on the soft part of the face, where there is not much movement. A substitute for collodium in an emergency is old spirit gum. However, this is not nearly as satisfactory as the former. Be sure that your face is free from grease before attempting a scar.

firm hundreds of unnecessary dollars. And then again, a wasteful amount of currency is consumed by what is known as an "efficiency man"; your producing director, if capable, can control all the efficiency his picture demands, by his own careful method.

A great saving could be effected by the installation in each motion picture studio of an advisory director—a man thoroughly versed in economics, a keen observer of correct locations: a man trained to the appreciative value of Time, and invested with authority to stop all "stalling"—the most vicious of all faults prevailing in pictures. Such men can be obtained. In my experience I have met many, but they are not in demand, because they represent Power!—something to be shunned by the incapable.

A school will shortly be founded for the development of expert methods in all departments of motion picture work. I feel sure it will help to revolutionize present conditions; and managers and audiences will greatly appreciate the motive which has impelled a man to endow an institution which will prove of so much benefit. While we all admire a self-made man, it is beyond dispute that a trained man and a technically correct education are of inestimable value.

MORENO READING SCRIPTS

Antonio Moreno has completed his Vitagraph serial "The Invisible Hand" and is taking a brief vacation, during which he is reading scripts for future productions. Among them is a feature drama, "A Gentleman's Word," by Arthur Edwin Krows, scenarioist and lecturer at Columbia University. He also is considering another serial by the magazine writer, Cleveland Moffett. Mr. Moreno's contract with Vitagraph extends another year. During that time he will appear both in serials and features.

At the Goldwyn studios T. Hays Hunter is directing "Earthbound"; Victor Schertzinger is directing Mabel Normand in "The Slim Princess"; Harry Beaumont is directing Tom Moore in "The Great Accident"; Wallace Worsley is directing "The Penalty"; Al Greene is directing Jack Pickford in "Double Dyed Deceiver"; Reginald Barker is directing "The Branding Iron"; Sidney Olcott is directing "Scratch My Back," and E. Mason Hopper is directing the third Elgar picture.

BETTY BLYTHE COMPANY

Betty Blythe will have a company of her own, it is announced, and will commence production of a story within a month. Details of the organization plans are being withheld for the present, but it is stated that a number of New York capitalists are backing the company.

Joe King will play the lead in Rex Beach's next picture, "The North Wind's Malice," which is being put into screen version at the New York Goldwyn studios under direction of Carl Harabaugh. Mr. King played with Richard Ordinsky in a number of the productions at the Little Theatre. In "The North Wind's Malice" he plays opposite Jane Thomas.

C. A. Cotter, formerly on the reportorial staff of the Los Angeles Examiner, is Al Jennings' personal representative.

Roy Applegate has been added to the cast of "Trimmed with Red," the Goldwyn picture which Madge Kennedy is making in New York.

N. Y. PRODUCER HERE

L. Lawrence Weber, New York theatrical and motion picture producer, is in Los Angeles visiting Harry Rapf. Mr. Weber owns the Longacre Theatre in New York, is interested with Comstock and Gest in theatrical enterprises, and is also president of Weber productions, Inc., which is now making Edith Hallor's second picture, "Just Outside the Door."

Pauline Frederick, having completed work on th "Roads of Destiny," will commence work next Thursday on her next Goldwyn production, "Madame X," under direction of Frank Lloyd. In the meantime Miss Frederick is making the most of a brief vacation to refurnish the home she recently purchased in Beverly Hills. The only member of the supporting cast so far selected is Casson Ferguson, who will play Raymond.

Madge Kennedy is to play the leading role in "The Truth."

In order to be listed in this column, it is necessary that you be sufficiently well known locally that there shall be no doubt as to your ability to play the parts for which you are listed. If you have not appeared in the films recently, it will be necessary to bring proof that you have successfully filled the part under which you wish to be listed.

This precaution is taken as a safeguard for this paper and for the people who are capable. Further, this precaution has been suggested to us by casting directors, as the column was inaugurated chiefly for their information.

Abbreviations: Characters (ch.); Heavies (hv.); Juveniles (juv.); Foreign (for.); ngenues (ing.).

Changes in this column must be reported to the office of CAMERA! not later than Friday of each week.

There is said to be a strong probability that the "Wayfarer" will soon be filmed by Metro. "Brewster's Millions" will also have an early translation to the screen.

Reeves Eason, who will direct Harry Carey in his next Universal feature, "Crossed Claims," is now selecting a cast for this production, work on which will begin next week.

Winchell Smith will personally supervise the picturization of some of his plays for Metro. The first will be "The New Henrietta," for which June Mathis is preparing the scenario.

May Allison has returned to the Metro studio after spending a week on her third trip to Santa Barbara for "The Cheater." "Fine Feathers," by Eugene Walter, will be Miss Allison's next picture.

DAVID TRATTNER PRODUCTION COMPANY STARTS

CAMERA! TO CHANGE SIZE!

In compliance with the national request for a standard trade journal size, Camera! will in the near future be reduced to 9¼" by 12½".

In this progress it is our aim to be of greater service to our readers.

Bert Lindley is playing heavies with Edgar Lewis.

Betty Linley is with the Betty Compson Company.

"Daddy Franck" has been cast for the "High Priest" in the "Vanishing Dagger" at Universal.

Marshall Risksen, aged 12 years, makes his initial appearance in pictures in the production in which his younger sister, Lucille, is playing the leading feminine role. It is the third episode of the Edgar series Booth Tarkington's boy stories.

Cecil B. de Mille is well into his Current Production, which is as yet nameless.

Bessie Bird has concluded her contract with Robert Brunton. She will soon appear at the head of her own company in a series of Blue Ridge Mountain stories, from the pen of Calvert K. Storm, the famous Virginia humorist.

Paul Scofield is preparing David Butler's second story for the screen. It is entitled, "Smilin' All the Way," adapted from a short story by Alfred Payson Dowst. Work will commence at the Hollywood Studios, by the D. N. Schwab Productions, Inc., immediately upon completion of their first picture, "Sitting on the World."

What with the duties attending a new corporation, the casting and filming of several comedies, and the seeking locations for the Superfeature drama, "Watuska," in which there will be nearly forty principals and several hundred cowboys, Indians, colonial and early American types Indians of the early 19th century and the modernized redskin gold-diggers and characters to be found in early mining camps together with the necessary atmosphere and color, Director General Youngdeer says he has but little time for leisure.

EARLE WILLIAMS FILMING "THE THREE KEYS"

Earl Williams' new production is, "The Three Keys," adapted from the novel by Frederic Van Rennselaer Dey. Chester Bennett will direct. Vola Vale appears opposite Mr. Williams. The supporting cast includes Rhea Heines, H. A. Barrows, Frank Crayne, James Warner, John Elliot and Paul Wiegle.

ARRESTED FOUR TIMES

Mr. William G. Badger, who plays the part of Murphy in "The Yellow Typhoon" at the Mayer studio, reported for work in what he considered a dark suit, but it was not sufficiently dark to satisfy Assistant Director McClaskey's idea of that property. The "Set" was waiting, and a car was commandeered, while the trip to his home was made in record time. It, however, proved expensive, due to four arrests en route.

HUMANITY FILM CO. TO START

The Humanity Film Company is to start production immediately on "The Sowing of Alderson Cree," by Margaret Montague. The story, which will be directed by Ollie Sellars, was adapted for the screen by Sada Cowan. The company expects to go to Calistoga on location in a week or so.

Bryant Washburn starts this week on the farce comedy of the stage, "What Happened to Jones." James Cruze will direct and Margaret Loomis is to be leading woman. Elmer Harris wrote the scenario.

THE CINEMA UNIVERSITY

And now comes the cinemy university idea, scientifically evolved from several previous attempts. As chief advocate and friend, it has Dr. Gilbert Ellis Bailey, Professor of Geology at the University of Southern California.

Dr. Bailey considers that the establishment of cinema universities will alone solve the great educational problem which today confronts the country. At the present moment, one hundred thousand high grade teachers are being demanded by the National Educational Society. Picture instruction, he declares, will revolutionize the present system and will mean fewer and better paid professors.

Dr Bailey further goes on: "The film text book would make for greater saving of time to the student, and would enable him to graduate from the university from three to five years earlier, adding that many years to the economic value of his life. Cinema lecture rooms would make history, geology, botany, chemistry, physics and other subjects of the curriculum live and breathe. There is no question that the appeal to the eye gets quicker, better and more lasting results than other methods.

"A distribution system can be easily worked out by which the various universities may exchange films, thus securing uniformity, accuracy and up-to-dateness."

Dr. Bailey has only mentioned the use of film text books in our higher educational institutions. Certainly, if such involved subjects as geology, physics, etc., can be taught by the screen more advantageously than by books, such a method employed in teaching elementary work to our grade schools would meet with huge success. There is no reason why the plan cannot be carried out with reference to every department of education. There is no benefit to be derived by hanging on to thousands of clumsy, out-of-date text books. They must make way for progress.

The above idea may be a little startling to our more conservative friends, but when our university professors of years standing endorse it with such enthusiasm and work out the details so scientifically, it predicts much. It almost looks as if the fifth industry might slide up a couple of notches.

RESTING IN FLORIDA

Madge Kennedy has gone with her husband, Harold Bolster, to Florida for a short vacation between pictures.

Henry Cronjager, cameraman of Marshall Neilan Productions, has invented an attachment whereby a still camera can be secured to the moving picture camera permitting the taking of an unlimited number of stills showing all the action of a scene without the delay of rearranging the lights or the special posing of the actors.

AUTHORS' POPULARITY SUPERCEDING STARS' AND DIRECTORS'

IN ANSWER TO—

Editor Camera!

What's ail this rumpus about Authors, directors and stars? Notice I spell Author with a capital A. I don't see how such a one-sided question could stir up such a discussion. Why, we all know that the Author is the most important man in the picture game. I notice that H. Thompson Rich says that the director is just the good assistant of the Author. I will go him one better. The Author is the employer of everybody in the business from the general manager down to that nutty exhibitor, Mr. Case. He makes jobs for every one of them, does he not, when he creates a story for them? Jimmy Youngdeer says the star is the thing. Well, listen, Old dear, what makes stars? Didn't every one of them start off by making a hit in some particular picture—that was written by an Author? Huh? What about Mary Pickford and "Tess of the Storm Country"; Betty Compson and "The Miracle Man"; Mitchell Lewis and "The Barrier"; Doug Fairbanks and "His Picture in the Papers"; Wm. S. Hart and "The Bargain"; Dorothy Phillips and "Hell Morgan's Girl"; Doris May and Douglas McLean and "Twenty-Three and One-Half Hours Leave"; etc., etc.? All of Doug Fairbanks' jumping proclivities, Mary Pickford's curls, Bill Hart's squinting eyes and six-shooters, could not have made them stars unless they had been given an opportunity to exhibit them in good stories. And any of them, no matter how big they are, could be killed by a continual appearance in rotten stories—like the one that Will Rogers is appearing in this week at the California, for instance—"Water, Water, Everywhere"—even on the brain. Jack Kerrigan is as handsome and just as good an actor as any of the male stars on the screen, yet he has not been heralded near so loudly of late as some other men stars. Why? Because he has not had a big story since "A Man's Man," and if Lew Cody has a few more like "The Broken Butterfly" he will cease to be the champion he-vamp. If the directors had to look at a blank wall and visualize every act and expression of their characters in a scene, like the poor devil of a scenario writer does, some of them would be more "tempermental" than they are. They have real people and real sets to work with—can rehease a scene, and if it doesn't look right, do it over again. The scenario writer has to work his imagination overtime—and see it all in thin air. Yes, indeed, the Author is the guy who ought to be paid the big salary.

Of course a good many of the directors are Authors themselves—which excuses them. And if there were no stars to play the parts, no cameraman to "shoot' 'the scene, and no manager to pay salaries—there wouldn t' be any need for Authors either. By gosh, I hadn't thought of that.

WYCLIFFE A. HILL.

AN AUTHOR IS NOT NECESSARILY A PICTURE WRITER

Editor Camera!

Dear Sir: Your interesting editorial by H. Thompson Rich anent the importance and advent into prominence on the part of the author is interesting and—almost true.

After fifteen years of short-story, metropolitan newspaper, and five years of scenario writing, I beg to differ to a degree with Mr. Rich.

The very fact that one of our greatest studios is bristling with authors, and still has not to any noticeable extent "set the world on fire" with great productions, ought to substantiate my assertion, to wit:

The author MUST become a PICTUREMAN before he reaches his full importance.

A mere author, be he a master, a marvel, a man with a name to conjure with, IN PRINT, is often merely a half-baked picture writer. After from two to five years in all phases of the studio work, however, he will prove the dominant man, and when writers become PICTURE MEN the moving picture will reach its height of quality, both from a literary, artistic and commercial standpoint.

Yours very cordially,
FREDERICK BENNETT.

SAYS DIRECTOR'S AND STAR'S WORK INTERPRETIVE

Editor Camera!

The answer to the question of the relative importance of author, director and star would seem to be quite reasonably covered in the answer to another question—"What is a photoplay?"

A photoplay being the picturization of a story, does it not follow that the work of the author is after all the foundation of the entire product, and that upon which the work of everyone concerned in its making depends?

It does not detract from the importance of director or star to place the author first, since theirs is the "interpretive art" and as distinct and apart from the "creative art' 'as the meanings of the two words "interpreter" and "creator."

There is further reason for giving the author first place. The growth in stability of the motion picture industry is developing producing organizations with definite and distinct policies and ideals far removed from the hit-or-miss hodge-podge of pictures, covering every tpye from grave to gay and uplifting to "otherwise," which in the early days came from the same studio, according as its management read the public demand.

To carry out the policies and ideals of producing organizations which recognize their responsibilities to the public and try to make their influence constructively beneficial to the community at large, the author is of greater importance than ever, since stories must be BUILT which will unmistakably carry across the "tone" of the producing organization just as positively as the editorials of our big dailies are counted upon to indicate what each newspaper "stands for."

And it should be borne in mind that there is no law against the "creative" and "interpretive" arts being combined in any one individual for any production. Therefore, directors and stars may also be authors—as, indeed, the former at least frequently are, to their great personal credit and seldom omitted screen mention.

Very truly yours,
S. P. Trood, Secretary.
BRENTWOOD FILM CORPORATION.

THE ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

INSTALLMENT SIX

Having accomplished the putty or cotton feature, proceed by covering everything with flesh or body paint; then go over all putty or cotton parts with a little slake red, blending it well into the flesh. Should the character being portrayed be old or thin, it will be necessary to accentuate the hollows and to bring out bones or other prominent points. In doing this imagine yourself to be as old as the character you are to play. In such a case, what parts of your face would naturally sink? It will be on these places that you must throw shadows. In making the shadows, do not use a stick to apply paint, but rub it on your finger thinned with a very little cold cream. Then apply, being sure to make the shadow heavy. Have it a little darker where the face would sink in farthest, graduating the edges away to nothing. Shadows should be placed both above and below the eyes when age is considered, but in this case do not line them or mascaro the eye-lashes.

Having placed the shadows, we will now bring out the projecting points by high-lighting them. Do this by applying flesh one shade lighter than that used upon the body of the face. Blend the edges of the high-lights well in with the shadows.

We will now line the face. Take a shading stump rolled upon a brown liner and place a medium line between wrinkles wherever you can make them by screwing up the face. Break them wherever the wrinkles naturally break, and thin them where they naturally end. Having done this, proceed by throwing a high-light over each, using the same color used in high-lighting the prominent places. Blend by lightly drawing a clean finger over both of the lines on each of the wrinkles. Do this until they melt one into the other. Now take a damatagraph pencil (a damatagraph pencil can be purchased at a surgical supply house. It is a grease pencil used by surgeons to make lines on the body and will mark flesh readily). They are in three colors, black, blue and white. The black is the most satisfactory. Sharpen your pencil to a chisel edge. Then proceed to make a very thin hairline directly between the shadow and high-light of the wrinkle. This line must be light and very thin. Break it quite often, as the natural wrinkle would be broken. This line you do not wipe over.

The damatagraph pencil is an excellent medium for lining the eyes and eyebrows in "straight" make-up. It is also of great service in blending off beards and moustaches. Do this by making a series of thin short lines next to the beard or moustache and gradually thinning them away to nothing. No actor or actress should be without one of these pencils.

GREAT INCREASE SHOWN IN MOTION PICTURE FOREIGN TRADE

According to the annual reports of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for the year 1919 there has been a great increase in our foreign trade in motion picture films. During the year our exports of unexposed films totaled 120,041,912 linear feet. This was a definite increase over the preceding year at 71,548,779 feet. An even greater gain, however, was recorded for our positive film. In 1917 the exposed film exported totaled 110,465,195 linear feet. The 1919 figures, however, shows the total for last year to be 153,237,260 feet.

It is expected that 1920 will show exports of at least $1,000,000 a month, since those for 1919 are but slightly below that figure.

THE SUPREME COURT DENIES MAYFLOWER'S ATTEMPT TO RESTRAIN TUCKER

The Supreme Court has refused to interfere in behalf of the Mayflower Film Corporation who sought to restrain George Loane Tucker from directing pictures other than for Mayflower.

At the same time a denial of the appeal for an injunction against the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by Mr. Tucker was handed down by Justice Platzek. In his petition Tucker requested an injunction preventing the further distribution of advertising matter on "The Miracle Man" unless his name appeared in type as large as the title of the picture and three times as large as the name of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, and unless the style conformed to printed matter issued by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on D. W. Griffith and Cecil de Mille productions.

FIRST PRINTS OF "DANGEROUS DAYS" AND "PARTNERS OF THE NIGHT" RECEIVED

The Los Angeles branch of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation has received the first prints of two Eminent Authors productions, picturizations of Mary Roberts Rhinehart's "Dangerous Days" and Leroy Scott's "Partners of the Night." "Dangerous Days" is the first of Miss Rhinehart's works to be produced by Goldwyn and was filmed at the Culver City studios under the direction of Reginald Barker. Lawson Butt plays the lead and is supported by Florence Deshon, Pauline Starke, H. Milton Ross, Clarissa Selwynne, Frank Leigh, Barbara Castleton and Bertram Grassby.

"Partners of the Night" is the first production from the Goldwyn East Coast studios and was produced under the direction of Paul Scardon from a scenario by Charles S. Whittaker.

Both "Dangerous Days" and "Partners of the Night" were reviewed by the Exchange force and invited guests Tuesday night to afford opportunity for studying salient points of the new productions previous to release. "Dangerous Days" will have its world's premiere at the California Theatre for the week beginning Sunday, March 14th, and "Partners of the Night" some time in April.

GRIEVER TO EXPLOIT "HUSBANDS AND WIVES"

TO ADVERTISE UNITED STATES TRADE ABROAD WITH PICTURES

Congress has been asked for $69,000 by the Department of Commerce to be expended in showing abroad films of American industries.

Efforts have been made by the Department in the past to secure such appropriation, but they have been in vain. Canada, Great Britain and Belgium have all resorted to this method to increase foreign trade.

It is urged that this item be included in the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill for 1921, which is now before Congress.

OPERATORS' STRIKE SETTLED

Forty dollars a week have been granted motion picture operators in Waco, Texas, as a result of a one-day strike. The agreement reached allows showmen to employ only one operator instead of two, if desired. Under the same arrangement assistant operators are to receive thirty-five dollars weekly.

NEW CORPORATION IN DES MOINES

The six principal theaters in Des Moines, Iowa, have been merged in a new million dollar corporation of which A. H. Blank, franchise holder in the First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., is president. Mr. Blank's theaters, the Des Moines, Garden and Palace and Abe Frankel's three, the Rialto, Majestic and Casino, are to be operated by this new corporation.

MINISTER CHOOSES PICTURE FOR TEXT

The very Reverend William MacCormack, D. D., dean of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral of Los Angeles, chose as the text for his sermon recently Basil King's novel, "The Street Called Straight." Dean MacCormack said in part:

"'The Street Called Straight' is really one of the most interesting, and I think at the same time, one of the most profitable books I have ever read. I don't wonder that the moving picture people selected it for a moving picture play, because if they have carried out in anything like the original the purpose and lesson of the book, I am sure that no one can see the play without being helped and strengthened by it. If you forget everything else and remember this one thing, you have got it all, 'The Street Called Straight' leads to the 'House Called Beautiful' and there are 'Lights Along the Way'."

FOX TO BUILD THEATRE AND HOTEL BUILDING

William Fox plans to erect in the West End, St. Louis, a one million dollar theatre and apartment hotel, according to John Zanft, General Manager of the Fox Enterprises.

The architects, Lehmann and Lehmann of Newark, N. J., were recently in St. Louis conferring with Mr. Zanft concerning the project.

It is said that this undertaking is a fore-runner to the erection of various houses throughout the West.

PROPS THE REAL THING

The Pandora Production Company, which has been filming "The Crucifix of Destiny," recently spent some time at Santa Barbara on location.

The fact that scenes were taken for the picture in the famous Santa Barbara Mission is unprecedented.

It is also interesting to note that the props used throughout the East Indian episode of the picture were the real thing, and not the result of some art director's imagination. The realism of these scenes was further enhanced by the fact that the Hindu language was employed by native characters in the picture.

The picture is said to possess a strong religious appeal.

Paul Bern has been promoted to the rank of co-director at Goldwyn.

THE SCARLET THREAD

Mrs. F. S. Keeder

St. Johnsville, N. Y.

At Ellis island John Armstrong insults a foreigner by sticking a cigarette in the mouth of an idol which the man has. The old pagan swears that he will put a curse on Armstrong. A few weeks later he steals Armstrong's three-year-old son—and the mother dies. Armstrong marries again and his second wife dies, giving birth to a daughter. Armstrong sends the babe to a convent and disappears.

Fifteen years later Frank Reid and his friend, Dick Thornton, pass the convent and see Elizabeth Armstrong, who has grown to be a little hoyden. They make her acquaintance by stealing over the fence. Later she falls in love with Dick. In the absence of Frank, Dick persuades her to elope with him and there is a bogus marriage ceremony performed. Frank discovers what has happened and saves Elizabeth from Dick, although the latter insinuates that it is too late. There is a fight between the two during which time Elizabeth runs away and falls into the hands of a gypsy band.

John Armstrong's attorneys offer a reward of five thousand dollars for the recovery of Mildred. Tom Kilts, one of the gypsies, falls in love with Elizabeth and renames her "Beauty." This arouses the jealousy of Verna, a gypsy girl. Elizabeth soon becomes very popular with the gypsy band. She is placed in a hypnotic state by the old gypsy queen so that she does not remember who she is. Elizabeth recovers her memory and runs away. She is recaptured and again put under the spell. Verna and her stepfather have an illicit love affair and together they hatch a plot to murder the old queen, take Elizabeth and claim the five thousand dollar reward. This was nipped in the bud by other members of the band. Verna instigates another rebellion and Elizabeth goes to town for the police. She meets Frank Reid and he returns with her and the rebellion is quelled. Frank does not recognize Elizabeth. During the fight Ed is killed by Frank. A stray bullet strikes Elizabeth and Frank thinks her dead. It develops that the bullet has lodged in a chain which she wears, and she is only dazed. Dick Thornton and a party come along and view the fight with interest. Verna becomes acquainted with Dick.

As a gypsy girl Elizabeth goes to Frank's home with Verna to tell fortunes for his guests. Verna steals a brooch from a woman and puts it in Elizabeth's clothes. She is searched, the brooch found and the police summoned. Frank contrives for her to escape. Dick Thornton is present and is the one who phones for the police. After she leaves, it dawns upon Frank that "Beauty" is Elizabeth.

The gypsy band recapture Elizabeth and go west. Here Elizabeth runs into Dick again and he tries to take liberties with her in a fortune telling booth. She cries out and Tom, the gypsy, rescues her and kicks Dick out. As Dick goes out he knocks down an old foreigner (the one who put the curse on her father). Elizabeth binds his wounded hand and the old foreigner removes the curse. The old gypsy queen kills herself so that Tom may become ruler. Elizabeth escapes again and Tom pursues her back to the East. She jumps off the train and takes refuge in the shack of an old recluse. Tom follows. While the old recluse is away Tom tries to abduct Elizabeth. The old man returns and saves her and drives Tom away. Tom returns the next day with the sheriff and has Elizabeth arrested for the theft of the diamond brooch. Elizabeth goes to a church for deliverance from her enemies after the recluse gets her released on bail. A sister sees her and recognizes her as the little girl who has been in the convent.

The lawyer who is engaged to defend Elizabeth is an uncle of Frank Reid's. He is taken ill and Frank is called in. He wins the case for her. Tom is in the courtroom and pleads with the Judge for Elizabeth, his promised wife, to be restored to him. The old recluse, who has now thrown away his disguise and appears as a very distinguished man in the courtroom, comes forward and claims her as his daughter. Frank tells her that he has a claim on her. Tom, the gypsy, shoots Frank and escapes. Dick is in the courtroom and comes on the scene. Elizabeth denounces him as being the cause of all her trouble. John Armstrong shoots Dick. When his shirt is opened a birthmark on his body identifies him as Armstrong's son, who was kidnapped by the old foreigner.

Frank recovers and marries Elizabeth. Dick repents for his sins. Tom, the gypsy, and Verna engage in a fight on the wharf and both fall in and drown.

CRITICISM

There is a lot of good material in this story, but it is too rambling to make a good plot. In other words, the story wanders around. It is too much of a narrative and not enough plot. The characters in it do not appear to be striving toward any very definite end. There are too many sub-plots or by-plots. A good picture plot should revolve around a conflict between two elements who are striving for some particular goal.

There must be some definite cause for action, to make the story interesting. For instance, in this story, it might be the desire of Frank Reid to win Elizabeth—in which case all manner of obstacles might be placed in the way of his doing so. He should be kept before the camera throughout the story and not dropped from time to time as this author has done. Either Dick Thornton or Tom Kiltz should be the chief "heavy" or villain in the story and the other incidental or an accessory. In this plot the author introduces Dick, carries him for a ways and then drops him to introduce the gypsy lover, Tom—and then she picks Dick up again when it becomes convenient to use him. She does not establish any particular premise for the appearance of Dick. He is just "there" and there is no plausible reason why he should be there.

The situation as described in paragraph two is good, but in number three the story gets off the track. A lot of extraneous characters are introduced. I refer here to the plot of Verna and the man Ed, to kill the

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

gypsy queen. This is an entirely new cause for action or development which does not affect one of the principal characters. They constitute the triangle. Then, all of a sudden, these three characters step back into obscurity and the three gypsies usurp the center of the stage with an entirely new story, as far as our original cause for action is concerned. Now if the plot of the gypsies is against Frank and Dick is in league with them, that would be a different proposition.

The author of this story has adopted a clumsy method of establishing Dick and Elizabeth as half-brother and sister. She has a man lose two wives by their deaths, consecutively. This is bad construction and would be uninteresting, because of repetition. The proposition of having the old foreigner place a curse on Armstrong is bad for the reason that every one knows that no such thing exists. The same mistake—that of dropping this character out of the story and just picking him up when convenient at a later time—is made here. If the old foreigner is to be given something to do which has an important bearing on the fates of the principals, then he should be given more action in the plot. Why does he just happen to bob up in the west when he does? The same question may be asked about Dick. Why does he just happen to be in the west. What does the author gain by having the scene of action transplanted to the west anyway? There is nothing in the story of any importance that happens in the west, that could not just as well take place in the east. Never jump the characters in your story from one part of the country to the other unless there is a good reason for doing so.

It is also illogical that the old gypsy queen could use her hypnotic powers on Elizabeth as if they were a drug, the effects of which would wear off gradually.

During the time that the gypsies and Dick are west, our hero, Frank, is dropped completely out of the story again. Have a heart. We must pay the fellow who plays the part of Frank a salary, so lets keep him working. Besides, the audience will lose interest in him if we leave him out of the picture too long.

Elizabeth escapes and is caught again too many times by the gypsies. Remember this is not a blood and thunder "serial." A continual repetition of this action in one evening's entertainment would soon become tiresome, even though it were interesting in the beginning.

Why does Armstrong disguise himself and live as a recluse—to suddenly blossom out in the courtroom as a distinguished gentleman? The synopsis does not explain any motive for such an unusual action. If you are going to have people do such things, you must make some reasonable explanation for same.

Why introduce an uncle of Frank's, who takes the case of defending Elizabeth? He is just an extra character, who is not needed in the story. Why not have Frank take the case in the first place? Bear this in mind: Do not introduce unnecessary characters. Give all the hero business to the hero and heroine, and the "dirty work" to the villain, and introduce such other characters as are necessary to place these three in situations that they cannot place one another.

There is a decided anti-climax near the end of the story. The real climax is where the real identity of Elizabeth is revealed and she is restored to her father and to Frank. The anti-climax comes when Tom, the gypsy, shoots Frank and Armstrong shoots his own son, Dick—which any sane man would not do without more serious provocation and evidence.

As a whole, I do not believe the story would be salable in its present form, for the reason that the situation of the white girl falling into the hands of a band of gypsies has been done time and time again on the screen. Why not try to think of something that is more novel and less hackneyed?

BIG 4 CONSOLIDATED OIL COMPANY

Why I Guarantee Money Back Option Oil Leases

I KNOW this property—and I KNOW the men behind it. I KNOW what adjacet property has produced, and I KNOW that America's biggest oil companies are drilling within a few hundred feet of our land.

Think of it! World-famous companies, such as Standard, Midwest, Sinclair, are drilling within a few hundred feet of leases which I am offering you. These companies rarely waste time or money drilling where they are not practically certain of striking oil. Producing wells are all around us—millions of barrels of paraffine base oil were taken out of Wyoming fields last year. The sixth largest refinery in the United States is located at Casper, only a short distance from our holdings.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY. A HUNDRED DOLLARS VENTURED TODAY MAY MEAN A FORTUNE FOR YOU TOMORROW. The moment ANE ONE of the wells now drilling comes in YOU WILL HAVE A LEASE THAT WILL BRING FROM $1,000 to $10,00 AN ACRE IN THE OPEN MARKET. I know, and the Los Angeles business men behind this know, htat there is no more wonderful opportunity in the United States today for the man with a few hundred dollars to share in a legitimate oil speculation.

THE GUARANTEE:

To prove my honesty of purpose and deep-rooted belief in these leases, I will, if you so desire, guarantee that six months from date of purchase I will refund the money paid for the lease with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. Security will be placed in escrow with a Los Angeles Bank, and the guarantee made absolutely binding. You don't risk one penny—you CAN'T lose. And you have the best chance in the world to make a fortune.

LOCAL EXHIBITING

The most noticeable thing about our Los Angeles Picture Palaces seems to be the hundreds lined up nightly on the sidewalks "out front." Truly it promises much for the industry when such a number will repeatedly suffer an hour or more for entrance to their favorite theatre, no matter what the play. This demonstration is evidently a tribute to the film capital's playhouses. Of course, there are many complaints from these pleasure seekers, occasioned by the tiring waits, and often it is bitterly stated that "no show is worth it," but our theatre managers point smilingly to the continued crowds and appear not to worry. They are satisfied that they have, after much experimentation, reached the most satisfactory and feasible method of handling their patrons.

Manager Poole of the California Theatre, described how his system of electric signals simplifies the process of ushering to such an extent that an outgoing party meets the one coming to claim his seat half-way up the aisle.

According to several Los Angeles house managers, the suggested reserved seat plan is impractical because of the continuous method of showing now employed. On account of this, the public arrives any time, and naturally many "stay over" into the following performance. If seats were reserved, their price would be in many cases lost to the house once every evening, while disgruntled patrons would be turned away.

As a partial remedy for this condition, Sid Grauman, in a recent interview, said that in planning his new Metropolitan Theatre, he has made provision for a loge section in which will be sold reserved seats for twice their ordinary price. They will then be at the disposal of the purchaser the entire evening. What this experiment will accomplish is to be yet proven.

However, the most significant point about any of the above is the fact that we must recognize the exhibiting end of this industry as one of its most important problems. Certainly many a fair production can be made extraordinary to an audience which has received courteous and efficient attention along the line from the lobby or even the "sidewalk" in, and a better one can be ruined by the acquisition of an irritated viewpoint during the same process. How much do some of our producers owe the exhibitor for the success of their pictures?

WE'RE OFF!

With the coming election looming nearer and nearer, the present registration drive is more than in order. We consider it the duty of every red blooded photoplayer not only to register, but to make use of that registration to better conditions for the local picture colony at the polls.

To facilitate this for him, CAMERA! will this week have Fred Brassch in his car at every studio to take registrations.

Look out for Mr. Brassch, and don't fail to take advantage of this opportunity. The profession will do things in this election. Are you starting with us?

THE ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

Installment Seven

In character make-up initiative must be used. There are several different kinds of hair and as many methods of applying it. The best crepe hair to use should not be too fine. For most work it should be straightened. To do this, unravel it from the braid, soak it in water, then squeeze all water out and bind around a bottle, stretching it as you bind it and allow to dry on the bottle. It can also be ironed out to advantage.

When preparing hair for application take a comb in left hand and the hair in the right, and lightly whip the hair over the teeth of the comb. Do this until you have the desired amount on comb. Do not take hair off of comb to trim. Should you have a lot of hair work to do, as in the instance of a full beard, it is best to prepare the hair over night. Do not have the hair too thick. When you have gone the entire length of the comb, lay the hair upon a book with the comb hanging over the side, then take a pair of sharp scissors, preferably barber's scissors, and cut hair inside of comb next to book, holding the hair onto the book with the flat of the left hand; then place it between the leaves of the book. Repeat this operation until you have sufficient hair to make the beard.

To put on the beard it is necessary to make the chinpiece first. Whip the hair over the comb as described before until you have it half the length of the comb and as thick as the teeth will hold. Gather all in left hand and cut off inside of comb, then with the index finger of the right hand work a hole down through the center of the hair. Before applying the spirit gum see that the skin is free from grease. Next apply chinpiece, allowing the chin to go into the hole previously made. Press this well against the spirit gum with towel until same is set. Then carefully wipe the fingers over hair attached removing all supedfluous hair. Now take a portion of hair from the book and apply it to face about one inch above that already applied. Continue this up the left side of the face until you reach the hair of the head. Repeat same on the right side. Around the jaw bones should be carefully worked in the same manner. Now trim the beard with the shears to the desired shape. The most important point connected with a beard is to take away the artificial look. This can be greatly assisted by the careful blending and working of the edges. A beard never grows in a sharp line down the face. The natural effect can be obtained by applying fine layers of hair, gradually making them thinner and thinner in the direction of the nose, until at last you are just using one or two hairs. The hair near the temple should be thinner at the chin, and carefully blended with the hair of the head. It is most advisable to mix the colors of the hair in making a beard. A beard very seldom has exactly the same shade of hair all the way through; therefore study the character and mix your hair accordingly. On either side of the center, under the lower lip should be left almost bare, for it you notice on most men on these places, hair does not grow profusely. To make the mustache, comb the hair in the usual manner to approximately the thickness of the lip, holding the hair between the thumb and finger of the left hand, cut it away from the comb on the inside, then cut the hair again on the bias. Having covered the lip that is to have hair on with spirit gum, apply the hair, end on, pressing well against lip with towel until set, then trim carefully with shears. A mustache never grows straight across or straight up, as French characters have been known to so errorously make up. All mustaches grow the same, following the lip, slightly curving downward. It is what you do with the long hair at the ends that will more or less determine the character that you are playing. If you desire to play a Frenchman with the hair pointing upward, do so with the hair at the end of the mustache, but do not stick the hair in vertical lines upward from the center of the lip. Large gaps at the center of the mustache should be avoided. Should it be necessary to divide the mustache in the center, remember this point—where you leave the opening, throw a light shadow or blend it with a few lines of the damatgraph pencil.

"THE TRANSFORMATION"

Artie Marie Wilson, Mephis, Tenn.
(All right reserved.)

Ruth Manning, whose father is a wealthy banker, and extremely conventional, suddenly manifests a desire to think for herself, resulting in the study of Darwin, also psychology. She tires of society, rejecting Richard Foster, young social leader selected by her father—which plays havoc in the Manning family. Unknown to her father, during her investigations she meets Captain Paul Douglas, expert harpoonist and noted sportsman, who is well versed in studies in which she is particularly interested and at which time he deposits fifty thousand dollars in her father's bank. Her father entertains hopes that she will overcome her wild fancies for such studies, and yet marry Richard, son of William R. Foster, cashier and a director in his bank, whose reputation as an old social leader still holds good. Through secret gambling, however, the financial condition of the elder Foster is getting into a dangerous shape.

In order to divert Ruth's mind, her father arranges a yachting party for her, inviting Richard to go along. Knowing nothing of her infatuation for Douglas, he charters Douglas' yacht for a cruise along the Florida coast. Ruth and Douglas are thrown together and their love affair is discovered by Richard, who is very jealous. Douglas leaves the yacht to investigate a strange sea monster and is lost. For two days the party search for him, but to no avail. The yacht returns and Richard announces that Douglas has come to his death. Ruth becomes very ill from grieving over the disappearance of Douglas, coupled with her father's continuous urging that she marry Richard, the man whom she does not love. She is given psychological treatment by her doctor and mental encouragement by Henry Ardman, a liberal thinker and another officer in the bank.

In the meantime Douglas lands on the coast of Florida, where he sets about to preserve the monster which he has captured. He decides to draw on his account in the New York bank, and is surprised to learn that he has no funds, so decides to go to New York.

William R. Foster has taken advantage of the absence of Douglas and bribed John Hamilton, a poor man, to forge the name of Douglas to a check and draw out all his money . When Douglas returns to New York he accidently gets acquainted with Hamilton and secures his confession to the forgery. A board meeting is called at the bank and Douglas walks in and confronts Foster with Hamilton and his confession. Foster confesses, but says he cannot repay the money. In the meantime Ruth does not know of the return of Douglas. Douglas is offered the palatial home of the Fosters, decides to take it and not prosecute. Ruth is surprised later when Douglas is restored to her along with the palatial home—and her own father is saved from his financial difficulties.

CRITICISM

This story hasn't enough plot, and is illogical in places. There is probably enough action for about two reels, but not enough plot to make it interesting. The characterization that the author gives to her leading lady, Ruth, would not make her especially liked by the audience. To use a slang expression, the general public is not "crazy" about students of Darwin, bugologists, nuts, faddists, highbrows or other eccentric people. They prefer just "regular" folks, like the most of us are. If you are writing a comedy, or a story where the eccentricities of some character is the basis for a dramatic situation, it is all right to introduce eccentrics.

I am going to illustrate here how I put the "Square and Compass" on a plot to see just how much meat there is in it. I will describe the bare plot of the above story in just as few words and see how much of a foundation we have to build a story on:

"Ruth Manning, the daughter of a banker, falls in love with Paul Douglas, wealthy sportsman. Her father wants her to marry Dick Foster, son of the cashier in his bank, whom Ruth does not love. Manning plans a yachting cruise to divert Ruth's mind. Knowing nothing of her infatuation for Douglas, Manning charters his yacht. Dick goes along, and in search for a sea monster while on the trip, is lost. The party return and Douglas is announced as dead. In the meantime Dick's father bribes a workingman to forge the name of Douglas and draw all his funds from the bank. Ruth is ill upon her return. Douglas shows up in Florida, attempts to draw on his bank, finds money gone, returns to New York, meets the forger, who confesses and implicates Dick's father. The elder Foster is confronted with his crime—confesses—is forced to give up his palatial home to repay Douglas. Douglas is restored to Ruth and they settle in the Foster home."

You see, there is the naked plot. Not very much to it, is there? The plot of a really good story cannot be told in that few words. There must be more dramatic situations—more complications—more twists—especially if the story is to be a melodrama.

It is illogical that Douglas upon his arrival on the Florida coast would not at once communicate with the skipper of his yacht, which has returned to New York. The introduction of the doctor who cures Ruth with psychological treatment is not convincing, unless some novel method is shown in detail—and such a proceeding is not interesting unless it has some direct bearing on the rest of the story. It is also a mistake to make a heavy or villain of Dick's father, when it is Dick himself that we want to put out of the way of the girl.

Why not have something interesting and thrilling happen on the yacht—some plot against Douglas by Dick—a mutiny or something like that. Have Douglas thrown overboard—landed on an uninhabited island—the yacht wrecked and the girl carried to the same island—and bring Dick along also.. Keep all your principals working. What happens back in New York while all our three principals are away is merely incidental to the plot.

PROMOTION OIL STOCKS

"Against the oft-repeated argument that many oil companies have made fabulous profits on the original investment, stands the cold fact that, on actual investigation of a great number of average promotions, only ONE OUT OF 800 has been found by us to be a consistent success. The fact that established companies operate in the vicinity of the property is small insurance of success, as the big companies, with their high-priced experts, usually get the pick of the producing areas."

—Magazine of Wall Street, March 6, 1920.

IT is difficult for the average man to learn that he must be more careful and more conservative if he has only a small sum of money than he would if he were wealthy. He takes one "chance" after another in promotion stocks. When at least old age overtakes him he is dependent on relatives or charity.

If he had taken the same money and invested it at 6 per cent., adding to it a little each month out of his savings, old age could be faced with an assurance of financial independence.

We are prepared to supply you with high-grade investment securities which have been thoroughly investigated by our experts. If you are interested in safe investments yielding 6 to 7 per cent., write, call or telephone for our latest investment list.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

FRANCIS PARKS

Just seventeen years ago Frances Parks made her earthly debut at Dawson, Ga. We understand that Dawson is a considerable distance from the film capital, but the little Southern girl arrived without difficulty. Her picture progress was soon guaranteed, for having attracted the attention of the master director while doing a "bit," there followed for her two years as a member of the Griffith stock company. And then Mr. Griffith packed up bag and baggage and transported his company to New York. Miss Parks did not take advantage of her opportunity to accompany the outfit because she refused to be separated from her family.

Her next engagement was to play the ingenue in Robert Warwick's "Jack Straw," which Lasky picture is showing at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre this week.

Interesting offers followed, and now the little lady has been added to the cast of "The Figurehead," Eugene O'Brien's current production for Selznick, in which picture she is causing considerable comment by her characterization of Kate.

When questioned concerning her ideas on Romance, she stated quite definitely that to date she has had no time for contemplation of the subject, and any way she prefers giving all her spare attention to music.

Cameramen, assistants and laboratory workers are cordially invited to make use of this department. It's your questions to C. J. Barber, care Camera! 326½ South Broadway.

H. B. C. of Spokane asks for information on negative and positive developers to get snappy prints in northern latitudes.

ANS.—I suggest that the exposure of negative be more carefully watched and possibly lessened. Negative developer for two-rack tank:

Water	50 gal.
Sodium sulphite	4 oz. 2 dr.
Pot. bromide	1 oz.
Pot. iodide	5 dr.
Pyro stock	1 gal.
Sodium carbonate	2 lbs.

PYRO STOCK

Water	5 gal.
Sodium bisulphite	1¼ lbs.
Pyro.	3½ lbs.
Oxalic acid	1½ oz.

Note.—If more contrast is needed, reduce the amount of pot. iodide.

Positive developer for two-rack tank:

Water	50 gal.
Metal, etc.	5 oz.
Hydrochinone	2 lbs.
Sodium sulphite	8 lbs.
Sodium carbonate	6 lbs.
Pot. bromide	2 oz.
Sodium bisulphite	2 oz.

Note.—To reduce contrast add more sodium carbonate.

T. S. asks for remedy to stop streaking in color work.

ANS.—I presume you are not using enough acitic acid, if it is the regular dye coloring.

B. H. has trouble with positives coming out yellow. Asks cause.

ANS.—Fault is generally caused by poorly dissolved chemicals or badly overworked developer. Tanks must be thoroughly scrubbed when emptied and kept covered.

K. B. has trouble with negative density not being uniform. Asks for probable cause and remedy for same.

ANS.—The laboratory is seldom at fault, as you suggest. Invariably it is lack of attention in getting uniform exposure. More thought should be given to light intensities.

Harry Wulze has returned to National to write continuity.

SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past years in regard to the submissions of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believes that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

WE ARE AWAKE

The profession faces the election with a new resolve and characteristic calm. In fact agitation has never been mentioned among its various faults and virtues. As a result our political neighbor has gotten away with unspeakable insults and overdone dictation. Now, however, his day is done. He is finished, and without a perceptible struggle. He realizes that he has consistently overstepped all bonds of reason and is perhaps even now marvelling at his past uncleverness. Or maybe he counts as gain that period of time in which success attended his daring. At any rate he is through, and the industry is through with him—so through that it is unnecessary to create a disturbance about the fact.

As quietly as he has before overlooked impossible conditions, Mr. Professional Man will this year rectify them. His patience is quite justly exhausted. He owns 20,000 votes, and from now on they shall be utilized to his advantage exclusively.

The candidate who will receive his support need not fulfil any particular party requirements. If he is an "honest-to-goodness" man with a sufficient sense of gratitude to realize that the motion picture industry is the instrument which put Hollywood on the map and as such should be given consideration as the most important factor in the community, he is the individual for whom the profession is searching.

Verily, he who does not sympathize with the above sentiment will do well to remove his presence from this district. Said district, by the way, proved last election time, if you will remember, to a certain would-be supervisor that $10,000 worth of advertising to attract the picture vote was no offset at all to a previous "no dogs, cats, moving picture actors, etc." viewpoint held by himself.

If the industry unorganized beat whom it chose then, its adversary will have a hot time this year. Privately we are ashamed of the insipid "sass" already taken. Self-respect demands a comeback, and intelligence points the road. "Gang way!" all long hairs.

ON SUNDAY SHOWING

Possibly the most discussed question among exhibitors today, especially on the Eastern coast, is that of Sunday showing. A remarkable recent debate on the subject took place at Trenton, N. J., March 8th, between the New Jersey exhibitors (assisted by sympathizers from other states) and the members of the Lord's Day Alliance.

We understand that the meeting was a hot one and that some rather radical statements were made. In answer to the accusation by the picture interests that seventy percent of the New Jersey population desired Sunday liberty, it is stated the clergy replied that few people know what is good for them.

It appeals to us that this last is the most significant statement expressed in the entire controversy. Who, we ask you, in this country, presumably governed by the desires of the majority, has the right to question the public's ability to look after itself? Has not such dictation by the church and other elements of social life always proven harmful to politics? History reminds us that the foundation of our government was laid as the result of exactly such injustice.

It is to be hoped that our radical friends will not attempt to "rub it in" after a recent success or so which they have enjoyed, for we feel that such an action would be neither delicate nor politic at this time.

It appears to us that the people the country over, are considerably dissatisfied with general conditions. However, until the Lord's Day Alliance revises the Federal Constitution, it is the public's prerogative to speak—and the season of expression approaches.

COMPETITION TO BE KEENER SAYS "VARIETY"

"There will be a battle to enlist exhibitors' interest and entice them into signing contracts next fall far more colorful than the mere buying up of theatres. The general nature and extent of the preparations were indicated this week by several outstanding circumstances:

"1. The quiet surrounding William Fox and his activities lead to many wild rumors. He is probably more heavily bulwarked with cash than ever before.

"2. The resignation of H. Whitman Bennett as production manager for Famous Players-Lasky and the return from the coast of H. D. Connick, representative of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Wall Street backers of the Paramount organization.

"3. The arrival of Maxwell Karger, director general for Metro from the coast, where he has added more than 50 acres to the Hollywood lot since Marcus Loew bought in on the Rowland company. Mr. Karger has now established himself here and will immediately set about getting a Long Island studio and building the must discussed 500-foot stage.

"Of these circumstances the least understood is the one dealing with Fox. Winfield Sheehan is still obroad for him and there is an undercurrent of feeling that he is going to give Adolph Zukor the one real battle the Paramount chief need fear next fall."

"JUST A WIFE" VERY POPULAR IN LOS ANGELES

"Just a Wife," Selznick's latest all star offering headed by Kathlyn Williams, Roy Stewart and Leatrice Joy, has proven more than satisfactory. It is splendidly cast and ably directed by Howard Hickman.

Kathlyn Williams as the clever, intuitive woman of the world leaves nothing to be desired in her performance. It is consistent and artistic. She should have a better "closing," however.

Roy Stewart makes good use of his unusual opportunity, first as the careless adventurer and then as the railroad magnate. His character is convincing.

Leatrice Joy is satisfactory as the little wife.

A very novel character, interpreted by William Lion West, is introduced late in the story which has much to do with the climax. He is instrumental in the development of one of the story's several novel situations.

The humanness of the picture further assisted the exceptional cast in accomplishing the success of "Just a Wife."

JAMES OLIVE CURWOOD CHALLENGES PRODUCERS

In answer to the rumor that several producers are preparing to issue as five and six reel features old one and two reel scenarios written and sold years ago by authors who have since built reputations for themselves, and in many cases are now actively producing special features, James Oliver Curwood has gone to New York to challenge the issue.

Mr. Curwood, who is the head of the recently organized James Oliver Curwood Productions, Inc., is much concerned over the possibility that exhibitors may be taken in by these inferior productions to be exploited as late features by our world renouned authors.

Mr. Curwood says: "Exhibitors are entitled to know the truth about the age,merits, and value of stories, whether they are written by me or any other author. If there is no law which will protect authors and exhibitors from being imposed upon by unscrupulous producers who dig up old material sold to them as one and two reel stories and which they pad into feature lengths because those particular authors have made reputations it is time that one was created. I am only one of many authors who have been and are being taken advantage of in this way with exhibitors as the unwitting instruments, and am in New York now to complete plans with twelve of the best known writers in the country for making it mighty uncomfortable for the producers to use unfair methods to cash in on our reputation by deceiving the exhibitors with material we wrote long ago. As a member of the National Council of Authors' League, I studied copyright and protective laws thoroughly and with special legal assistance I am going to test the matter to the limit.

To any court in the land I can prove an absolute and financial damage to myself and to any exhibitor from productions of that sort. If a producer bought of me a two reel story and paid for two reels, he has the privilege now or one hundred years from now of producing that story in two reels, but he has no legal right to pad that two-reeler into a feature and humbug the exhibitor with it on the strength of my modern success as the producer of screen dramas."

Included in the list of producers contemplating the above appears the name of Col. W. N. Selig.

Pioneer is exploiting "Bubbles" in which Mary Anderson stars.

First National announces that its franchise sale starts soon.

Tom Moore's next Goldwyn play will be "Officer 666," by Augustin MacHugh.

C. B. Price & Co. has purchased Billie Rhodes' "The Pajama Girl" for the exploitation of which elaborate plans are under way.

The Film Booking Offices, (1919) Ltd., located at 22 Soho Square, London, has commenced an American advertising campaign.

Announcement was made this week that a Broadway Los Angeles playhouse has booked the Milburn Moranti Comedy series for an indefinite showing.

SCENARIO CRITICISMS

By Wycliffe A. Hill

"PLAYING SQUARE"

Author's name witheld.

Robert Chambers is a bank clerk—in love with Guendolyn Winthrop, a society belle. She will not marry him until he is in financial position to afford her the pleasures to which she is accustomed. Roscoe Hunting is his rival. Roscoe plots to interest Bob in some fake oil stock in order to break him. Bob falls for the plot--but a gusher is brought in and Bob is rich. Roscoe then gets Bob in a crooked poker deal with associates. There is a fight—the lights are put out—someone slips a gun in Bob's hand--he fires—then escapes.

The next morning Roscoe tells Bob that a man has been shot and that he is suspected—then railroads Bob to a cabin in the mountains. Bob's machine ditches in front of the cabin of an old recluse by the name of Grizzly Jones He has a daughter named Tessie. Bob feigns a worse injury than he has really suffered—because he likes Tessie, and stays several days. Tessie writes in her diary that "I am so happy tonight—the big handsome stranger put his arm around me tonight and said he loved me—"

Two of the crooks who were at the poker party arrive —snoop around on the place—want to buy it from the old man. Bob follows them—learns that there is oil on the place and that the crooks plan to beat the old man out of it. They see him—are going to murder him when Tessie appears. Now they are going to throw her from a cliff. Grizzly appears. He has found the diary and thinking that Bob has eloped with Tessie—starts out to find them with his shotgun. The crooks escape with some bird shot in their trousers. Tessie is heartbroken when Bob says that he is going to return to town and marry a girl to whom he is engaged. He has learned from the crooks that the proposition of the man being killed was all a frameup. So Bob returns to the city.

When he arrives in the city he calls on Guendolyn and finds her cold—she is going to marry Roscoe. Bob congratulates Roscoe and himself and prepares to return to the country for Tessie. In the meantime old Grizzly comes to town with a sawed off shotgun. He is not going to allow Tessie's heart to be broken in such a ruthless manner. Just as Bob is about ready to go he is confronted with the business end of the shotgun and the announcement that "You are going back with me and marry my gal—or I'll blow your head off." Bob slaps the old man on the back and tells him that "that is just exactly what I'm going to do"—but not at the point of a gun."

Bob returns with Grizzly and marries Tessie.

CRITICISMS

Some fairly good stuff—but weak in places. Might be developed into a fair two reeler. Trouble is that it is neither western, or society drama. Most of the two reelers are straight westerns. This seems to be a mixture. Bob does not show up in the right light—switches from one girl to the other too easily. If he really loves Guendolyn, he would any female" is all he is looking for. I would cut Guendolyn out of the story. Such dames as she, do not wrap manly fellows like the author would have us believe Bob is, around her finger. Now if there was some other reason why he was obliged to marry Guendolyn, or thought he was, it would be different.

The proposition of a man buying what appears to be fake oil stock—and then having it develop that a gusher comes in, is old stuff. Besides it is illogical that Roscoe would sell the stock if a well was actually being drilled on the property. He might make a mistake and sell the wrong stock, however. If Bob is not just a big sucker, why does he allow Roscoe to inveigle him into a crooked poker game. Why does he not go right away and marry Guendolyn as soon as he strikes oil—instead of fooling with a crooked poker game—or playing poker at all. The two crooks finding oil on old Grizzly's place is also old stuff. And if it is flowing out of the ground into a creek why has not old Grizzly found it himself. He doesn't know much about his own ranch, does he?

The latter part of the story—after Bob reaches the cabin of the old recluse—is the only good material offered —and it will have to be given a better beginning in order to make a good two reeler.

Next week I am going to say something to my readers who are trying to write scenarios, that will be of very much interest. I am going to tell them why ninety-nine per cent of the stories that are submitted by outside writers are rejected at the studios. Some of you may get peeved but what I shall say will be of great benefit to you, if you take my advice seriously.

ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

INSTALLMENT EIGHT

The proper handling of hair is one of the most difficult points to study in make-up. Unless one can use it with some degree of perfection the whole character will be spoiled however clever the acting may be. The audience will be fascinated with that conspicuous artificial beard. As a result, the effect of the work will be lost.

It is possible to handle a beard or moustache in such a way that it is indistinguishable from the real thing even at a close range. This can only be accomplished, however, after careful study and constant practice.

To make a stubble beard one should comb the hair as described in previous issues. After cutting it from the comb, hold all the hair together closely in the left hand, and continue to cut it in small lengths of about one-eighth of an inch until you have half a cup full.

Then with the fingers mix this up until there are no lumps and no matted parts. Next spirit gum the face with two coats, and take a bunch of the chopped hair between the fingers and thumb and daub it on where the spirit gum has been applied. Then with a soft brush remove all superfluous hair.

To make a very heavy beard, comb the hair in the usual manner and cut it from the comb slightly on the bias. Spirit gum the face where hair is to be, and starting from the chin, apply the hair "end on" in layers, working upwards. After completing this, carefully remove all superfluous hair and blend the edges off carefully with a few hairs to take away any sharp lines. It is most advisable to mix different colored hair in all beards.

The greatest secret in producing a successful beard is to avoid a sharp outline or edge. Just how far up or down the cheek a man's beard finishes, you cannot exactly tell. The reason this finishing line must be indistinct is that the hair gradually fades away. Make-up should follow nature in every respect.

Should you find the handling of crepe hair too difficult, it would be advisable to have your beard and moustache made by a wigmaker. After applying them carefully it will be necessary for you to blend the edges off with a little hair a shade lighter than the beard.

PICKUPS BY THE STAFF

MR. TOURNEUR PLEASE WRITE

March 22, 1920.

Editor of Camera.
Dear Sir:

Thursday, November 13th, 1919, to Thursday, March 18, 1920; eighteen weeks. ("A Mystery in the Mountains.")

Eighteen weeks of waiting, worrying and bitter disappointment!

Twenty years I studied in schools, after which I prepared for the Art of Moving Picture Production in particular (scenarios, music, etc.)

Will anyone blame me if I turn away—with bitter feeling—from this field of labor?

Will anyone blame me if I give my reason for doing it—to the public, before long?

Will anyone blame me if I feel like having been robbed of many thousands of dollors?

Authors and Artists too do not live on air and straw alone!

But do not the men—responsible in office—hurt themselves and their business just as much as they injure artists and authors?

Eighteen weeks of anxious waiting I have kept my promise, I have been loyal—to Maurice Tourneur's Studio!

Has 'Loyalty' ever been paid???

Yet before I start any action, I wish to hear from the Editor of Camera!

Perhaps I need not worry?

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) CHARLES OSTEY,
704 Traction Ave.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

N. B. And my "Author's" name shall be "Kedos", which means "Sorrow".

BRYANT WASHBURN TO FILM "A FULL HOUSE"

Under the direction of James Cruze at the Morosco Studio, Bryant Washburn is completing this week the filmed version by Elmer Harris of George Broadhurst's stage farce, "What Happened to Jones."

About April 5 it is understood Mr. Washburn will begin work on a new photoplay, "A Full House," by Fred Jackson, but no details are as yet obtainable.

Eddie Baker, of the Christie Comedies, has been loaned to the L-KO studio where he is playing the heavy in an all-star cast production being made under Director Buckingham.

WALLACE REID TO DO "THE CHARM SCHOOL"

Following his current picture, "What's Your Hurry?" Wallie Reid will take a brief vacation during which he is to make his appearance in a stage production in the northern part of the state. On his return to the studio it is understood he will begin work on "The Charm School," adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story. Full details will be announced later.

Malcolm Boyland has been appointed S. B. Samuelson's financial agent in the U. S. while that producer is abroad.

The National Film Corporation announces that it will make one serial a year hereafter with Jack Hoxie in the principal male role.

THE SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past year in regard to the submission of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believe that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

AT THE SELZNICK WEST COAST STUDIOS

Eugene O'Brien, under the direction of Bob Ellis, is now in the third week of the current production to be known as "The Figurehead," which he is making under the management of Harry Rapf, General Manager of the Selznick West Coast Studios. The story was written by John Lynch and the scenario by Ella Stuart Carson.

The production is now about half finished and work is being rushed by the whole Selznick organization to make possible its completion within the next two or three weeks.

The Owen Moore Company is now at work preparing continuity for their next production, "Stop That Man," written by George Hobart. Frank C. Griffin has been engaged to direct Mr. Moore and his assistant director will be Frank Kingsley. The production will start some time this week.

HAYAKAWA TO FORM OWN COMPANY

With the announcement that he will make no more program pictures comes the statement from Sessue Hayakawa, Japanese actor, that he will sever connections with Haworth to produce on his own right four stories a year by his own company, which is to be known as the Sessue Hayakawa Feature Play Company.

Arrangements to release his plays as special productions through Robertson-Cole have been made. His first picture will be "First Born," while "A Man's Name," Hayakawa's own play which he produced himself on the stage a few seasons ago, will be his second vehicle.

The new company will probably be located at the old Griffith studio on Sunset boulevard, where he is now at work under his existing Haworth contract.

In May Mr. Hayakawa will make a flying trip to New York to complete final organization plans. He intends to start production about June first.

ROBERT WARWICK IS "HUNTING TROUBLE"

Robert Warwick finishes "Hunting Trouble," his new Paramount Artcraft picture, this week under the direction of Joseph Henaberry. No announcement is as yet made for his next vehicle.

Cecil B. de Mille is arriving at the close of his Special, but as yet there is no name announced nor are any particulars forthcoming as to the character of the production.

A co-operative Production Alliance has been formed between Marshall Neilan and Albert A. Kaufman. Mr. Kaufman was formerly studio manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Company.

Although neither producer is financially interested in the other's company, and while their methods of distribution have no connection, the producing, technical and executive staffs have been merged into one. The different departments will be at the disposal of both companies.

Mr. Kaufman, who recently signed Allen Holubar to direct a series of special productions starring Dorothy Phillips, has not yet made known his plans for distribution, but announces that work on the first Holubar-Phillips feature will begin at the Neilan-Kaufman studio within a few days. Agnes Ayres will also be starred.

Maurice Wolf, resident manager of the Goldwyn Exchange, staged a preview, last Tuesday night, of the first print of Will Rogers latest picture, "The Strange Border." The entire office force was present. Additional interest centered in the preview because of the initial appearance in pictures of four-year-old Jimmie Rogers, a real chip off the old block, whose work follows along the same line as that of his dad even to the handling of the elusive rope.

WE HAVE WITH US THIS EVENING

'Course everybody knows they're making a serial at Brunton's—directed by Wm. S. Van Dyke—107 scenes is a small day's work for him. Then there's little "Chic" who does team work with Van Dyke. And there's Gus—cameraman who has become an expert in "setting up". Now we come to the hero, Jack Dempsey, who holds the center of the stage, who has worked seven heavy men over till he only has two left.

Next—Josie Sedgwick, who is a demon on a pinto pony, and next is Eddie Hearn. If you are ever looking for Eddie, rain or shine, you'll find him on the golf links at Griffith Park.

Clyde Benson is in the cast, too. I won't say what kind of a cast, as he has a shiny new car.

Hersho Mayo—I can't say much about Hersho—as his rheumatics won't let him move very fast—

Then there's Al Jennings. He's spending his time in hardware stores buying new knives or whetstones so he can whittle.

Oh yes—we pretty near forgot someone. There's an auburn haired girl in this serial called Ruth. We won't say how she rides a horse—but—

And speaking of Ruth that reminds me of a certain Carl Stockdale, who is one heavy man that Jack has not completely worked over.

Now I'll tell a secret, there is a romance in this serial that is not in the script—concerning a heavy man named Carl and an auburn haired girl—

Of course, we all know she's a nice girl—and we all know he's a nice fellow—and also he has a nice car. Now we can't censure Carl for taking a nice auburn haired girl home, nor can we censure the little lady for accepting the ride—oh!—why tell it all? This is Leap Year—you understand.

Why I Guarantee Money Back Option Oil Leases

I KNOW this property—and I KNOW the men behind it. I KNOW what adjacent property has produced, and I KNOW that America's biggest oil companies are drilling within a few hundred feet of our land.
Think of it! World-famous companies, such as Standard, Midwest, Sinclair, are drilling within a few hundred feet of leases which I am offering you. These companies rarely waste time or money drilling where they are not practically certain of striking oil. Producing wells are all around us—millions of barrels of paraffine base oil were taken out of Wyoming fields last year. The sixth largest refinery in the United States is located at Casper, only a short distance from our holdings.
THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY. A HUNDRED DOLLARS VENTURED TODAY MAY MEAN A FORTUNE FOR YOU TOMORROW. The moment ANY ONE of the wells now drilling comes in YOU WILL HAVE A LEASE THAT WILL BRING FROM $1.000 to $10,000 AN ACRE IN THE OPEN MARKET. I know, and the Los Angeles business men behind this know, that there is no more wonderful opportunity in the United States today for the man wiht a few hundred dollars to share in a legitimate oil speculation.

THE GUARANTEE:

To prove my honesty of purpose and deep-rooted belief in these leases, I will, if you so desire, guarantee that six months from date of purchase I will refund the money paid for the lease with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. Security will be placed in escrow with a Los Angeles Bank, and the guarantee made absolutely binding. You don't risk one penny—you CAN'T lose. And you have the best chance in the world to make a fortune.

How to Judge the Safety of Securities

"To judge from the literature of the financial world, it would seem quite an easy proposition to buy securities of new promotions and amass a great fortune through the profits often made by those who 'get in first.' The risk involved in buying the securities of a new enterprise is on general principles, so great that they should only be taken by men who are trained in the particular business in which the corporations intend to engage. Don't invest in new enterprises except on these conditions. . . ."

Magazine of Wall Street, Nov. 29, 1919.

ONE of the fundamental rules on which we conduct our business is that we will not recommend to our clients that they invest their funds in any enterprise which is in the promotion stage.

Our recommendation of a security among other things always means that we have investigated the assets and earning power and have decided on the basis of the past history and present value that the company is fully able to meet all payments when they come due.

Write, call or telephone for our latest list of investment securities, yielding from 4½% to 7%.

A HOMESPUN LETTER To Real Folks

To My Friends:—

I want to thank you for the many fine letters you are sending me and for the kind expressions they contain.

I am deeply grateful for your appreciation and understanding of what I am trying to bring out as an expression of good to all.

You will soon have an opportunity to see and judge "The Family Honor." It is my first independent production released through the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

I want you to see The Family Honor. I want you to know and understand the thought I have endeavored to convey.

I am making a stand for the picture you will want to carry home with you for a fireside topic.

You have lived, laughed and loved with the human characters in "The Turn In The Road," "Better Times," "The Other Half," and "Poor Relations."

And in The Family Honor you will find a new theme of tenderness that will strike a responsive chord on your heartstrings.

I know you will enjoy seeing this picture as much as I have enjoyed making it.

Personally I like it better than any picture I have had the privilege to produce.

Earnestly Yours,

King Vidor

CONCERNING OUR WOMEN

It occurs to us that if Hollywood society women were as concerned with civic and national betterment as the women of our industry, they would have less time to prate around about the "awful moving picture problem."

We wonder what chance Los Angeles would ever have had if the profession represented largely by its women had not been loyal, no matter what the issue. Remember the Liberty Loan, Red Cross, and various war drives? Just who was responsible for Southern California's success in all such attempts? It is only necessary to look up statistics to discover that had it not been for the efforts of our celebrities, the majority of whom were women, this city would have been in a sad way.

"WONDER IF IT'S LOADED?"

And now, since war drives are history, motion picture feminity has turned to the problems of reconstruction and civil improvement with characteristic zeal. Clubs have been formed to assist in lowering the cost of living, consider vital legislative measures and do all possible material good to the city's unfortunates.

At present one of the most interesting attempts of these sincere workers is the support of the Anti-Vivisection Society and the State amendment which it is attempting to accomplish at the next general assembly at Sacramento. If the amendment to prevent vivisection of animals in California is passed, it will be through the efforts largely of this circle of women, who are doing their best to make this supposedly Christian country of ours live up at least to the bare principles of civilization.

We recommend that our society friend might expend as much energy along these lines to advantage. Of course she couldn't catch up with her progressive actress sister, but such occupation might relieve the boredom of life, as it.

LOS ANGELES AND THE CINEMA

The future of Los Angeles will be determined by the development of the cinema. As the capital of the motion picture industry, it will be the first subject for experiments which will precede the world dominance of the film educationally.

From the exclusive interpretation of the drama and literature, it has progressed through the various stages of the news weekly, the travelogue and the very satisfactory instrument of miscellaneous propaganda to geographical and scientific experiments.

The establishment here of the first cinema university is merely the first step towards the national employment of this method for general instruction. It has been proven to be more thorough, quicker and more comprehensive than those previously used.

As the seat of this expansion it naturally follows that Los Angeles will soon be the educational center of the new era. As such it will be distinguished on the West Coast. Was it clever bargaining or just good luck that handed the "fair city" so much for so little?

METRO PICTURES BUYS EXCHANGE

The New Jersey Metro Exchange has been sold to Metro Pictures Corporation by Herman F. Jans, who wil hereafter devote himself to the production of pictures for the state rights market.

CURRENT REVIEWS "THE RIGHT OF WAY"

"The Right of Way", the Metro production starring Bert Lytell, proved so popular that T. L. Tally held it over a week at his Broadway (L. A.) Theatre.

The story which is by Sir Gilbert Parker is considerably more interesting in its original form than picturized.

Mr. Lytell s work further demonstrates his remarkable versatility, but the film drags as the result of too much sameness throughout.

Gibson Gowland gives a satisfactory performance as the French Canadian Backwoodsman.

Others in the cast are Leatrice Joy and Antrim Short.

Jack Dillon directed the production.

"THE TOLL GATE"

"The Toll Gate", Bill Hart's last, is a swift moving melodrama of the usual Hart brand.

It depends upon his well known "two gun" business to get over, but it is full of suspense and thrills.

Anna Q. Nilsson plays the only female role convincingly, and Baby Hendricks adds much heart interest with his unusually natural work.

"ALL OF A SUDDEN PEGGY"

"All of a Sudden Peggy", is a clever, swift moving little farce, ably directed by Walter Edwards.

Marguerite Clark in the title role provides much entertainment, and the story situations while rather old, are saved by several "different" turns.

Jack Mulhall plays the male lead in a perfectly satisfactory manner, and Lillian Leighton is delightful as Mr. O'Mara. We have not seen a more refreshing characterization recntly.

Orral Humphrey manages the eccentric comedy role with ability.

Mr. David Mitchell, branch manager of the Special Pictures Corporation, located in Washington, D. C., died March 18th. Mr. Mitchell was formerly of the United Picture Theaters.

The Famous Players Sales Company will distribute Tyrad Pictures, Inc., in the New York, Albany and Buflalo territory.

Southern theatres which have been closed on account of the influenza epidemic are re-opening.

C. F. Parr has been appointed division manager of the Salt Lake and Denver territories for the United Pictures Exchanges.

Republic branch office managers are to be included in the second annual convention of the Selznick managers. It will be held beginning April 5th at the Astor Hotel, New York City.

Character Pictures Corporation will feature Paul Gilmore in a series of special productions.

Incorporation papers for $100,000.00 have been filed for the Ore-Col Film Company. The incorporators are A. D. Frost, J. E. Frost, and O. D. Woodward.

Douglas Fairbanks announces that he has purchased an original story by Louis Weadock which may be produced in the near future.

MAJOR FILM COMPANY SECURES INDIAN DRAMAS

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

R. DALE ARMSTRONG

R Dale Armstrong, familiarly known to his friends as 'Army", holds the always enviable position of the motion picture pioneer. In fact he started his cinema career in 1907, at which time he wrote scenarios for old Biograph, and incidentally David Wark Griffith. Six years followed with the American Film Company as scenario editor, and then he became connected with the Amex Company at San Diego in the same capacity.

There passed five years during which time Mr. Armstrong cranked the camera for Mack Sennett, and then about three years ago he was engaged by the Toyo Kaisen Kaisha Company to produce and direct "A Dream of the Orient" in Japan.

While on shipboard going over he met Wheeler Dryden, who is today with Pandora, starring in "The Crucifix of Destiny" under Mr. Armstrong's direction.

The story's director is also its author. In fact he wrote it ten years ago, and has ever since held it awaiting condition favorable to its perfect presentation.

There are few motion picture directors who have to their credit so many years of study along such various lines relative to their position.

Samuel Goldwyn left last week for Europe.

Marie George is playing Marie in "Madame X."

F. H. Price visited Philadelphia and Washington last week.

Baby Virginia Brown recently suffered a severe injury to her right hand.

May Foster has signed with Goldwyn in the all-star cast of "Milestones".

Lieut. J. V. Murray is "Sir Galahad' in the curent Samuelson production at Universal.

Dick Freeland is the doctor in Marshal Neilan's latest production, "Never Get Married'.

Louise LaMont again appears in her Parisian Novelty act this time at Clune's Broadway.

The Barker Company entertained the Lasky Company at Truckee recently. They say the evening was profitable?

C. A. Meade, Secretary of the C. B. Price Company, Inc. recently attended the meeting of State Right Buyers which convened in Chicago.

A new camera, the Wilart, has appeared which claims to combine the desirable features of the Bell and Howell and the Pathe It is being handled by the Calmy Bros.

Bertram Bracken has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer to direct Anita Stewart in her First National production, title of which has not yet been announced.

Tom Bates is renewing old friendship in Riverside, Cal., in which city 20 years ago he was proprietor of the Bates Stock Company, a theatrical troup.

V. E. Hampton, formerly of the Famous Players Lasky forces, has accepted the position of the Chief Accountant of the sales forces of the Special Pictures Corporation, H. W. Hellman Bldg.

PICKUPS BY THE STAFF

THE "MYSTERY "SOLVED

In answer to Mr. Chas. Ostey's sorrowful plea for the return of his brain child, in the last issue, the Maurice Tourneur Company responds that said "Mystery in the Mountain' refuses to stay with Mr. Ostey at 704 Traction Ave. and repeatedly returns to that scenario department with the postmaster's word that Charles does not hang out at that address. However, his scenario is collectable at any time and it's removal will be appreciated.

Ah! truly the printed word is powerful. When we consider how much more our printer accomplishes in a few moments than our stenographer in more time, we are overcome.

Has anyone else a "mystery" to solve? We're in the business.

FIRST SHOWING OF VIDOR'S LATEST

King Vidor's latest picture, "The Family Honor" is to have its first Los Angeles showing Easted Sunday at the Kinema, and motion picture fans of all kinds, are to have the privilege of seeing what Mr. Vidor declares is the best picture he has ever made.

Those who saw "The Turn in the Road," with which this young director sprang into fame last year, will want to see "The Family Honor."

The ties that bind brother and sister together are made of pure, unselfish devotion that has perhaps received too little appreciation from author and playwright. Yet it is something that come very close to the heart of every man or woman who has a brother or a sister. It is this affection upon which King Vidor has founded the appeal to "The Family Honor" a story of sisterly devotion as is seen in Beverly Tucker's brave, though single handed fight to save her wayward brother. Every sister who has prayed over the straying footsteps of a brother dear to her heart, respond to the brave struggle of this beautiful southern girl, whose ancestors have bequeathed her a code based upon family honor.

Every brother who has been blessed with the helping words of a sister will love Beverly Tucker, which is played by Florence Vidor.

It is said the production is marked by the high standard of work that is repidly becoming associated with King Vidor's name, and that the photography is beautiful, some of the river shots being exceptional.

The scenario is by William Parker, well known Los Angeles nawspaperman, from an original story by John Booth Harrower. The photography is by Ira Morgan, A. S. C.

Millie Davenport is again cast with Vivian Rich. It is her twelfth week at Fox.

Helen Wright is with Irent Hunt at Dacid Trattner Productions, Long Beach.

Director Fred A. Kelsey started the third of the Miriam Michelson stories Wednesday.

Mollie McConnell the wife of Sherwood MacDonald, the director, is recovering from a serious illness.

Paul Hurst and Hedda Nova, as guests of the University of Southern California, addressed the student body last Friday on "Some Experiences in Pictures." On Tuesday of this week they will address the Los Angeles Advertising Club.

Fred A. Kelsey, who has commenced the direction of twenty-six two reel comedy dramas starring Irene Hunt of the David Trattner Production Company at Long Beach, suffered minor injuries when he was knocked down by an automobile while on location.

STUDIO SALON ENTERTAINMENT

A program was presented at Marion Warde's last studio salon on Saturday evening, March 27th. La Gazella, late of the eastern vaudeville time gave one of her dancing acts; Margery Lake entertained with clever singing numbers; Mme. Theo Ysaye Daumery, Belgian actress recited in French an incident of the late war; M. Paul Jones and the Dixie Trio gave banjo numbers; Elenor Fenelon sang and George Allan gave song and dance numbers.

Dancing was one of the features of the evening.

C. NORMAN HAMMOND

"THE CONFESSION" AT AUDITORIUM

"The Confession," by Hal Reid, and filmed under the direction of Bertram Bracken, is showing this week at Clune's Auditorium.

The theme is of the great Canadian northwest, where men are rough and strong and nature is in her full glory, provides a setting of rare beauty and appeal. A series of the strangest and most tragic events which ever beset the career of any one man is pictured in the story of Father Bartlett. Henry Walthall in the role promises much and it is said in this very difficult part, far surpasses any and all of his previous efforts as a screen star.

Jack Brehany, who does the presenting, is a pioneer in the profession that brings amusement to theatregoers. Before the days of the silver screen Brehamy was one of the best known figures in legitimate theatrical circles and when the golden age of cinematic entertainment dawned, he was one of the first to cast his lot with the new industry. Brehamy piloted the first super motion picture production to be projected in this country, "Quo Vadis." The Birth of a Nation" and "Hearts of the World" were both exploited under his direction.

Eddy Polo, directed by Edward Kull, is engaged in the fiftenth episode of "The Vanishing Dagger".

During a recent visit made by Bessie Love at Lincoln, she was the guest of Mrs. McKelvie, wife of Nebraska's governor.

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were married Sunday evening, March 28th, in Los Angeles. The plan to be co-starred soon in a big production.

Pareda, Spanish dancer, plays Pepa in the new Goldwyn picture, "The Woman and the Puppet", starring Geraldine Farrar, now being shown at the California Theatre.

SCENARIO CRITICISMS

By Wycliffe A. Hill

THE WOMAN WHO WON

Synopsis

By Joseph E. Mitchell, Claremont, Cal.

Pedro Chiarno has come to his fame through the efforts of his wife, Marie. It is her sacrifice that has made possible his career. Both are happy in their mutual love and endeavor, Marie, too, being a masterly artist.

Mrs. Silverton, a wealthy society woman, has her portrait painted by Pedro. She takes a fancy to him, as she has to many others, and decides to take him as her social hobby, her plaything.

As the days go by, Marie feels that there is something coming between Pedro and herself, and suspects that Pedro is becoming infatuated with his patroness.

Marie becomes desperate. She calls at the studio. The two women meet alone. Mrs. Silverton is polite and cruel. Marie realizes that she is losing Pedro, and pleads with Mrs. Silverton to give him up, but is only civilly put off.

No one has seen the portrait but Pedro and the critic. Marie pretends to go home, but returns. She looks at the portrait. It is the cruel features of the real woman idealized. She sees Pedro take the unresisting Mrs. S. in his arms. She is maddened, and, taking the brush, puts the true expression of Mrs. S. into the portrait, although she knows that it will ruin the career of her husband.

Marie contrives to again see Mrs. S. alone and induces her to look at the portrait. Mrs. S. is infuriated, swears vengeance, and destroys the picture. Pedro, deserted and ruined, returns to his wife, who opens her heart to him. Of course neither Mrs. Silverton nor Pedro know that the picture is repainted.

Criticism

Mr. Mitchell: First I am going to beg your pardon and then proceed to make an example of you. I said last week that I would have something to say this time that would be of interest to every one of my readers. So you need not feel badly, for almost everyone who is trying to sell scenarios to the studios, with the exception of the trained writers, are just as guilty as you are.

What you have written above is not a story. It is only an idea—around which a story may be built. In other words it is not a plot but just an incident.

"Pedro, an artist, loves his devoted wife, Marie. Mrs. Silverton, a society woman and patron, vamps Pedro. Marie pleads with her to give up Pedro and is repulsed. Mrs. Silverton's portrait is to be the masterpiece of Pedro. Marie slips into the studio when the portrait is about finished and changes the expression of the portrait to the cruel one which fits Mrs. Silverton. That august personage returns, sees the horrible likeness of herself—denounces Pedro—and leaves in a huff. Pedro and Marie then start all over to live happy ever afterward."

There is your story, Mr. Mitchell. Just as it is, without any further building up, it would probably make a good half reel. Now I will admit that if you were writing a magazine story, in which you described minutely all of the emotions of Marie and Pedro—the interesting dialogue between Pedro and Mrs. Silverton during the vamping process, and between Marie and Mrs. Vamp when the little wife is pleading for the love of her husband—the trembling of Marie's poor little lip—the teardrop that trickles from her eye—the big spectre of doubt that overwhelms her when she begins to feel herself slipping—the unresistible

ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

Installment Nine

A very effective change can be wrought in a person's appearance by the use of false teeth. The old method of blotting out teeth by darkening them is very good for the stage but on the screen it is impractical on account of its liability to "pick up."

Anybody with patience and the necessary material can make himself a desirable set of teeth. In preparing to do this, first purchase at a dental supply house the largest set of false teeth obtainable which are equipped with little rivets on the back of them. Also get some strips of thin hard rubber and some dental wax, the kind used for making impressions. With a pair of scissors cut off a strip of the rubber long enough to go around the outside of the teeth and just past the inside of the corners of the mouth. The width should be about one-half an inch. With a darning needle punch holes just where you want the teeth to go and where the rivets can be forced through. Set the teeth around this rubber in any shape you may desire. After the rivets are pushed through the rubber press the rubber well around the head of the rivets with a penknife.

Try them in the mouth over your own teeth to see if you have the desired effect. If your own teeth are far apart place a loop of copper wire not too thick around the roof of the mouth passing the ends between the teeth and fastening them to the rubber. This will act as a re-inforcement when the wax surrounds it.

Now take the dental wax and place it in hot water until it becomes soft. With the false teeth in the desired position take the wax and force it upon the roof of the mouth over your own teeth. Then work it around the false teeth and rubber in the same manner the gums would be. Press hard with the tongue to the roof of the mouth so as to get a good impression, for this causes suction which assists the teeth to stay in. This last operation should be done quickly as the wax cools rapidly.

The artificial gums can be smoothed around the false teeth by means of a hot wire or nail, but this should be done while the plate is in the mouth, for to take them out and do it will very likely cause the plate to warp and thereby lose the fit which must be perfect.

When the wax is cooled you may carefully remove the plate and wash it in cold water. Your set of teeth is now complete and can be put in and taken out at will. Great care should be taken not to put any undue strain on the teeth as the wax becomes very brittle and will easily crack.

Should you wish to make a pair of fangs such as are used in an ape make-up, take a block of celluloid and with a fine saw cut out two oblong pieces approximately the length and width of the fangs desired.

Then with the aid of an emory wheel or a file, you can shape them as desired, and by drilling two small holes in the top of each they can be wired to the rubber. This wire should be well concealed by wax in the shape of the gums. Irregular shaped teeth can also be made out of celluloid and be applied in the same manner.

A more simple way to make a set of teeth is to take a fair portion of the wax after softening and make an impression of the mouth, allowing the wax to come outside of the teeth. In other words, take the wax and cover your own teeth and the roof of your mouth with it, pressing it well up to get a good impression. Be sure that you do not bite through it; however, press it well against your teeth so that it will fill all crevices.

When this is done, take one of the false teeth between a pair of pliers and heat over a blue gas flame; then while the wax is still in the mouth and around the teeth place the tooth in position. On account of being hot it will bury itself in the wax. Continue with the rest of the teeth in the same manner, but be careful not to allow the hot tooth to touch the lips as it is liable to burn badly.

impulse to caress the vamp lady that seizes Pedro when his hand touches hers—and all that stuff, you would have a very interesting short story.

But remember: For a picture story you must have more plot and action—more complications—suspense—dramatic situations—and a whale of a climax. There are thirty-seven basic dramatic situations. You have just five in this and each one appears only in one guise. They are No. 17, "Effort to Obtain;" No. 29, "Loss of a Loved One;" No. 4, "Supplication;" No. 19, "Vengeance," and No. 2, "Lost Loved One Recovered."

You must give your characters something more to do—more action—interesting action too. Get in some more complications—early in the story. Spend more time on your stories, folks. Do not try to "dash" one off in an evening. It can't be done. If such was the case, moving picture producers would not be paying from five hundred dollars up for five-reel stories. I devote five or six weeks to the writing of a story sometimes—and re-write it a half dozen times. If I do not sell it, I lay it away for a time and write another one. Then I dig up one of my old ones, perhaps months later, and rewrite it—dress it up in new clothes. Every successful writer is the proud(?) possessor of a "boneyard" which is filled with stories that did not sell. Many of the corpses can be revived and made to cavort all over the place after they have lain dead for months—or even years. Do not get the idea that all motion picture producers are crooks and thieves, and give up all hopes, just because you do not sell them your first, second, or even tenth story. Every time you write a new one, or re-write an old one, you improve your ability. Go to the picture houses and study the films—note the amount of plot, action, and situations in the stories you see.

The nub of all this that I am trying to tell you is: Spend more time and work on your stories. I am saying this to the others who read this, as well as to you, Mr. Mitchell. They are just as guilty as you are. You would be surprised at the number of people who buy a copy of "Ten Million Photoplay Plots" from my publishers, take it away, read it over, and return in less than three days with a "masterpiece." That is what I am kicking about.

After you have introduced your characters, you must get acquainted with them—study them—follow them—don't miss a single move that they make, no matter how insignificant. Put yourself in their places—imagine what you would feel inclined to do under the circumstances—describe it all in detail. You will be surprised how much good material you will have when you get through. Then go over your story again—see if it dovetails everywhere. If it does not—prune it. If you haven't enough characters to develop all the dramatic situations that you want to introduce, add others. If on the other hand you have too many, eliminate some of them and see if you cannot give their action to some of your principals. Know how your story is going to end before you start—and then build up to it. That's the stuff, folks. Take your time. Rome wasn't built in a day, you know.

THE CRITIC

With the rapid development of the photoplay our friend the critic, finds himself considering an unusual and heretofore unnecessary question. That question is "When is a play not a drama?" The critic always has and still does weigh a picture on the scale of its dramatic value. Swift action, thrills, heroics and heart throbs—these constitute the old idea of a satisfactory photodrama.

Today, however, we are confronted with the fact that the film is the general instrument to be utilized in story translation. No longer is its field restricted. The human nature story with its character development, the farce with its clever turns, they are with us to stay. They have been occasioned by the public's demand and are being supported by the same agent.

Resultant of this the critic must recognize the fact that since henceforth screen art will treat literature as well as drama, he must discover for himself an additional gauge to combine with the one he has lately been so abusively overworking.

Personally we are glad that the old melodrama has somewhat subsided. Blood and thunder is nobly (?) cared for by police departments hired for that purpose. The weary fan desireth peace and a few evenings of cheerful human entertainment. He has surely earned them after his loyal years of obedience under the old regime.

The aged and rusty is ever ready to resign its place to development. Don't let's have our critics change the fundamentals.

WHAT ABOUT A CROSS-HOLLWOOD CAR LINE?

If you are an actor, note I said actor, not star, you have many times desired to get as quickly as possible from the corner of Hollywood and Cahuenga, in which vicinity you live, to that section of the city which contains several of our largest studios, namely South Hollywood.

To do so, since you are not a star, you board a red car, ride for thirty minutes towards town, transfer at Sanborn Junction, and ride back for a like space of time on Santa Monica Boulevard. Certainly this hour's sojourn to accomplish a trip which should occupy one-tenth that time, which is imposed by the powers that be who refuse to consider running a line across Hollywood connecting the two districts, is utter waste.

This distance is just too great to walk, and yet so inconsiderable as to render the squandering of an hour on its accomplishment maddening.

It is rumored that the construction of such a line has been held up because of some "Gentlemen's agreement" between the yellow and red lines not to infringe upon each other's territory. However, that does not relieve the situation. One of the companies should be in a position to do something for that greatest of all reasons—public convenience.

The profession wants a cross Hollywood carline!

April 6th the Los Angeles Examined published a statement by Mayor Snyder to the effect that members of the police force are subject to call twenty-four hours a day.

This rule is only right. Surely it is not expecting too much of the guardians of the public peace to require their accessibility in a case of emergency. This condition, together with the agitation which was so prevalent a few months ago and which resulted in the order forbidding members of the force to accept outside engagements, should render it at least inadvisable for a policeman to attempt to run a combination of businesses.

Several of these champions of justice, however, are working regularly in pictures. Oddly enough, the majority of the disobedient ones are motor cops.

The studios claim not to prefer them to regular "extras." Therefore, it looks almost as though some of our assistant directors were wont to break the sacred traffic regulations of Los Angeles. But, after all, who can blame the poor policeman for craving to satisfy the dramatic sense innate in all of us?

CAMERA! LAUNCHES UPON ANOTHER YEAR

Saturday, April 17th, Camera! will celebrate its second birthday. For two years it has grown with and for the profession. It has witnessed countless changes in the industry, many of which it has been responsible for.

Camera! looks out upon its third year with satisfied expectancy as regards the future, and with the comforting realization that its months of service to the studios has rendered it indispensible.

CURRENT REVIEWS

"THE FAMILY HONOR"

"The Family Honor", King Vidor's production had its first Los Angeles showing Easter at the Kinema. Florence Vidor does the role of Beverly Tucker in a perfectly satisfactory manner and Roscoe Karns' characterization of her brother, Dal, is remarkable. The very unusual part of the heroine's country sweetheart, however, is not played convincingly. It rather hampers the story.

"THE CONFESSION"

Undoubtedly "The Confession," which opened Easter at Clune's Auditorium, will have an unusual run. It is the kind of drama which always appeals to the American public. Furthermore, it is well cast, and although it has many technical slips, it holds the attention right through.

Henry Walthal, who plays Father Bartlett, the principal role, shows all his old form, and creates an unusual characterization.

Francis MacDonald, as his younger brother Tom, is more than satisfactory.

Margaret McWade, as the mother, provides the majority of "heart interest."

William Clifford does Joseph Du Mont with realism.

Others in the cast are Barney Furey, Margaret Landis, Henry Stanley, Johnny Revelle, Irene Adlwin and Rom Sing. Bert Bracken directed.

"THE WOMAN AND THE PUPPET"

"The Woman and the Puppet," at the California Theater, provides characteristic roles for Geraldine Farrar and Lou Tellegan. Mr. Tellegan is particularly well cast and rather appropriates the picture.

However, there is not another excuse in the world for the story, as it is occasioned by nothing and results in less. The greatest satisfaction it produces occurs near the end, when the manly hero wipes up the floor with the haughty Geraldine. The audience has been longing, for several reels, to do likewise.

The only others in the cast remembered are Dorothy Cummings and Bertram Grossby.

Reginald Barker directed.

"TREASURE ISLAND"

"Treasure Island", that well loved tale of our early youth written by Robert Louis Stevenson and produced for the screen by Maurice Tourneur was presented Easter week at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles, surrounded by all the old glamour and charm. It is to date the children's greatest cinema victory, and is pleasing to all.

Shirley Mason as "Little Jim" is delightful and plays her part like a regular little man.

Lon Chaney as the terrible villain stiffens our hair and shivers our spines sufficiently to denote a successful characterization.

Charles Ogle is more than loveable as John Silver, the good-hearted old pirate.

Some artistic shots assist the above characterization and render the picture a production of merit.

PRE-VIEW OF VIRGIN OF STAMBOUL

A pre-view of "The Virgin of Stamboul." Priscilla Dean's latest Universal production, was given at the Superba Theatre, Monday, April 5th. A large number of the profession was present, and several representatives of the press.

The picture was generally conceded to be Miss Dean's best. It is full of suspense and shows much outlay of effort and money in its sets and shots. Taken altogether the story is highly entertaining.

Wheeler Oakman plays the male lead satisfactorily, and Wallace Beery as the villian is up to his customary high form.

SOONER OR LATER

"Sooner or Later" is Tom Moore's current release at Clune's Broadway Theatre, Los Angeles.

The star's characterization of Patrick Murphy is both clever and refreshing. The story has the usual farce situations, but the suspense is good, and as a real mirth producer it goes over big.

Sena Owen plays the feminine lead. Wesley Ruggles directed.

WHERE TO FIND PEOPLE YOU KNOW

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE.

Jack Colburn

Jack Colburn made his theatrical debut in an amateur performance in Chicago not so awfully long ago.

But that preceded the time when about a year ago he arrived in Los Angeles to become a screen star. Coming to the Coast for that purpose is an experience shared by many, but Jack has seen unusual success for a nine-year old, as in that comparatively short time he has accomplished parts in seven big pictures.

He has been cast for "Athalie", Robert W. Chamber's novel, which is being made an all star feature by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

It is rumored that on completion of his work in this picture the youthful actor is to be starred.

Local interests have recognized his unusual ability and are enthusiastic over his success. As a result, Desmond's, Bullock's and Brock's are this week featuring a display of the lad's photographs.

It is conceded quite a feat for any actor to reach stardom within a year.

Mrs. Nora Tubbs is now in charge of the art needle department at the Metro Studio.

Harold Wendstrom is photographing "The New Henrietta" for Metro.

Frederick Bond, late of David Butler's company, is now supporting Irene Hunt of the David Trattner Productions.

Edwin Mortimer will direct Alice Lake in "The Outsider".

"Head and Shoulders", Viola Dana's next Screen Classics production, will be directed by Wm. C. Dowlan.

David Trattner, president of the Trattner Production Company is in New York.

Carol Holloway has joined the cast of "The New Henrietta" at the Metro Studio.

Eugene Walter, author of "Fine Feathers" has been engaged to co-operate with Maxwell Karger in its all star production at the Metro studio in New York.

Ray Eaton, Elliott Daly, and Cynthia Nichols, are supporting Irene Hunt of the David Trattner productions.

Al. E. Kelly will assist Wm. C. Dowlan in the direction of "Head and Shoulders".

George Hernandez has returned from Calistoga, where he was on location with the Humanity Film Company last week.

George Sheldon Smith is playing one of the leads in "The Crucifix of Destiny". Mr. Smith will be remembered as one of the principals in "The Adventures of Ruth" serial, in which Ruth Roland starred.

James O'Neill is second heavy with Harry Carey under the direction of Lynn Reynolds.

Burtie Johns, who created the part of Barrington in "The Prince Chap", has been re-engaged by William DeMille to do "Ted" in "Conrad in Quest of his Youth."

Ann May has been selected by Charles Ray as leading woman for "Peaceful Valley", his First National production.

Robert Gordon, Blackton star, has been loaned to Vitagraph for the production of "Dollars and the Woman" with Alice Joyce.

NEW YORK STAFF WRITER AT FOX

Edythe Fink of New York, formerly with Norma Talmadge, recently came to California with the Selznick staff of writers. She has completed her latest production "Stop That Man" for Owen Moore, and is now located, at the Fox studios writing continuity.

HARRY NORTHRUP RETURNS

Harry S. Northurp, who has been in Santa Barbara the past four weeks, has returned to Los Angeles.

Mr. Northup played the heavy in "The Blue Moon" for the American, under the direction of George Cox.

GRANDON TO DIRECT PITTS

Frank Grandon has been secured by Brentwood to direct Zasu Pitts in the forthcoming production entitled "The Little Widow". Mr. Grandon has formerly directed Mary Pickford, Petrova, Marie Doro, Jack Pickford, Anne Pennington, Henry Walthal, Gail Kane, Doris Kenyon, and Helen Ware.

The best part of a year under the personal direction of Ferdinand Pinney Earle—certainly a tribute to that most immortal of poets—Omar Khayyam!

For several months this unusual production of "The Rubyiat," involving a new and remarkable process which will enhance the realism of the poem has been under way. Mr. Earle has gathered around himself a remarkable staff to confer with him on artistic, historical and technical details.

The company which recently incorporated plans to take all the time necessary to insure absolute satisfaction.

The cast itself will commence work within the next two months, after which three more are being allowed for the production's completion.

Mr. Earle whose remarkable method of combining motion painting and fragmentary sets predicts a revolution both artistic and technical, is, in his quietly enthusiastic manner perfecting each detail of this classic which promises to be a combination triumph of the drama and literature, of the near future.

Ethel Ritchie and Jennie Lee are now appearing in a Universal two-reeler entitled "Two from Texas."

Emile DeRuelle, formerly with the Fox Company in New York, is now with Robert Thornby as assistant director.

BENEFIT DANCE AT THE DUG-OUT.

A benefit dance was given at the Dug-Out Saturday evening, which was enjoyed by a large number of the profession. The proceeds were devoted to the cause of the Society of Anti-Vivisection.

A pioneer not only in motion picture presentation, but in the entire amusement field, Jack Brehany comes to Los Angeles with another of his dramatic screen presentations, "The Confession," which according to critics should be an excellent attraction and is expected to break a few box office records.

More than one feature attraction has failed to receive its due amount of appreciation from the theatre going public because of the fact that those who had the handling of it were not big enough for the job.

It takes a broad minded, clear visioned master showman with ability to feel the pulse of the public, to successfuly handle the destinies of a special attraction. Mr. Brehany has proven himself to be a man of this type.

His association with "The Birth of a Nation," "Quo Vadis," "Hearts of the World," and many productions of lesser fame owe a great measure of their success as box office attractions to the foresight of Mr. Brehany.

Colleen Moore is at work on a Marshall Neilan production, in which she has a leading feminine role.

The biggest set ever built on a stage is the cathedral interior erected at the Goldwyn Studios for "Earthbound." It is 240 feet long and 90 feet wide, with height in proportion. The crucifix is 17 feet high.

HARRY L. SOLTER DIES.

Howard M. Mitchell is in receipt of a letter from the sister of Harry L. Solter to the effect that he recently passed away in El Paso, Tex., while en route to Los Angeles. Mr. Solter was the husband of Florence Lawrence, and will be remembered as directing Mary Picking and other big stars.

June Mathis, is preparing the script for "Hearts are Trumps."

Albert Shelby LeVino is working on the scenario of "The Mutiny of the Elsinore."

Charles Ray has purchased Booth Tarkington's "Ramsey Milholland" for future screening.

W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro, recently visited the West Coast studio. He left for New York Tuesday.

Anna Q. Nilsson on finishing at Selznick with Eugene O'Brien in "The Figurehead," will spend a few days at Arrowhead.

Russell Simpson, who is playing a feature role in Edgar Lewis's "Lahoma," is contemplating a trip to Alaska this summer.

"A Splendid Hazard", the Dwan production picturized from the Harold MacGarth novel has been shipped to New York for release.

Frank Kingsley is assisting Wesley Ruggles in the direction of Louise Glaum's new J. Parker Read, Jr's production. Charles Stumar is behind the camera.

Finis Fox of the Metro Studio has discarded his crutches which he has been compelled to use since injuring his foot in an automobile accident two months ago.

Director Edward Sloman making the Jack London pictures for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., is in San Francisco arranging locations for his next production, "The Mutiny of the Elsinore".

Governor William D. Stephens of California spent Monday visiting the Goldwyn Studios at Culver City. The governor and his party were escorted through the studio by Abraham Lehr, vice-president.

The Marshall Neilan Company is rapidly taking on the appearance of a Hibernian army. The general staff now includes such noble descendants of St. Patrick as Agnes Ayres, Marjorie Daw, Wesley Barry, Barney Sherry, Pat O'Malley, "Buck" Ewing, Bill Lenihan, Walter MacEvoy, Harold Barry, Jack McDermott, Eddie O'Hara and now it is said Colleen Moore is soon to be enlisted. ART OF MAKEUP

By Cecil Holland

Installment Ten

In last week's issue we dwelt on the use of dental wax in making sets of false teeth. Before we pass on from this subject it will be good to mention how useful it can also be as an aid in producing a glass-eye effect.

In the old days a glass-eye (or dead-eye, as often termed) was effected by the use of half a walnut shell smoothed and painted to represent an eye. This is very effective in long shots, but we must always be prepared for that deadly close-up which has no mercy and would expose every defect. Therefore it is up to us to reproduce the real thing as nearly perfect as possible.

Since we are in this case dwelling on the subject of the glass eye, let us use a real one. The walnut shell can be usd over the eye. A glass eye is too small, so we must add something to the edges of it to make it larger. Here the dental wax comes to our aid. Soften a little in hot water and press it out flat in the shape of a lozenge and a little larger than a walnut shell.

Take the glass eye and while the wax is still soft, press it in the center, working the wax with the fingers well around the edge. With a knife carefully remove the wax from the inside of the glass eye. This will make room for the eye-lid to work under, but be very careful how you handle the eye as it is very easily broken.

When the wax is set trim the edges and make the shape correct upon an emery wheel. When completed this should be as easily held in the eye as a monocle. Now take putty and model the eye-lids around the glass eye. When this is done place a little spirit gum around the edge of the wax and fasten into position. Take more putty and work around from the putty eye-lids down onto the face in all directions gradually working away to nothing, making a perfect blend. Red should be added to the putty to prevent glare.

Then proceed to make up in the usual manner. Line the artificial eye as you ordinarily would. Don't let the putty appear to be other than your own flesh.

To make up for Death requires considerable time and thought. First secure a real skull for a model. Supply yourself with about a pound of nose putty, a set of large false teeth upper and lower, some wire, a ladies white silk stocking and a black cowl.

The idea is to reproduce the skull over your own face. Start with the upper set of teeth. Set these regularly upon a strip of hard rubber as described in the last issue. At the ends of the rubber attach a wire long enough to reach over the ends of the ears. Paint the upper lip and the sides of the face with spirit gum. Place the teeth over the lip so that the lower edge follows the lip. Press this well against the spirit gum and fasten the wire to the ears.

Now take the lower teeth fastened upon the hard rubber in the same manner with the wire on the ends also, but with an additional heavier piece of wire (such as a hairpin) fastened in the center and so constructed that it will hook over the lower lip and teeth to take off the weight. Apply these in the same manner.

Take the silk stocking and cut off the upper end. This should be placed over the top of the head covering all the hair.

Knead the putty well and start modeling the lower jaw, working the putty well up between and around the teeth. Continue modeling upward, covering the rubber and wires well with the putty. Build the bridge of the nose and over the eyes well out so as to make your own nose disappear as much as possible. Cover the stocking with putty and blind all carefully. Throw heavy shadows in eye-sockets and blacken the part of your nose that shows with burnt cork. All other cavities and hollows can be shaded with dark brown. Cover the putty with yellow flesh paint and blend well with the shadows.

The cowl should be pinned to the silk stocking just forward of the open hole on top, leaving a big expense of apparent skull bone. Bring the cowl down the side of the head covering the ears and pin under the chin.

Black silk gloves and stockings should be used upon the hands and feet with the bones painted on them with a cream-colored paint. The cowl should cover the rest of the body.

You will find this make-up very effective. Should it be required that the skull talk, the mouth movement must be exaggerated, as ordinary talking does not make the jaws move sufficiently.

NEW SCENARIO FEATURE

In the interest of Camera!'s many scenario students, it is planned that Wycliffe Hill, author of the remarkably popular scenario plot building and criticism features, continue his instructive articles along the lines of continuity writing.

In taking up this issue, Camera! would like to hear from you, its subscriber. If you consider that this suggestion would prove beneficial to the "hopeful" writer, drop us a line to that effect. Moreover, if you have what you regard an idea as good or better along this line, do not hesitate to enlighten us.

This is the scenario writer's department; therefore, it is his prerogative to assist in making it more helpful to himself.

THE "TIMES" AGAIN

"If the late Robert Louis Stevenson did not turn over in his grave it was not the fault of Maurice Tourneur and those who abetted him in the production of "Treasure Island," now being shown on the screen at a theater in Los Angeles. The thousands of readers, both boys and men, of the greatest pirate classic ever written will have some startling surprises if they should chance to drop in in the hope of a treat. They will find a namby-pamby girl cast for the immortal character of Jim Hawkins, the juvenile hero of the last quarter of a century, and so many changes in the situation of the plot, according to the fancy of Tourneur, that it may be questioned if many remain for the last and the greatest jolt of all. This is the finale, when sweet-faced Jim, confidingly laying his hand on the arm of Long John Silver, reads him a moral lecture, saying, 'Honesty is the best policy, you will find, Long John!' Why did not Mr. Tourneur affix a title like 'The Pirates Foiled, or Little Jim's Triumph' to his claptrap production instead of trading on the name and reputation of a story that has been deemed a masterpiece since the day it was written?"

The above is an editorial triumph of the Los Angeles Times! It occurs to us that a publication must be pretty hard up for ideas when it has to hit Los Angeles' greatest industry in such a small manner, to fill its editorial columns.

This, however, is symbolic of the Times. For some reason or other it has succeeded in "getting by" for some time with unspeakable insults to the profession and its accomments.

As for the insipid criticism above, we'll wager that Stevenson in all his glory never made "Treasure Island" live for his child readers with one-half the realism that Maurice Tourneur's screen story does.

Today's youngsters find cinema interpretations slightly more attractive than dusty novels of a century ago.

Try again, Mr. Editor.

PROJECTION—REJECTION—DEJECTION

Little Marjorie Yeager pulled a good joke. Seeing Mr. Kolker go into the Projection Room.

"Mother, can I go in the Rejection Room?"

"No, dear, that is not the Rejection Room. That is the Projection Room."

"Oh! I see. The DEJECTION Room!" as Mr. Kolker came out.

Arangements are now being made for the local exhibition of "Sex", Louise Glaum's, J. Parker Read, Jr., production.

Director J. A. Howe has started work on a new Rainbow Comedy entitled "Stripes and Stars". Billy Engel and Jessie Fox are featured.

Jack Purvis who is being featured by Wade Productions.

Mr. F. E. Benson, Mary Pickford's manager has purchased a home on North Serrano St. which he will occupy in the very near future.

Vitagraph has doubled its technical staff to take care of its increased production and to construct sets on the additional ten acres just purchased.

J. Perrin Willis and Mrs. Emily Dowe, president and vice-president, respectively of the Youngdeer Productions, are visiting in the city from up north.

James Youngdeer, director general of the Youngdeer Productions, will begin the filming of the plot proper of "Watuska," the prologue of which is about finished.

Francis Edmonds formerly of the Youngdeer Productions has purchased a film company of her own and has gone to San Francisco, where she will produce 7 reel society dramas.

Marion H. Kohn, head of Marion H. Kohn Productions, Inc. has been made an honorary fire chief of Los Angeles.

Mr. Kohn is one of the pioneers among California film men for fire prevention.

RED CROSS FILMS FROM AFRICA

The gratifying results of an expedition of a force of cameramen from the American Red Cross into Northern Africa were shown yesterday at a screening of the films just received by the Bureau of Pictures, 220 West 42nd., Street.

The expedition under the direction of Capt. Merle Lavoy set out from Paris some six weeks ago for the rim of the desert. That no time was spent in idleness is evidenced by the great amount of unusually interesting footage received in this the first consignment, and the variety of scenes and subjects shot in this region hitherto practically uninvaded by the camera.

The shipment embraces a multitude of scenes of life in the Algerian Sahara both on the wind-swept sands and in the peaceful shade of the oasis. Then there are street scenes in Algiers, Tunis, Kairouan and other settlements, photographed from the tops of buildings and from the Sacred Camel Towers; interiors of mosques and market places; homes of squalor and oriental luxury.

Included also are unusual shots of the natives at their devotions—never before photographed according to the statements of the most aged of the sheiks. The domestic life is interestingly picturized, and altogether the footage which has just arrived constitutes a panoramic visualization of the Saharan region.

Director Waddell has information from the Paris office of the American Red Cross that the shipment just received is the forerunner of others to come in as rapid succession as possible.

KATHLEEN KIRKHAM ENTERTAINS KIDDIES AT EASTER PARTY

Kathleen Kirkham gave a novel Easter party to the children in her neighborhood, in which, of course, the traditional egg hunt and egg rolling contest on the lawn figured as one of the chief attractions. The most novel feature, however, was a large papermache egg which, when opened, was found to contain one of the youngsters dressed as a fairy, who distributed candy eggs containing Kathleen's picture to all of the little guests.

Hedda Nova is now at Laguna Beach with Paul Hurst filming "Byrd of the Dawn."

Frank Keenan sends word from New York that his son-in-law, Ed Winn, is just opening with his own company.

Harry Weil claims the distinction of being the only assistant to remain eight years with the same director. Mr. Weil is with Frank Lloyd at Goldwyn's, filming "Madame X." They filmed "Les Miserobles" and "The Tale of Two Cities" several years ago.

Kathleen Kirkham will soon be at the head of her own company, producing "Kirkham" pictures.

Charles Eyton, general manager of the Lasky Studio, has received word from Walter Edwards, director, who is vacationing in Honolulu, to the effect that he will return in a month or so and will probably take up his directorial work at the Lasky plant once more.

Percy Challenger has finished his engagement at the Brentwood, under direction of Henry Kolker, in "Heart of Twenty," playing the important role of "Henry Higginbotham."

May Walters has returned from Sonora, and finished her scenes in "The Midlanders," under the direction of Ida May Park and Joseph de Grasse, in which she played the actress, "Ada Norman."

THE SCENARIO MARKET

This feature is for the guidance of scenario writers who have something to sell, but who do not know just where to take it. CAMERA! keeps this column for announcements by the various studios. Some of the matter stands from week to week as a reference guide. It will be noted that many of the studios do not wish scenarios submitted by any one; some want synopses only; others wish the continuity written.

As the difficulties of the past year in regard to the submission of scenarios no longer exist, it is safe for any one with a good idea to send scenarios to any company mentioned in this column. While this paper is not responsible for the use or misuse of scenarios by the companies listed, it believe that any scenario sent to any of the companies will receive honest and prompt treatment. Any action to the contrary will receive full publicity if reported to this office.

How to Judge the Safety of Securities

"It is a great mistake to believe that particular classes of bonds, such as bonds of railroads, are the best to invest in, for very often much safer bonds yielding a greater income are found among securities of public service and industrial corporations. Don't base your judgment solely on the type of business."

Magazine of Wall Street, Nov. 29, 1919

A FEW years ago some men who neglected the above advice invested practically all their money in high-grade railroad bonds. The income tax made these bonds depreciate in price if not in value. Had part of these funds been placed in high-grade hydro-electric securities, such as San Joaquin Light & Power 6's, due 1950, and Pacific Gas & Electric First Preferred Stock, this loss could have been avoided to a large extent. Diversification of industry, as well as of company, is a rule we have followed in all our recomendations. Write, call or telephone for our latest list of securities. You will be surprised to see how greatly you can diversify your investments and still have securities exempt from all California personal property taxes.
